A Pauper Artist.

In a museum attached to two almshouses at Kirkleatham, England, is a wonderful carving of St. George and the dragon out of a single block of boxwood, the work of a poor prisoner, and it is valued at £2,000. It is said that this piece of carving was the cause of a wager being once laid in a dispute as to its entirety. To prove that the work was one single piece of carving it was plunged into a pot of boiling oil and allowed to remain for hours. All doubts were set at rest when it was withdrawn and found to be still complete. The prisoner who completed this marvelous piece of work used an ordinary penknife only.

Locking His Door.

A Philadelphia traveling man was on a business trip through Alabama and one night found himself stranded in a wretched little town with only one slipshod, miserable hotel. His "room" for the night was the end of a hall, with a sheet hung up to screen him from view. In the middle of the night he woke up with his head hanging out over one end of his cot and his feet over the other, while a violent draft was blowing the hanging sheet in all directions. He called for the housekeeper. "What do you want with the housekeeper?" came a voice from somewhere in the darkness. "I want a paper of pins to lock my door with."

The Coast Line of the Pacific.

Although the Pacific covers more than half tha surface of the globe and has an area estimated roughly at 90,000,000 square miles, yet its coast line, even including that of the Indian ocean, is but 47,000 miles, or about 2,000 miles less than that of the Atlantic. The shores of the Atlantic are very deeply indented by large seas, of which the Baltic and Mediterranean are the most remarkable. Besides these, the greatest lateral seas and gulfs in the Atlantic are the gulf of Mexico, Caribbean sea, Hudson bay and tha bay of Biscay. If we take from the Pacific the red sea, Arabian sea and bay of Bengal, which are part of the Indian ocean, we leave it with a remarkably straight coast line, with the exception of a few deep indentations on the coast of Asia.

It is owing to a free impenetration of land end water end consequent ease of communication between one country and another that the most civilized nations of the world, with few exceptions, have lived and now live on tha shores of the north Atlantic and its lateral seas.

Bob Toombs' Way.

General Robert Toombs was as impulsive as he was courageous. Once, in the midst of e hot political campaign, a stump orator said something about the general's arrest by Robert E. Lee for insubordination, frightfully distorting the incident. Toombs wrote one of the hottest letters of his life and was about to seal it when a friend entered his office and, seeing him much agitated, inquired the cause. The letter was handed to him to read, and when he had finished it he remarked, "You don't intend to send that to him?" "I do," said Toombs. "Better wait till tomorrow and think it over, general." "Never, sir! I have known him to be a liar, a blackguard and a thief all his life, but never before had cause to tell him so. The opportunity is now offered, and I wouldn't miss it for the senatorship. Wait till tomorrow? Think it over? That is to throw away the chance of a lifetime. Strike while the iron is hot, sir! Bob Toombs is the iron! Bob Toombs is hot! Toombs will strike!"—New York Press.

Have an Aim in Life.

Have you no aim in life? Then get one. Study over what it shall be—think, and think deeply. Pray that you may have an understanding of your work in the world, that you may see your beckoning star and that a knowledge may come to you of how to build a highway to it. The materials and tools for the building of this highway lie right at hand. They are not to your liking perhaps—you may call them trouble and bad luck—but just shut your teeth together, shut your eyes, too, if necessary, and hold your breath. Then get a good grip on the situation, and then work with it. And the wonders that will grow out of doing little things well and the understanding of many things that will come to you will make you "stand amazed" indeed.—Maxwell's Talisman.

Applied Science.

When James Russell Lowell was minister to England, he was guest at a banquet at which one of the speakers was Sir Frederick Bramwell. Sir Frederick was to respond to the toast, "Applied Science." It was long after midnight when the toast was proposed, and several speakers were still to be called. Rising in his place, the scientist said:

"At this hour of the night, or, rather, of the morning, my only interest in applied science is to apply the tip of tha match to the side of the box upon which alone it ignites and to apply the flame so obtained to the wick of a bedroom candle."

A moment later Lowell tossed a paper across the table to him bearing these two lines:

Oh, brief Sir Frederick, would that all could catch
Your happy talent and supply your match!

A Pair of Misers.

Mr. and Miss Dancer were reputed the most notorious misers in the eighteenth century. The manner in which this couple were found after death to have disposed of their wealth was even more strange than could have been their method of acquiring it. The total value was £20,000, which was thus disposed of: Two thousand five hundred pounds was found under a dunghill, £500 in an old coat nailed to the manger in the stable, £600 in notes was hidden away in an old teapot, the chimney yielded £2,000 stowed in nineteen different crevices, and several jugs filled with coin were secreted in the stable loft.

England's Magna Charta.

That shriveled parchment, the charter of English freedom, was saved, it is said, by the veriest chance from the scissors of a merciless tailor. Struck by the great seals attached to a piece of paper the tailor was cutting up, Sir Robert Cotton stopped tha man and gave him fourpence for tha document he would have destroyed. It is now in the British museum, lined and mounted and in a glass case, the seal a shapeless mass of wax and the characters quite illegible.—London Mail.

A gentleman who had grave doubts as to a servant's sobriety one day accused him of intemperance and as a test chalked a line across the floor and commanded him to walk along it.

The Story of a Discovery.

How many valuable inventions have been the result of pure accident, while in other cases men have puzzled their brains with study for a lifetime and brought forth nothing!

It happened one night that a big starch factory on the banks of the Liffey, near Dublin, took fire, and great puddles of starch and water were left outside.

Some calico printers who had been out all night and were quite tipsy came along toward morning, and one of them stumbled into one of the puddles. He found it so sticky that all his clothes stuck to him so fast that he had to stay in bed next morning till his wife soaked them out.

The man knew from his trade that the starch and water had formed a very powerful and valuable gum. He went back to the place of the fire and investigated, and the result was the discovery of the adhesive gum now used in sticking postage stamps and which has made many rich. But temperance lecturers need not know it.—Boston Globe.

A Pocket Handkerchief.

In a book which has been published on that never failing topic, the vagaries of the English language, the strange meaning of the word "pocket handkerchief" is described.

A "kerchief" (couvrechef) means a small piece of cloth made to put on the head, so that a "pocket handkerchief" means literally a small piece of cloth to cover the head, to be held in the hand, to be put in the pocket.—London

Hours and Luck.

As strong as the superstition of Friday is that concerning certain hours in European and oriental countries.

In Paris the superstition is so prevalent that an enterprising business is that of selling cards on which are printed the hours that should be avoided.

The famous Gambetta consulted a reader of cards as to the auspicious day for embarking on any important enterprise.

President Carnot was skeptical of such things, and he chose an unlucky hour for his journey to Lyons, where he was assassinated.—American Queen.

A Clever Fish.

The salmon seems to be gifted with much intelligence, or "hereditary foresight," as it is occasionally called, which is more particularly acute when danger signals are abroad, says William C. Harris in Field and Stream. They have been known, when congregated in the upper pools, to become frightened by poachers approaching them with net or spear and to immediately dash down stream to a distance of thirty miles in one night, not stopping until they had reached pools so deep that they could not be taken with the appliances of the poacher. They seemed to know that if they went higher up the stream their doom was sealed.

When coming from the sea in schools and on entering the estuary they have been seen with an old leader at the head of the school, the rest forming a triangle about two and a half feet below the surface of the water, and on calm days, guided by the old patriarch, they would swim around the fishermen's nets, never approaching them nearer then ten or twelve yards.

Standing an Egg on End.

Any fresh egg can, without being boiled, be balanced on either end by an, one possessing patience and a steady hand.

In order to save time the egg should be placed for a short time on the end upon which it is desired to balance it, so as to allow the yolk to settle; then both forearms of the person making the experiment should be rested on the edge of the table and the egg should be taken between the three fingers and thumbs of both hands and slowly turned around until the center of gravity is found. This experiment may at first require a little time, but after a little practice it will be found very easy to do. It would be well to try it first on the tablecloth and then on the bottom of a plate.

It is conceded, of course, that the present century is far more advanced than that of Columbus, so it is only to be expected that different ideas should have been formed, even as to the balancing of [illegible]

Grows In the Clouds.

So far as is known, the highest elevation at which flowers are found growing is 17,000 feet above sea level. The homely little plant which has the distinction of being the loftiest grower in the world is found on the upper slopes of the Himalayan mountains, near the line of perpetual snow. The season during which vegetation may appear above the surface in this region is less than four months in length.

A Scathing Retort.

An English lawyer who had been cross examining a witness for some time and who had sorely taxed the patience of the judge, jury and every one in the court was finally asked by the court to conclude his cross examination. Before telling the witness to stand down he accosted him with this parting sarcasm:

The witness leaned over from the box and quietly retorted:

AGRICULTURE IN WESTERN CANADA.

Its Grain Fields, Ranching Lands, Dairying Resources.

The Editor of the Wisconsin Agriculturist, who was one of a party of editors of agricultural papers, took a trip through Canada during the past spring, writes to his paper in the following strain:—

The reason of his visiting Canada was to satisfy himself that the reports coming to his paper regarding the wonderful resources of that country were accurate. In view of the wonderful settlement that was going on there, many from this country crossing the line in search of permanent homes, and in view of what he had heard in regard to conditions of soil, water, climate, topography, fuel, grasses, rainfall, markets, etc., and also the influence which these have had on the present and future agriculture, he deemed it necessary to make an extended trip through all of the above territory.

In speaking of the Province of Manitoba, he says:—

"The Province of Manitoba comprises within its limits the far-famed "grain-growing valleys of the Assiniboine and Red Rivers. Although "called the Prairie Province of Canada, Manitoba has large areas of forests, numerous rivers and vast water "expansions.

"The soil is a rich, deep, mould, or "loam, resting on a deep clay sub-soil. "It is well adapted to wheat growing, "giving a bountiful yield of the finest "quality, known the world over as "No. 1 hard wheat. During the past "ten years the growth of wheat and "other grains has steadily increased, "until now the production, by 35,000 "farmers, reaches 100,000,000 bushels. "Of the 23,000,000 arable acres in Manitoba, probably not one-half of it is "occupied. Cultivated grasses yield "about two tons per acre, and native "grasses a ton and a half.

"There can be no question but that "dairying will become a great industry throughout the north-west, and "especially cheese making, as the climate is favorable and similar to that "of Ontario.

"Crops grown are wheat, barley, "oats, flax, rye, peas, corn, for fodder, "brome, potatoes, roots, etc. The soil "is very fertile, and moisture ample. "The climate is good, and the growing "season, while not quite so long as in "Wisconsin, matures crops as the sun "shines much longer, rising about four "o'clock and shines until about nine "at night. One can easily read a newspaper at 10 p. m. The long days make "growth fast, and push crops to maturity ahead of frost.

"The ranching, the wheat growing, "and the mixed farming belts all cross "over Assiniboia. The yield and the "quality of wheat raised along the main "line of the Canada Pacific Railway, at "such places as Indian Head and its "allied districts, have become famous. "Its possibilities are shown by the "average of tests made at the experimental farm in 1902, when eleven varieties of the most suitable wheat, "sown on April the 15th, were cut in "[illegible] days, and yielded 4,314 pounds "of straw, and 43 bushels and 2 pounds "of grain per acre. Its mixed farming "area is excellent, its range cattle, "horses and sheep are the equals of any "seen in the north-west, and its treeless portion is underlaid with coal. "The town of Medicine Hat is heated "and illuminated with natural gas. "There are abundant deposits of brick, "pottery and fire clays."

Agents of the Canadian Government will be pleased to mail an Atlas to any one interested, and also all other information regarding railway rates, etc.

A BICYCLE PROPOSAL

BY JOHN WICKLIFFE GRAY.

Until that summer I had never believed that I was a timid man. But the happenings of a few weeks led me to the conclusion that I had my share and more.

A girl with blue eyes did it. As in most cases where a man has found himself face to face with himself, it was a woman who held the mirror.

It was the old story of scouting at love until I met the one girl, and then I wanted to propose. But what with the doubts that assailed me as to the probable reception of a proposal, and my new-born timidity, I could never gather together sufficient courage at the proper time to give expression to the thoughts that kept me awake at night. I carefully formulated plan after plan to rid my mind of its burden, but one after another they came to naught through my disgusting shyness—cowardice, if you will. I am half inclined to believe that Beatrice knew my condition all the time. But she had a keen sense of humor, and I dreaded that silvery laughter more than a whole regiment of regulars. She could grow serious in a moment, and it was this mood I liked best. But, until that sunny day, when my bicycle helped me through, I had always missed the point. It lacked but four days of my departure from the springs, and I knew to delay might mean to fail altogether.

Delay and defeat were the words that hummed through my brain like a sprocket-wheel as we spun down the lane that morning. We were out after an early breakfast, and on that short journey a-wheel I had determined to throw all my chances in the balance and find their intrinsic worth. Just how I was going to begin I had not determined, and I thought that for once I would leave the matter open for the seizure of the first opportunity.

The morning air was crisp and cool. The roadside flowers seemed nodding us a cheery good morning in the light breeze. Now and then from the trees came the call of a bird, and, making a shiny black streak in the air, a crow would bend his flight to a lonely tree in the fields, calling to his mate.

Bee and I had said little until we reached the broad pike.

"Want to race?" she called back to me from her point of vantage a few lengths ahead. Now I knew what that meant. Bee was the better rider, for instead of taking a course of indoor physical culture she had adopted golf, tennis and a bicycle as the most enjoyable method of obtaining exercise and health.

"Trying to tease," I said. "But go ahead. I'll do my best. Want to bet anything?"

"No, not when I am certain of the result," she laughed.

I grinned appreciation and asked: "How far?"

"The two mile post," she cried, and we were off.

Bee sprinted, and so did I. But the distance between us remained about the same, and precluded conversation, even had not the pace attained the [illegible] end.

Soon the sprockets were singing a steady song to pebbles that spun backward from the rubber tires. We were running at 20 miles an hour down the best piece of road in the section.

I settled to a steady speed, not quite my best, and Bee did the same, saving strength for the last half mile. The wind whistled a merry tune to the time we kept with our pedals. A covey of partridges fled with sharp chirps at our whirlwind advance. I felt and noticed little else beside the trim figure, with flying wisps of brown hair, just ahead of me.

Of a sudden Bee began to draw ahead of me.

"Put your heart into the game," she called back to me, with her head half turned as she spoke. She was laughing out of pure enjoyment of the exercise, and perhaps my probable discomfiture. My pride was nettled, and it must have increased my strength to a considerable degree. Soon I was close behind her, and with the wheels buzzing like mad things, I was even. One more spurt, and by a tremendous effort I was ahead!

"Get your hand in the game," I called back, paraphrasing her own slang. "My heart and your hand," I added by the force of an inspiration, "a match race!"

The second mile post was not more than a hundred yards ahead, and I was beginning to believe I should win. I had no time to look back, fearing a loss of my little gain.

But neither was to have the victory. Bee's front wheel advanced slowly, but surely, until it was even with my handle-bars, and as we arrived opposite the post, we were side by side.

It was a tie!

"You got your hand in," I laughed later under the trees where we were seated.

"Yes," she agreed.

"And my whole heart was in it," I added, cautiously.

The blue eyes looked into mine and seemed to read what was there. And then in the fear that my shyness would return, I said quickly, incoherently:

"Your hand, my heart, a match, the tie—Bee—" and—

Well, our bicycle will accompany us on the honeymoon, even though it be as excess baggage.

Profitable Investment.

In 1875 it was communicated to the British government that the Khedive Ismail Pasha, being in desperate need of money, was willing to sell his 176,602 shares of stock in the Suez Canal company at a fair price. Disraeli was then premier and he didn't hesitate a minute. England paid $20,000,000 for the khedive's holdings, or at the rate of $113.60 per share. Since then the dividends on its purchase have aggregated $24,000,000 and to-day the shares are selling at $700 each. This shows a profit on the transaction of $103,600,000.

Catarrh Robs Women of Health and Beauty. Pe-ru-na Makes Women Healthy and Beautiful.

Miss Amanda Johnson.

Miss Amanda Johnson, Fairchild, Wis., writes:

"I write to tell you how much Peruna benefited me. For a number of years I had pain in my head around my eyes, and I thought it was because my eyes needed treatment, so I went to an oculist and had glasses fitted to my eyes and wore them for some time, but felt no relief whatever. In fact, I felt worse than before, and came to the conclusion that the trouble was not with my eyes, but with my head and that it must be catarrh. As so many of my friends had used Peruna with benefit for this trouble, I thought I would try it. I was not sorry that I did so, for in a short time I began to improve, and in four weeks my eyes were in splendid condition, my general health was much improved and all the catarrh of the head was gone. I was glad to get rid of this trouble and am glad to endorse such a good medicine as Peruna."—Miss Amanda Johnson.

Miss Flora Hauser, 1032 S. New Jersey street, Indianapolis, Ind., writes:

"I think I must have been troubled with catarrh ever since I was very young, aggravated each time I caught a cold. This did not prove sufficiently serious to be obnoxious until last winter. Then my head and nose were so stopped up that I felt I must do something. Peruna was recommended to me by a friend. I used it for four weeks, and found to my relief that it cured me. I have not had a bit of trouble since. My head is clear, and I can safely affirm that Peruna cured me."—Miss Flora Hauser.

Prompt Decision.

The secret of getting through work is method. Order, it has been said, is God's first law. Let it be yours. Do not let your work accumulate upon your hands. It is not work that kills, but arrears of work. Work put off is work put on with heavy interest. "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof." It becomes intolerable if it be laid upon tomorrow.

If I may recommend you three rules for saving time and economising strength they shall be these: Answer letters, keep appointments, make up your minds. In the affairs of this life a prompt decision is often more important than a right decision. One man makes up his mind and acts, it may be, wrongly, but if so he finds out his mistake, corrects and retrieves it before another man has acted at all. It is possible to waste a great amount of time by thinking, and still more by talking over actions. First thoughts are sometimes wiser than second and generally wiser than third.—Contemporary Review.

No Chance of Confusion There.

"The trouble with our people," exclaimed the popular orator, "is that they too often confuse license with liberty."

"I don't know about other kinds of license," interrupted a thoughtful looking man from the audience, "but I can state emphatically that there is no confusion between a marriage license and liberty."

There were approving murmurs clear back to the rear of the hall.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

There was some mistakes? of attorneys made in the trial of a contest case from Winsor Township a short time ago, that would bare a little investigation by The Department of The Interior. If some of the attorneys did not know any better than to give their client the advice they did, they had better stop practicing law and get a job shoveling on the Soo line. Sir Philip Francis at Cards.

Francis, the Sir Philip Francis whom many ingenious critics have, in defiance of probability, insisted on identifying with the author of the letters of Junius, was an inveterate gambler. Cards dominated over the whole Anglo-Indian society of Calcutta in those days, and many a crime inflicted on the unhappy natives had its origin in the losses at the gaming table of their alien rulers.

When in India, it was the habit of Francis to spend every night in this amusement, and he found an able coadjutor at the card table in the wife of his colleagues, Lady Anne Monson, who was reckoned "a very superior whist player." Good fortune generally shone on the plans of Francis. About 1776 he was visited with "an extraordinary run of luck," so marked indeed that he had "actually won a fortune." Not Fatal.

No Matter What Doctors Say—We Know That Heart Trouble in Many Cases Can Be Cured.

There are seven main features of heart disease, viz.: (1) Weakness or Debility; (2) Rheumatism or Neuralgia; (3) Valvular Disorder; (4) Dilation; (5) Enlargement; (6) Fatty Degeneration; (7) Dropsy.

Documentary evidence will prove thousands of so-called "incurables" have been absolutely cured by Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure.

Patients often have no idea their disease is heart trouble, but ascribe it to indigestion, Liver Complaint, etc.

Here are some of the symptoms: Shortness of breath after exercise. Smothering Spells. Pain in Chest, left Shoulder and arm. Discomfort in Lying on one side. Fainting Spells. Nervous Cough. Swelling of Feet and Ankles. Paleness of Face and Lips. Palpitation. Nightmare. Irregular Pulse.

"I have great faith in Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and speak of its merits whenever opportunity presents. I can now go up and down stairs with ease, where three weeks ago I could hardly walk one block." One year later.—"I am still in good health; the Heart Cure did so much for me, that I find it a far greater medicine than you claimed it to be."—S. D. YOUNG, D. D., 607 North Pine St., Natchez, Miss.

The wild fruit crop bids fair to be of immence preportions in this locality this year. The wild strawberries and plumbs are now in blossom and with two weeks favorable weather we will not have to depend on the south and east for our summer fruit.

A. G. Arneson recieved word from his attorney N. Campbell on Friday evening, that he had won his contest case before the land office at Crookston. This was a case involving the title to the south half of south east quater of Sec. 36 in this Township, John A. Bouman of Eden Township was the contestant. Arneson settled on the land two years ago and has made it his home ever since that time.

Prompt Decision.

The secret of getting through work is method. Order, it has been said, is God's first law. Let it be yours. Do not let your work accumulate upon your hands. It is not work that kills, but arrears of work. Work put off is work put on with heavy interest. "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof." It becomes intolerable if it be laid upon tomorrow.

If I may recommend you three rules for saving time and economising strength they shall be these: Answer letters, keep appointments, make up your minds. In the affairs of this life a prompt decision is often more important than a right decision. One man makes up his mind and acts, it may be, wrongly, but if so he finds out his mistake, corrects and retrieves it before another man has acted at all. It is possible to waste a great amount of time by thinking and still more by talking over actions. First thoughts are sometimes wiser than second and generally wiser than third.—Contemporary Review.

No Chance of Confusion There.

"The trouble with our people," exclaimed the popular orator, "is that they too often confuse license with liberty."

"I don't know about other kinds of license," interrupted a thoughtful looking man from the audience, "but I can state emphatically that there is no confusion between a marriage license and liberty."

There were approving murmurs clear back to the rear of the hall.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Elias Stenerson is ciculating a petition for his appointment as postmaster of Crookston. His friends in this neck of the woods will hope to see him win out, and "get thare Elie".

There was some mistakes? of attorneys made in the trial of a contest case from Winsor Township a short time ago, that would bare a little investigation by The Department of The Interior. If some of the attorneys did not know any better than to give their client the advice they did, they had better stop practicing law and get a job shoveling on the Soo line. But the case hase more of the appearence of them knowin g, but giveing a poor laboring girl rong advice in the interest of a man of money, that wanted the land.

Sir Philip Francis at Cards.

Francis, the Sir Philip Francis whom many ingenious critics have, in defiance of probability, insisted on identifying with the author of the letters of Junius, was an inveterate gambler. Cards dominated over the whole Anglo-Indian society of Calcutta in those days, and many a crime inflicted on the unhappy natives had its origin in the losses at the gaming table of their alien rulers.

When in India it was the habit of Francis to spend every night in this amusement, and he found an able coadjutor at the card table in the wife of his colleagues, Lady Anne Monson, who was reckoned "a very superior whist player." Good fortune generally shone on the plans of Francis. About 1776 he was visited with "an extraordinary run of luck," so marked indeed that he had "actually won a fortune." Papa (severely)—Did you ask mamma if you could have that apple? Three-Year-Old—Yes, sir. Papa—Be careful now. I'll ask mamma. Three-Year-Old—Truly, papa, I asked her, but she said I couldn't have it.

Reassured.

Sick Man—Am I to take all that medicine? Wife—Yes, all of it. Sick Man—There's enough in that bottle to kill a donkey. Wife—No, there isn't, John, or the doctor wouldn't have prescribed it.

To be a successful wife, to retain the love and admiration of her husband should be a woman's constant study. Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Potts tell their stories for the benefit of all wives and mothers.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will make every mother well, strong, healthy and happy. I dragged through nine years of miserable existence, worn out with pain and weariness. I then noticed a statement of a woman troubled as I was, and the wonderful results she had had from your Vegetable Compound, and decided to try what it would do for me, and used it for three months. At the end of that time I was a different woman, the neighbors remarked it, and my husband fell in love with me all over again. It seemed like a new existence. I had been suffering with inflammation and falling of the womb, but your medicine cured that and built up my entire system, till I was indeed like a new woman.—Sincerely yours, MRS. CHAS. F. BROWN, 21 Cedar Terrace, Hot Springs, Ark., Vice President Mothers' Club."

Suffering women should not fail to profit by Mrs. Brown's experiences; just as surely as she was cured of the troubles enumerated in her letter, just so surely will Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cure other women who suffer from womb troubles, inflammation of the ovaries, kidney troubles, nervous excitability, and nervous prostration. I soon felt that my appetite was increasing, the headaches gradually decreased and finally disappeared, and my general health improved. MINNESOTA NEWS.

Fruit Exhibits.

The exhibit of Minnesota fruit in glass at the St. Louis fair, has been passed on the judges, although not as large as that of some other states, has been given first place for the condition of the fruit, and as being the best display of varities on exhibit.

The fruit exhibit was made by the state fair commission, in co-operation with the Minnesota Horticultural society. A. W. Latham, secretary of the latter society, superintended the collection and installation of the exhibit which occupies a space 40x18 feet in horticultural hall. Thomas Redpath of Wayzata will have charge of the exhibit during the season. The exhibit includes 600 plates of fruit, 200 of which are exhibited in glass refrigiator cases which have a tempature of 48 degrees. About 200 glass jars of fruit are shown.

The exhibit includes 75 varities of Minnesota apples, 25 kinds of grapes, 50 kinds of strawberries, 25 of plums, several kinds of peaches and pears, and several jars of raspberries, currants and cherries.

Early Entries.

Several entries for the Minnesota state fair next fall were made by exhibitors in several departments, the earliest in the spring that the Minnesota fair management has ever received entries from prospective exhibitors. During the past three weeks premium lists have been distributed to old exhibitors and a multitude of requests for premium lists have been received from persons who have never before exhibited at the Minnesota fair.

Entries have been received in the horticulture, agriculture and dairy departments, and some in the live stock department. Mr. Wornall of Missouri, a breeder of Shorthorn cattle, has not only made his entries, but has also engaged stalls for his herd, and rooms for himself at a St. Paul hoted, fearing a clash later in the season.

Will Plant Trees.

The state forestry board will plant in a few days in the nursery in the Pillsbury forestry reserve in Cass county approximately 5,000,000 pine and spruce seeds, and if the season is favorable it is estimated that at least 3,000,000 seedlings will result.

The seeds will be planted in rows five inches apart. Five seeds will be planted to every lineal inch, and it is estimated that at least three out of the five seeds will germinate. For several weeks after the plants come out of the ground they will be screened from the excessive heat of the sun by screens of lath and brush. After they are two years old, they will be taken up and planted in the reserve at the rate of 2,000 seedlings to every acre. There are 1,000 in the Pillsbury reserve, and the 3,000,000 will be more than enough to cover the reserve.

Railway Taxes.

The Minnesota gross earnings in 1903 of railroads doing business in the state were $66,898,755.42, or $509,608.93 more than in 1902, the taxes on these were nearly $2,000,000, about $50,000 more than in the previous year.

S. G. Iverson, state auditor, has received reports from all companies except the Great Northern and the Willmar & Sioux Falls, a branch of the Great Northern. From figures in the office of the state railroad and warehouse commission it is ascertained that the earnings of the Great Northern were appoximately $17,800,000, as compared with $16,754,263.48 in 1902, and that the earnings of the Willmar & Sioux Falls earned about $775,000.

The taxes on this amount at 3 per cent amounts to $534,000, as compared with $502,617.90 in 1902.

Dedication of Capitol.

Gov. S. R. Van Sant looks favorably on the plan to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of St. Paul, the dedication of the new capitol and the completion of the improvements of Fort Snelling in one event, and he will be very much pleased if the capitol will be finished in time to hold the triple celebration in October.

The governor says he has not looked up the law designating who is to direct the dedication of the new capitol, but he thinks that the matter will be harmoniously arranged through joint action of the state officers and the members of the capitol commission.

Goes to Alaska.

Hedley Redmyer of Tafte, Cook county, has accepted an offer from the government to go to Alaska on another reindeer expedition and will leave the latter part of June. He will be accompanied by two Finlanders. They will go to Bethel Mission on the Suskowin river, where the government has a corral of Siberian reindeer to be taken to the interior. From there they will take a herd of 300 head across the country, a distance of 1,300 miles, to Copper Center on the Copper river.

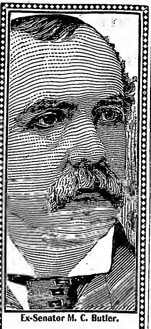
U. S. SENATOR FROM SOUTH CAROLINA

Recommends Pe-ru-na

For Dyspepsia and Stomach Trouble.



Ex-Senator M. C. Butler.

Catarrh of the Stomach is Generally Called Dyspepsia---Something to Produce Artificial Digestion is Generally Taken.

Hence, Pepsin, Pancreatin and a Host of other Digestive Remedies Have Been Invented.

These Remedies Do Not Reach the Seat of the Difficulty, Which is Really Catarrh.

Ex. U. S. Senator M. C. Butler from South Carolina, was Senator from that state for two terms. In a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Co., from Washington, D. C., says:

"I can recommend Peruna for dyspepsia and stomach trouble. I have been using your medicine for a short period and I feel very much relieved. It is indeed a wonderful medicine besides a good tonic."---M. C. Butler.

The only rational way to cure dyspepsia is to remove the catarrh. Peruna cures catarrh. Peruna does not produce artificial digestion. It cures catarrh and leaves the stomach to perform digestion in a natural way. This is vastly better and safer than resorting to artificial methods or narcotics.

Peruna has cured more cases of dyspepsia than all other remedies combined, simply because it cures catarrh wherever located. If catarrh is located in the head, Peruna cures it. If catarrh has fastened itself in the throat or bronchial tubes, Peruna cures it. When catarrh becomes settled in the stomach, Peruna cures it, as well in this location as in any other.

Peruna is not simply a remedy for dyspepsia. Peruna is a catarrh remedy. Peruna cures dyspepsia because it is generally dependent upon catarrh.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.

IT WAS NOT APPRECIATED.

Minister's Wife Had a Flower Hat and Put It in the Wrong Place.

A story is told by the Chicago Inter Ocean of a woman in that town, the wife of a young minister, who has always had a liking for hats of the flower-bed variety, although she condemned others for wasting money that should go to the heathen.

At present she owns a "dream" of a "sky piece," that is covered with violets. The young wife wore this hat to a funeral recently, at which her husband officiated. Going into the room which contained the coffin she removed the hat and placed it on a stand.

The sad-faced, sleek-haired undertaker came in a few minutes later to arrange the "floral tokens" on the coffin. After putting the bouquets, wreaths, pillows, broken wheels, anchors and the usual run of flowers in place, he picked up the violet-covered hat and tenderly placed it on top of all the rest.

Several of the "mourners" giggled, and the minister's wife wanted to grab her hat and run. She had to let it alone, however, until the close of the ceremony.

When she marched past the bier she lunged for the hat and successfully made her escape.

An Ohio Notary.

Salineville, O., May 23.—Mr. John W. Manning, Notary Public for Columbiana County and one of the most respected men of the state, has caused to be published the following letter:

"About one year ago, I was suffering terribly from Kidney Trouble. I saw an advertisement of a medicine called Dodd's Kidney Pills and sent for two boxes.

"In the meantime, I suffered awfully, and as soon as I got the Pills I began taking them according to directions and got almost immediate relief, and I have this further to say, that after using the two boxes, I have never been troubled with my Kidneys since.

"I have recommended Dodd's Kidney Pills to others, who have tried them, and everyone who used them has been cured. I think they are a great remedy and all that is claimed for them."

Mr. Manning's letter is a strong recommendation for Dodd's Kidney Pills and is worth the attention of all who suffer with Kidney troubles.

Congressional Pleasantries.

Champ Clark was making a speech in the house a few days ago when Mr. Mann, of Illinois, was called out of the hall on business. He was gone some time, but when he returned the same robust voice was still waking the echoes.

"Is Clark still champing?" asked Mr. Mann, frivolously, of Mr. Mudd, of Maryland, who was just coming out.

"He's champing a little bit," responded Mr. Mudd.—Washington Letter.

History's Hilarity.

Hiawatha and his prospective father-in-law were sitting before the latter's tepee.

"I was looking for flints for arrowheads over the ridge to-day," remarked the young brave, "and found several quartz."

"I must tell that to my daughter," the arrowmaker chuckled. "It will make Minnehaha."—Detroit News.

M. Kuriho, Japanese minister at St. Petersburg at war's outbreak, declares Japan has entered sisterhood of nations, her intentions are most progressive towards Korea, and she prefers white nations to forming "Yellow peril" with China.

Japanese have connected across Lian Tung peninsula and cut off Port Arthur, it is believed.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP

MEN PROMINENT IN NATIONAL POLITICS DISCUSSED.

TRAITS OF PARTY LEADERS

The Cost of Conducting National Campaigns—National Committee Chairmanships Not Enviable Positions.

Washington.—A great many people are surprised that Senator Hanna's available wealth at the time of his death should have been only $3,000,000. In some way the impression had gone out that he was worth a great deal more than that. But impressions about money are pretty sure to be exaggerated in these days when men talk about millions as they used to talk about thousands ten years ago.

The Late Senator Hanna.

Senator Hanna, of course, was a successful man of business, just as he was successful in everything else he undertook, but after he had accumulated enough to insure his own financial permanency and the permanency of his family's financial interests, he was indifferent to whether any more came to him or not.

He never cared for money in itself, nor cared to pose as a man of wealth. What he did prize was the feeling of security and power which the possession of money gave him. And still more he prized the fact that his own business success enabled him to command the confidence and friendship of far wealthier men and through them to accomplish results in business and politics which would have been impossible for one whose own business experience did not inspire respect.

It was this reputation for business acumen which stood him in good stead [illegible] chairman of the national republican [illegible] influence upon his career in the senate; for it gave impressive weight to the opinions he expressed in debate upon such distinctively business propositions as the ship subsidy bill and the Panama canal.

Something Like Hanna.

Former Gov. Crane of Massachusetts, whose name has been mentioned more frequently than any other as Hanna's probable successor in the chairmanship of the republican national committee, is in some respects like Hanna—in others strikingly unlike him.

Ex-Gov. Crane.

Like Hanna, he is a successful business man, whose own success and recognized acumen have given him unusual influence among men of greater wealth and of more far-reaching personal interests. Like Hanna, he has never met with failure in any undertaking, and, like Hanna, he is intensely loyal. Like Hanna, he inspires the confidence of laboring men as well as capitalists, and some of his most important achievements have been in the direction of bringing labor and capital to a better understanding.

It was Gov. Crane who first suggested to President Roosevelt the idea of inviting the coal operators and the representatives of the Miners' union to Washington to talk over their differences—an invitation which resulted in bringing the anthracite coal strike to an end, when it had reached its most threatening stage. The suggestion came to him from his own experience as governor of Massachusetts when he brought the striking freight handlers and their employers together for a conference in the state house and ended a strike which had tied up the business of Boston.

Unlike Hanna, Gov. Crane will never develop into an effective debater or stump speaker. He has an unconquerable aversion to public appearances of that kind, and it is characteristic of him that the few public offices he has held have been forced upon him by other party leaders against his own inclination and in spite of his protests. He has a genius for politics, is absorbed in it, and is recognized by men who stand very high in public affairs as a wise and safe political adviser, but he hates above all things the idea of holding a political office. He likes to accomplish results, but he doesn't care at all for the glamor of the reputation for having done it.

Didn't Want the Job.

Senator Spooner, of Wisconsin, was asked by President Harrison to be chairman of the republican national committee in 1892 when Harrison was running for reelection. Harrison asked him first by wire and Spooner declined by wire. Then Harrison asked him to come to Washington and he came. But no pleading could induce him to take the place. Finally Harrison asked him why.

Senator Spooner.

"I'll tell you," said Spooner, frankly. "In order to run a campaign now the chairman of the national committee in either party has to raise so much money that if he wins he is sure to be called a boodler. If he loses he is called a chump. I don't care for either reputation."

Upon that Harrison let him off without further urging.

It is a fact that a great deal more money is used now in the legitimate expenses of a national election than was the case in the earlier days.

Of men now living, probably, William E. Chandler has had more experience in the management of national campaigning than anybody else. He was connected with the national republican committee continuously from 1860 to 1880, and during a good part of that time he was secretary of the committee. He was especially active in the historic campaign of 1876. Yet in all his experience he never heard of a campaign fund approaching a million dollars.

Prior to 1880 the largest fund raised was by Henry J. Raymond, chairman of the committee in 1864. He is understood to have had $500,000 with which to manage the campaign for the reelection of Abraham Lincoln. The fund for Garfield's election in 1880 was somewhat larger than this, and in 1884 both national committees had funds which were regarded as generous in comparison with what had gone before.

The first fund running up into the millions, however, was in 1888, when M. S. Quay, as chairman of the republican national committee, induced the [illegible] to contribute generously to prevent the reelection of Cleveland. In 1892 the democratic committee had a campaign fund larger than the republicans had in 1888, while the republican fund was very small. In 1896 and 1900, the republican fund mounted high, but even in those years with Bryan as a candidate the democratic fund was larger than any republican fund had ever been before. The republican campaign fund in 1904 promises to be small.

The Case of Senator Hoar.

Senator Hoar is greatly concerned lest he shall be charged with criticising the administration when in reality he intended simply to call attention to certain transactions which he thought needed looking into.

Senator Hoar.

There is probably no other man in public life who would draw so fine a distinction between an attack on an administration policy and an attack on the administration itself. But Senator Hoar is a law unto himself and his fellow senators are coming to recognize that his treatment of public questions is not to be considered exactly as it would be in the case of anybody else.

Senator Hoar has two distinct points of view for every political problem that comes to the front. First he looks at it from the viewpoint of the historian, then from the viewpoint of the practical statesman of to-day. Not infrequently he finds that the results do not harmonize and then he generally acts in accordance with the apparent necessity of the hour, while placing himself on record according to his judgment of the verdict of history.

He is getting to be an old man now, and he appreciates the fact that he will probably not long remain on the public stage. He does not want the closing years of his career to be stained by what he fears his biographer may regard as a questionable act. And so he places himself on record in such a way that after he is gone there can be no doubt about his own personal views without regard to what he may have been impelled to do in a national or party emergency. In what he says there is no personal feeling and there is no politics in the ordinary sense of the word. He does not think, for an instant, how any position he may assume will affect the political prospects either of himself or of anybody else—even his most intimate friends.

Well Done All Around.

"Did the critic say anything when you told him I had sold that picture to an American millionaire?" asked the artist.

"Yes; he said 'Well done!'" responded the close friend.

"Ah! he meant the picture?"

"No; the American millionaire."—Tit-Bits.

RUSSIANS ATTACK JAPANESE FLEET

THE TORPEDO BOAT FLOTILLA LEAVES PORT ARTHUR AND FIRES ON ENEMY.

Contestants Each Suffer the Loss of a Ship—More Attacks Are Expected—Reported That the Japanese Have Captured Newchwang.

St. Petersburg, March 12.—Official reports from Viceroy Alexieff to Emperor Nicholas show that a Japanese torpedo boat and a Russian destroyer were sunk during a naval battle that began Thursday night and ended yesterday morning off Port Arthur. Following the battle at sea the whole Japanese squadron bombarded Port Arthur, but failed to capture the port. The Russian forts answered the firing and, it is believed, destroyed a Japanese cruiser. On the ships which participated in the night attack one officer was seriously and three others slightly wounded, two soldiers were killed, and 18 were wounded.

Odds Against Russians.

As far as is known here this is the first time torpedo boats have engaged each other at sea. Although the odds were against the Russians, as the Japanese flotilla was supported by the cruiser squadron, the Russians made a heroic dash for the foe and apparently had the better of the combat, sinking a torpedo boat, until the cruisers got within range and one of the latter's shells crippled the Steregushtchi.

More Attacks Expected.

London, March 12.—A correspondent of the Daily Telegraph at Seoul describes these Japanese attacks on Port Arthur as "successful preparatory bombardments," thereby intimating that a greater attempt to reduce Port Arthur is imminent.

Newchwang Reported Taken.

Tientsin, March 12.—It is reported that the Japanese have captured Newchwang. This is not generally considered as likely. It is believed, however, that the Japanese have really landed in the Liaotung peninsula and cut off Port Arthur from communications with the north. It is further asserted that a Japanese force is within 5 miles of Newchwang.

The Situation.

Seoul, March 12.—The situation here is this: The Japanese will have an army of 150,000 men in Korea within three weeks, including 35,000 already landed at Chemulpo. The scene here daily is one of well ordered chaos. The harbor's edge is piled high with 200,000 tons of stores, packs of equipment, light guns, carriages, and bullet proof shields for 5,000 cavalry and pack horses.

"Will Crush Japanese."

Paris, March 12.—A correspondent telegraphing from St. Petersburg quotes Gen. Kuropatkin as saying that Russia would crush Japan by July, and that his first act on reaching the far east will be to recall the Russian troops from Korea. He expects the Russian Baltic squadron to join the Pacific fleet by the end of July, and he expects to use this combined fleet during the month of August.

First Battle of Its Kind.

Washington, March 12.—Naval experts say the battle between torpedo boats off Port Arthur is the first of its kind in naval history. Great interest was manifested at the Army and Navy club by military strategists last night, and the navy department will ask for full particulars as soon as possible.

STILL IN FARMERS' HANDS.

An Enormous Amount of Wheat, Corn and Oats Has Not Been Placed on the Market.

Washington, March 11.—The March report of the bureau of statistics of the department of agriculture shows the amount of wheat remaining in farmers' hands on March 1 to have been about 132,600,000 bushels, or 20.8 per cent. of last year's crop.

The corn in farmers' hands is estimated at about 839,000,000 bushels, or 37.4 per cent. of last year's crop.

Of oats there are reported to be about 273,700,000 bushels, or 34.9 per cent. of last year's crop still in farmers' hands.

Quarrel Ends in Murder.

Bloomington, Ill., March 12.—Robert Murray, an employe of the gas company at Lincoln, was instantly killed Friday by a companion and fellow employe named John Spraddy. Both were employed by the Lincoln Gas company, and the killing followed a quarrel. Murray was struck on the head by a brick thrown by Spraddy. The latter gave himself up.

Women to Hold Convention.

Springfield, Ill., March 12.—The executive committee of the Woman's Republican State Central committee have called a state convention of republican women to be held in this city May 11, the day preceding the republican state convention.

It seems that there are plenty of brave men that are willing to risk their life arresting desperate criminals, if the people will accept their service and elect them sheriff of Polk county.

The homeseeker, that is contemplating his first trip to northern Minnesota had better wait a few weeks, until the april showers commence.

The man who prefers the city weekly to a home paper because "it's got more in it," reminds us of a man who picked out the largest pair of boots in the box because they cost no more than a pair that fitted him, say an exchange.

George Albert Edward Finlason, of East Grand Forks is to be a candidate for nomination on the republican ticket for attorney general of Polk county. The name will certainly attracet attention, but may stir up nationality prejudice.

The contestants of lands, in this locality speak in terms of praise of the courtesy and efforts of the officials of the United States land office at Crookston to dispose of the contest caseses as rapidly as possiable, not hesitating to work late or early to hear the evidence.

The political writer in Crookston Times is authority for the statement that Tom Laurence has trimmed his hair and beard and is going to be a candidate on the republican ticket for sheriff. [illegible] en before he joined the populist party, and the republican party owe him a debt of gratitude—for leaving them.

e controversy between the cials of the defunct Columa county and the board of Commissiors of Polk county, will be atched with interest by the ple of this end of the county, who have valuable records locked up at McIntosh, as they must be transferd to Crookston, before the records of Polk county are complete.

RED LAKE LANDS.

Great public interest is felt in e saie of the lands on the Red ke reserve which by ecent act of congress has been ain demlnished in size, and nowards of 250,000 acres of which will soon be avaliable to settlement and cultivation. Hundreds in the valley from other portions of the state and other states, are looking foward with eagerness to the opportunity to secure a piece of the soil, and the demand for information concerning the conditions of sale has resulted in merous letters to squatters representativ to the officals United States land office city and to prehaps every ss man in Crookston. In to furnish this informa congress has had printed copies of the bill and from of these The Times today racts all that is pertinent and blishes it for the benefit of its readers. It will be observed that two important points are provided for that are not generally known. One is that the commutation clause applies and settlers may secure a patent at the expiration of forteen months' occupancy, and the other is that persons who have heretofore exhausted their homestead rights under the homestead law may become purchasers under this act. – Crookston Times.

THE END OF OLD JONES.

He is 60 and a farmer; rich but has no sence. He has always set the pace which kills—more land more crops, more work. His wife died ten years ago, worn out trying to keep his gait; his boys have each run away the first chance they had; his daugaters have married any old stick of a man to be able to get away from home. The sons and the wothless sons-in-laws are now watching and waiting like buzzards on a fence for the old man to die, so that they may divide up his possessions. There will be a big funeral some day soon—seventy five carriages and all that—and that's the end of old Jones.

It is better to have $3.000 when one is 60 and good health as the net result of a life lived morderately and well than to have $60.000 and a wretched constitution as the result of trying to own the earth.—Ex.

As the campaign advanaces our subscription list increases, as the people understands that THE SUNBEAM always hews to the line with a sharp ax, and is not affraid of knots or crooked timber.

Why not have the next Republican state convention at Duluth? It may do some of the nominating speach makers good to let them get a breath of fresh air, when they get out of wind.

The Bashi-bazouk.

Like each of the various clans of the Kurds, the bashi-bazouk can easily be distinguished by his costume. His shoes or "yemenys" (meaning leather) are red or black. His gollike stockings, which leave the knee exposed, are elaborately embroidered in black, his short Turkish trousers are of homespun, while about his waist is a short sash of wool or silk, surmounted by a leather belt in rich colors and embossed in red. This is divided into three or four sections, in which he keeps his revolver, his chibouk or pipe and his yataghan, always kept sharp. The bashi-bazouks never carry daggers, as the Circassians do. A cartridge box hangs from the side, as also a small silver snuffbox. They wear two jackets—the under one with short sleeves, and [illegible] the outside one with long. At the elbow is an opening in which they carry in a leather bag written quotations from the Koran as a talisman to protect them from the bullets of the adversary. About the neck is a chain of silver coins, from which is suspended a powder box.

Monte Carlo's Black List.

It is usually imagined that any one may enter the gambling saloons of Monte Carlo and try his or her luck at the tables where roulette, trente-et-quarante and baccarat are played. But the Prince of Monaco has made a rule that no resident in his "dominion" is to be allowed admission, and the privilege is consequently denied his "people."

The casino authorities decline admission on their own account to any person who on a previous occasion may have lost all his money at the tables and may have had to ask for financial assistance from them to procure a railway ticket for home.

To secure this money one goes to the office of the administration, which is at the top of a steep staircase, and after signing sundry documents the victim has to sit to a photographer. This photograph is preserved for future reference, and the man who is on this black list has very little chance of renewing acquaintance with the gilded saloons until he has repaid the debt.

Respect.

"Children don't seem to have as much respect for their parents as formerly."

"No," answered the cynic, "and I have never quite been able to make up my mind whether this is because modern children are less dutiful or more discerning."—Washington Star.

Soothing Sirup.

Vexed Wife—There is no calamity that can befall a woman that I have not suffered! Amiable Husband—Wrong, my dear. Now, you have never been a widow. Vexed Wife—I said calamity, sir!

A Common Weakness.

Dr. Joseph Le Conte was an authority, recognized by the world at large, on the science of vision. One day he was showing a class how to detect the blind spot in the human eye. He took two coins and held them, one in each hand, before him on the table.

"Look at both of these steadily," said he, "and gradually move them in opposite directions. Presently they will pass beyond the range of vision. That is due to the blind spot. Continue the movement, and the coins will again emerge to view."

Then the philosopher and naturalist had his little joke. "You can experiment for yourself at home," said he. "But if you are unsuccessful try some other object instead of a coin. Some people have no blind spot for money."

Young folks grow most when they are in love. It [illegible] their sight wonderfully.

Presents For Men.

In silverware there are toilet articles such as talcum jars, cold cream jars, silver mounted brushes, combs, cloth brushes, whisk brooms, flasks and shaving brushes.

Bath robes come in the most attractive guise, and the man who has none will surely bless the sister or mother who gives him one.

Gorgeous heavy silk mufflers, embroidered suspenders, neckties of white silk, linen or silk handkerchiefs and chest protectors are some of the things men must expect, as they generally put off buying them until after Christmas.

Other decorations for a man's den are the hideous but picturesque Japanese masks, swords and bayonets. Panel decorations in oriental design will surely please if they are well selected. A wastebasket would not be amiss, and one of the new corkscrews, with a horn top, silver trimmed, would be highly acceptable.

Kind Old Man.

Ascum—What did that rich old uncle of yours give you for Christmas? Something useful, I'll bet.

Hauskeep—Yes; a little device for saving coal bills.

Ascum—Ah! An arrangement to attach to the heater.

Hauskeep—No; to keep on my desk. It's a bill file.—Philadelphia Press.

Speaking and Stopping.

The knowledge of when to sit down is invaluable to public speakers and to their audiences. Perhaps the best plan is to secure a candid friend who will pull you down by your coattails. A man "on his legs" is one with whom time gallops; he has spoken for half an hour, and to him it seems but five minutes. The excitement of the brain suggests new and ever new ideals, and the extemporary talker in the pulpit or after a public dinner flounders in pursuit of these will-o'-the-wisps through swamps and thickets of bad grammar haunted by the anacolouthon and other fearful wild fowl. In the pulpit there is no man to pull the preacher down, and many are his "two words more, my brethren." After public dinners a bored audience begins to talk and laugh, but these symptoms of disapproval are not marked by the self absorbed public speaker. In short, the knowledge of when to sit down is rare and hard to acquire.—Longman's.

On the Christmas Tree.

The old fashioned stockings and hearts and crosses and animals cut out of tarlatan outlined with worsted and then filled with flat candies and tied on the tree are always popular ornaments. Sugar figures bought in the confectionery store will serve to break the monotony. The baker at Christmas time usually has his windows filled with horses, dogs, cats and men and women made of delectable cake dough and artistically ornamented with colored sugar curlycues. These are toothsome and attractive to the small boy. [illegible]

Candles in small candle holders are always scattered well over the tree. It is a wise precaution to keep a pail of water in which is a wet sponge in case of accidents. When a [illegible] a sponge quickly applied to the spot will check the spread of the fire.—Washington Star.

The Fire God's Wrath.

A curious story comes to us from the suburbs. A resident in the near neighborhood of London has a museum in his house in which the principal curiosity is a fire god which has been worshiped for many centuries in an Indian temple. Once when the owner of the house took a party of people to look at the museum he proposed in fun that they should all kotow to the image. This they all laughingly consented to do, all except two ladies, who declared it was wicked. The fire god was revenged within two months. One of the ladies had her house burned to the ground the week after, and the other one on a later date fell backward into the fire and sustained some terrible burns. We give the tale without comment.—London Chronicle.

Without Trimmings.

Payne, an examiner at Cambridge university, whose questions were always of a peculiarly exasperating nature, once asked a student at a special examination to "give a definition of happiness."

"An exemption from Payne," was the reply.

The Happiest Man.

"Merse Tom should be de happiest man in de roun' worl'"

"Think so?"

"I sho' does. He spends three-fourths of his time huntin' an' de yuther fo'th eatin' what he hunts!"—Atlanta Constitution.

Butler's Actress Wife.

General Butler deprived the stage of one of its great beauties and a most talented and popular actress. It is a bit of forgotten biography that he fell in love with Sally Hildreth when she was twenty-one years old and had been on the stage five years. She capitulated to the young lawyer and retired from the histrionic field.

Did Not Mean It.

"Honesty is the best policy," sapiently said the commuter.

"My dear sir, you're wrong!" exclaimed the suddenly awakened insurance agent who had been dozing in the opposite seat. "My company has the best policy. We long ago abandoned the other as out of date."

Must Have Been.

First Chappie—I wonder now, Chollie, how the donkey ever came to be used as the—er—emblem of stupidity?

Second Chappie (with a yawn)—Don't know, I'm sure, deah boy; must have been before our day.

Cold Tea?

According to the Kennebec Journal, a man who traveled over the Damariscotta fair ground, after the crowd had left, picked up 219 bottles ranging in capacity from a half pint up to two quarts. The paper fails to state what the bottles originally contained, but it is easy to surmise.

Fighters for Humanity.

Every important step in the progress of civilization has come from those who for humanity and the world's benefit were willing to fight battles and become unpopular; but their memory remains, and the bell of every steamer that plows the waters of the Potomac is tolled while passing the tomb of Washington.—George T. Nels N. Bolstad recieved word from his attorney N. Campbell, on Tuesday morning, that he had won his contest case before the Department of the interior for the title to the S. It was appealed from the Crookston land office to the general land office and from there to the secretary of the Interior, Bolstad winning at all the trials. R. J. Montague and H. How Aerolites Were Once Regarded.

The phenomena of shooting stars and other luminous appearances in the sky long acted as stimulants to the superstitious fears of the multitude. A red appearance was a fiery sword dipped in blood, a sinuous wavy line a fiery serpent, a number of such lines a fiery dragon, a cluster of diverging lines a rod for the scourging of nations. As shooting stars were common in August, about the time of the festival of St. Lawrence, they were said to be "the tears" of that martyr.—Notes and [illegible]

Mommsen's "Roman History."

Some one has well said that but for the "Roman History" Mommsen would be a great man "taken on faith." That is probably true, but we have the "Roman History," perhaps the most remarkable piece of German literature written in the middle of the nineteenth century. It is a wonderful testimony to the power of humanity over humanity that the most human work which Mommsen wrote should be the most popular. The "Roman History" was the expression of the whole man, and if ever it should cease to have value as Roman history it will never cease to be of value as a spiritual document, as a picture of the hopes and ideals of Theodor Mommsen. By a happy chance when the book was brought into the world it appeared in the naked simplicity of its narrative without the swaddling clothes of footnotes and sources. The clear cut style showed forth to its best advantage. The world at large took its statements as faith. Scholars were at liberty to test them in other books of Mommsen himself or of other men.—Professor Jesse B. Carter in Atlantic.

The Sanitation of Ant Cities.

Insects are scrupulously clean in their personal toilet and often brush, comb and wash themselves, a service for which they are admirably provided with natural implements. This habit is transferred to communal affairs. The streets within the city bounds and the gates and external plazas and "country roads" leading into the foraging fields, as with agricultural ants, are kept free from filth and obstructions that might gather filth. The constant washings and combings of baby ants by the nurses would satisfy the most fastidious maternal taste. One may not say that sanitation is an exact emmetonian science, but it certainly is an art thoroughly practiced in every department of the formicary and brought to perfection as far as natural conditions will [illegible]. Every insect citizen takes part in this service. All ants, while [illegible] keep their cityle precincts clean.—H. C. McCook in Harper's Magazine.

A Beautiful Art.

Without disparagement of any of the other arts, to attain proficiency in which people make [illegible] and vigilant struggles, it may be truly said that the fine art of smiling warms more hearts than all others together. Most children [illegible] have an unconscious mastery of this beautiful art, but unfortunately they often lose it as they grow older. Children are the best judges of smiles in the world. "Her lips smile," said a child, speaking of a hard faced woman, "but she doesn't." A widening of the mouth in a vain endeavor to look pleasant is not a smile. It deceives nobody. A smile, to be worthy of the name, must come from the heart. It is the result of an honest willingness and readiness to be pleased with little as well as great things.

Antwerp Milk Woman.

There is no more picturesque figure in quaint old Antwerp than the milk women. For many years the milk of the city has been served to the houses by these women, whose customs and even costumes have remained unchanged. The milk women wear a simple dress, almost completely covered with a voluminous white apron. A quaint white headdress completes the uniform. Scores of these picturesque figures are to be seen throughout Antwerp in the morning hours. The milk is either carried in two large buckets, hung from a yoke running across the shoulders, or in little carts drawn by dogs.

Eating at Night.

Every living bird and beast strives its utmost to cram itself with food before retiring for the night, and this food is digested as the night progresses. The evening feed is the feed of the day with the brute creation, and yet doctors tell us to refrain from eating heartily at night and even advise us to retire to rest with a more or less empty stomach. Are we following nature when following this advice?—Country Gentleman.

How the Chinese Beat Time.

A Chinese child is considered a year old at its birth, and its age is reckoned not from its birthdays, but from its New Year's days. If it is fortunate enough to be born on Feb. 1, the day before the Chinese New Year's day, it is said to be two years old when it is two days old. It is one year old when born, and another year is added on its first New Year's day.

Scents That Affect Breathing.

The perfumes of certain flowers affect the digestion or breathing or cause dizziness and even fainting fits. Vanilla is troublesome to many, so is the white flower of the ligustrum japonicum and the pitosperum. The tuberose, jasmine and lilac are objectionable to some. The Datura arborescens makes people drowsy. This action of flowers is due to the scent and is distinct from the influence of pollen, which produces hay fever.

KILLED BY A GRIZZLY BEAR.

How a Wealthy Ranchman Fought to the Death With a Fierce Foe.

Lying by the side of a dead bear on the south range of the Hot Springs, Washington, was found recently the body of Baron Martin von Schlosser, formerly an officer in the German army and a resident of Port Angeles.

The baron had been killed by the bear he had wounded, and the two died together after a titanic struggle. Bruin had been shot twice, once through the head and once through the lungs, and a knife had been sunk through its heart.

All around the place where the bodies were found were evidences of a great battle. The ground was torn up, the smaller brush broken and clothes of the baron torn to shreds.

The mute evidence told a thrilling story of a fearful fight on the mountain side. It could be noted that the baron had undoubtedly fired twice at the bear before the latter, wounded and angry, had seized the hunter in a death clutch. The animal was a huge grizzly of enormous strength, and it was easily to be seen that the man's death was but a matter of a few moments after the bear grappled with him.

A FIGHT TO THE DEATH,

The baron, however, had managed to retain his knife and even in the death struggle had thrust it deeply into the breast of the brute, striking the heart with the certainty of an old hunter. The stroke had caused the death of the bear, but the baron had been held in the death clutch of the animal and torn to pieces in its dying throes.

The baron had gone out on a hunting trip over his ranch. On his body were found receipts from banks in Portland, Chicago and New York for sums aggregating $100,000. He was very wealthy and had lived in Port Angeles several years.

Wakeful?

Sleeplessness Is a Sign of Nerve Trouble and Should Be Looked To.

There are three different manifestations of sleeplessness.

First, hardly to sleep a wink all night, second, to lie awake a long time before falling asleep; third, to fall asleep soon, waking up after several hours and then find it hard to sleep again.

They mean that somewhere in the nerve fibres, somewhere in the brain cells, somewhere in the blood vessels that carry blood to the brain, something is radically wrong, and must be righted, or the end may be worse than death.

To right it, take Dr. Miles' Nervine.

Some other symptoms of nerve trouble are: Dizziness, Headache, Backache, Worry, Fretfulness, Irritability, Melancholy, Lack of Ambition.

They indicate diseases which may lead to Epilepsy, Fits, St. Vitus' Dance, Nervous Prostration, Paralysis, Insanity.

Nothing will give such quick and lasting relief as Dr. Miles' Nervine.

"My husband had been sick for weeks, could not sit up to have his bed made. With all the medical help we could get he continued to grow worse. He could neither sleep or eat. Our baby girl was sent away, and all callers barred, because he could not stand a bit of talking. I read of a case of nervous prostration cured by Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. We began giving it to him and in a few days he was able to be dressed. From that time he steadily improved. Nervine saved his life."—MRS. A. G. RANKIN, Frasville, N. Y.

Red Pepper For Ants.

A small boy who lived with his aunt and grandma noticed that the regular black pepper shaker was filled with red pepper. A Hindoo Belief About Owls.

The Hindoos declare that the flesh and blood of an owl will make a person insane who eats or drinks it. On this account men who are devoured by jealousy of a rival or hatred of an enemy come furtively to the market and purchase an owl. In silence they carry it home and secretly prepare a decoction, which an accomplice will put into the food of the object of their malignant designs.

Albino Birds and Beasts Sacred.

It is noteworthy that albino animals are regarded by the Japanese in a superstitious light. The appearance of one is considered a good omen for the reigning mikado, and occasionally signalizes a reign. For example, one reign is called "hakuchi nenkan," or period of the white pheasant, another, the "haku ho nenkan," or period of the white phenix.—London Globe.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Farmers' Exchange.

Twenty-five farmers interested in the Minnesota Farmers' Exchange met at the state capitol and adopted a constitution and by-laws, and articles of incorporation, which will soon be filed with the secretary of state.

The capital stock of the exchange will be $500,000, divided into $25,000 shares, $20 a share. The limit of indebtedness is fixed at 50 per cent of the stock issued.

The sessions were occupied by discussions of the constitution, by-laws and articles of incorporation. The purpose of the exchange is to act as the farmers' commission man and broker, thus avoiding the payment of commissions to reguler merchants. It is authorized to deal in all kinds of farm and dairy products, own real estate, operate elevators and flour mills, buy and sell agricultural implements and such other merchandise as the farmers sell or consume.

The exchange will operate through a central office at St. Paul and will be composed of numerous county organizations, which will subscribe for stock. The exchange will as soon as practicable build large terminal elevators in Minneapolis and Duluth.

Cannibalism.

A party who has been cruising between Tower and Koochiching confirms the report of the alleged cannibalism on the Lett Lake reservation.

Brandon was near Pelican lake at the time the Indian was claimed to have killed and eaten his wife and child, and the second day after met a small party of Boise Fort Indians, who were on their way to the west end of Vermillion lake. From these Indians Brandon learned of the killing, and he says his information is unquestionably authentic. He was told that the Indian who is claimed to have committed the horrible deed was a shiftless sort of a fellow, and during a drunken spree killed both his wife and child and later devoured parts of the bodies to avert starvation.

This Indian lived in a distant part of the reservation, and the first news of the deed was brought by a guide.

Is No Day.

In the eyes of the Minnesota state law a legal holiday is no day at all, according to a ruling made by Judge Cray.

The court in its decision holds that the time for redemption cannot expire on a legal holiday, and that a property owner who offers to redeem on the sixty-first day of the redemption period, when the sixtieth day falls on a legal holiday, is entitled to a settlement and can become the legal owner of the property.

The decision was rendered in the case of C. W. Case against Marcus B. Hobart and others, and the point taken is that the law provides for Sunday but not for holidays. In the case in question, notice of redemption was served by the plaintiff and the sixtieth day fell upon Sept. 7, Labor day. The Ramsey county auditor held that the plaintiff had a right to redeem on the following day and acted accordingly and was upheld by the court.

Desperate Burglars.

After beating and choking her almost into a state of insensibility, two masked burglars, who ransacked the house and piled up valuables in little heaps all over the first floor room ready to carry away, attempted a dastardly outrage on Mrs. W. H. Hensel, 609 Jackson street, St. Paul, earl one evening, and but for an accident would have accomplished their purpose.

Mrs. Hensel is the wife of a vice-president of the Junior Pioneers, and proprietor of a transfer company. She was ill and in a highly nervous state at the time, and is in serious condition. Great red welts on each side of the throat, bruised places on the skin of the throat and shoulders, and several scalp wounds where her hair was torn out by the roots in her struggle, tell of the desperate struggle.

Shot His Father.

G. A. Klien, one of the leading jewelers of Duluth, was shot by his son early in the morning and dangerously wounded. According to the story told by the family, Klien was awakened by a revolver shot, and investigating found his son, who is twenty-one years of age, wildly waving a revolver and shouting that there were burglars in the house. As soon as he saw his father he turned the revolver on him and shot him twice, one bullet going thru the body and the other thru the arm.

The family says the boy was subject to nightmare and was in that condition when the shooting occurred.

G. A. R. Officers.

Colonel Harrison White, of Luverne, was elected department commander of the G. A. R. department of Minnesota.

The other successful candidates for office were:

L. O. Merriam, of Minneapolis, senior vice commander.

George A. Whitney, of Wadena, Junior vice commander.

Dr. Chester G. Higbee, of St. Paul, medical director.

Rev. Deniel A. Tawney, of St. Paul, department chaplain.

News Notes.

Gunder Watson was killed by a falling tree near Bemidji.

The architects say that this season will be a busy one for builders and contractors in St. Paul.

Fountain celebrated over a victory gained on the question of waterworks. The streets were ablaze with fireworks.

Made desperate by the fact that his wife and children were at home without money or food, James Wwyar, who is serving a short sentence at the workhouse in Minneapolis, for drunkenness, attempted to escape from there.

For Growing Girls.

West Pembroke, Me., March 21.—Mrs. L. L. Smith, of this place, says that Dodd's Kidney Pills are the best remedy for growing girls. Mrs. Smith emphasizes her recommendation by the following experience:

"My daughter was thirteen years old last November and it is now two years since she was first taken with Crazy Spells that would last a week and would then pass off. In a month she would have the spells again. At these times she would eat very little and was very yellow, even the whites of her eyes would be yellow.

"The doctors gave us no encouragement, they all said they could not help her. After taking one box of Dodd's Kidney Pills, she has not had one bad spell. Of course, we continued the treatment until she had used in all about a dozen boxes, and we still give them to her occasionally, when she is not feeling well. Dodd's Kidney Pills are certainly the best medicine for growing girls."

Mothers should heed the advice of Mrs. Smith, for by so doing they may save their daughters much pain and sickness and ensure a healthy happy future for them.

WESTERN CANADA HAS AN EXCELLENT CLIMATE.

The Saskatchewan Valley Very Highly Favored.

An interesting feature of Western Canada is its climate. Those who have made a study of it speak highly of it. The Canadian Government Agents are sending out an Atlas, and at the same time giving valuable information concerning railway rates, etc., to those interested in the country. As has been said, the climate is excellent. The elevation of this part of Canada is about 1,800 feet above the sea, about twice that of the average for Minnesota. It is a very desirable altitude. The country has a very equable climate, taking the seasons through. The winters are bright and the summers are pleasantly warm. R. F. Stupart, director of the meteorological service for Canada, says:

"The salient features of the climate "of the Canadian northwest territories "are a clear, bracing atmosphere dur- "ing the greater part of the year, and "a medium rainfall and snowfall. The "mean temperature for July at Winni- "peg is 66, and Prince Albert 62. The "former temperature is higher than at "any part of England, and the latter "is very similar to that found in many "parts of the southern countries."

At Prince Albert the average daily maximum in July is 76 and the minimum 48. Owing to this high day temperature with much sunshine, the crops come to maturity quickly.

Moisture is ample in the Saskatchewan valley, being about 18 inches annually. It is notable that about 75 per cent. of the moisture falls during the crop months. Thus, Western Canada gets as much moisture when it is needed and with several hours more sunshine daily than land further south gets during the growing season, it is not difficult to understand why crops mature quickly and yield bountifully.

Winter ends quickly, sowing is done during April and sometimes in March. Harvest comes in August, about the middle. Cyclones, blizzards, dust and sand storms are unknown.

THE OLD FOLKS AT HOME

Are Never Without Peruna in the House for Catarrhal Diseases.

MR. AND MRS. J. O. ATKINSON, INDEPENDENCE, MO.

Under date of January 10, 1897, Dr. Hartman received the following letter:

"My wife had been suffering from a complication of diseases for the past 25 years.

"Her case had baffled the skill of some of the most noted physicians. One of her worst troubles was chronic constipation of several years' standing.

"She also was passing through that most critical period in the life of a woman—change of life. In June, 1895, I wrote to you about her case. You advised a course of Peruna and Manalin, which was at once commenced, and have to say it completely cured her. She firmly believes that she would have been dead only for these wonderful remedies.

"About the same time I wrote you about my own case of catarrh, which had been of 25 years' standing. At times I was almost past going. I commenced to use Peruna according to your instructions and continued its use for about a year, and it has completely cured me.

"Your remedies do all that you claim for them, and even more. Catarrh cannot exist where Peruna is taken according to directions. Success to you and your remedies."

John O. Atkinson.

In a letter dated January 1, 1900, Mr. Atkinson says, after five years' experience with Peruna:

"I will ever continue to speak a good word for Peruna. In my rounds as a traveling man I am a walking advertisement for Peruna and have induced many people during the past year to use Peruna with the most satisfactory results. I am still cured of catarrh."

John O. Atkinson,
Box 272, Independence, Mo.

When old age comes on, catarrhal diseases come also. Systemic catarrh is almost universal in old people.

This explains why Peruna has become so indispensable to old people. Peruna is their safe-guard. Peruna is the only remedy yet devised that meets these cases exactly.

Such cases cannot be treated locally; nothing but an effective systemic remedy could cure them. This is exactly what Peruna is.

If you do not receive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

EIGHT YEARS OF TORTURE.

No suffering more keen than kidney suffering. Sick kidneys make bad blood; cause weak, stiff and aching backs; cause blind, sick and dizzy headaches, lack of appetite and loss of sleep; keep you all tired out and spoil digestion.

To have perfect health, you must cure the kidneys. Read how one man was cured by Doan's Kidney Pills after eight years of torture.

Henry Soule, of Pultney St., Hammondsport, N. Y., says: "For eight years I suffered constant agony from kidney complaint. I endured the worst torture from gravel and the kidney secretions were excessive and contained sediment like brick dust. I had to get out of bed from ten to twenty times a night and the loss of sleep wore me out. Indigestion came on and the distress after eating was terrible. Doan's Kidney Pills effected a complete and lasting cure, and after the symptoms of kidney trouble were gone my stomach began to work as it should. This lasting cure, especially in a person of my age, proves the great value of Doan's Kidney Pills more convincingly than could any words of mine."

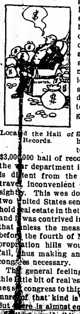
NEW BUILDING SITES

PLANS FOR BEAUTIFYING THE NATIONAL CAPITAL.

ON PENNSYLVANIA AVENUE

This Will Be Made the Center of Official Washington—Unsightly Conditions That Now Exist —Other Gossip.



Locating the Hall of Records.

Washington.—Congress seems to have made up its mind that if any more government buildings are to be erected they will have to be placed on the south side of Pennsylvania avenue, in the squares which are now disfigured by long rows of ramshackle buildings, discreditable even to the slums of a great city.

A year ago congress made a bad break in deciding to put the new $3,000,000 hall of records down back of the war department in a location which is distant from the ordinary lines of travel, inconvenient of access and unsightly. This was done because one or two United States senators happened to hold real estate in that particular square, and it was contrived in such a quiet way that unless the measure became a law before the fourth of March, certain appropriation bills would be allowed to fail, thus making an extra session of congress necessary.

The general feeling of disgust over this little bit of real estate manipulation has set congress to thinking, and nothing more of that kind is likely to happen. But there is almost equal disinclination to [illegible] new buildings even in sites which would otherwise be available so long as Pennsylvania avenue remains a re[illegible] to the builders of the Capital city.

[illegible] Fairbanks, who reported a [illegible] construction of a building to [illegible] by the departments of state, justice and commerce, found somewhat to his surprise a very general opposition to the proposal to locate the new building on the square of ground just opposite the war and navy department and the white house, a proposal which would involve the condemnation of an entire square, containing a number of historic houses like the Decatur house, the old Corcoran art gallery and the temporary white house, which witnessed the creation of the coal strike commission. Local sentiment and the sentiment of most of the leading men in the senate was against the proposal and in favor of selecting a site south of the avenue.

Unsightly Architecture.

In the Shadow of the Capitol.

At present in the entire stretch from the treasury to the capitol along Pennsylvania avenue, a distance of a mile and a half, there are only five buildings of any architectural pretensions whatever—the post office department, the Washington Star building, the new Willard and Raleigh hotels and the general offices of the Southern railway. Most of the other buildings are either commonplace or positively disreputable. For nearly half the distance, both sides of the avenue are lined with cheap lodging houses, Chinese laundries and places of questionable reputation.

Right under the shadow of the dome of the capitol is a nest of shanties so wretched that no picture can give an adequate idea of their abject condition. It is written in the books that all these will have to go in order to make way for the rows of public buildings for which the necessity is growing every year more pressing, and which, when completed, will make Pennsylvania avenue the most splendid thoroughfare in any capital city in the world.

To complete these improvements will cost millions of dollars, but the investment will be for all time, and the outlay will more than pay for itself in the saving of rents which the government now pays to private holders of real estate all over Washington who fatten on the housing of departments and bureaus that ought to have permanent abodes of their own. It is only within three years that the government actually contracted with a private individual to put up a costly building on an agreement to lease it for the use of bureaus in the navy for a period of at least ten years.

Tomb for Scientists.

Smithsonian Institution.

Washington is to have its Westminster abbey, if some of the scientific gentlemen who were responsible for the transfer of the body of James Smithson from Genoa to the United States can carry into effect the project which they have mapped out in their minds.

It is proposed that the body of Smithson shall be buried in the beautiful building which for years has housed the institution he founded. That would be peculiarly fitting, and the building in itself would constitute as splendid a tomb as any man could wish. But with the body of Smithson there it is suggested that it would be equally fitting that the bodies of other scientists who have won great distinction in the government service should also find a resting place there beside him.

In a short time the Smithsonian building will no longer be necessary for the purposes of the institution. Congress is preparing to erect a new home for the National museum which is connected with the Smithsonian, and this will afford ample room for all the Smithsonian offices. The original building, one of the architectural ornaments of Washington, will then be available for any purpose to which the government may see fit to put it, and the scientific men who have been closely identified with its work for many years will do all they can to have it transformed into a memorial hall, to contain the tombs of their most eminent associates.

Alexander Graham Bell is interested in the project. So is Prof. Langley. A beginning would be made with the body of Smithson. Then the bodies of Henry, Baird and Goode would follow, and soon the thing would be an accomplished fact.

It is not intended that the plan shall include memorials to men who have grown great in politics or war. That would enlarge too far the possible list.

Cockran in Congress.

Bourke Cockran, of New York, is once more to be a striking figure in the house of representatives.

Bourke Cockran.

It is ten years now since Cockran was last in the house as a Tammany man. He was regarded then as the most brilliant orator on the floor, and he had to contend against him such oratorical stars as William J. Bryan and Isador Rayner. There is something about Cockran's style that is all compelling while he is on his feet. He may not carry permanent conviction, but the charm of his speaking is irresistible. When Cockran was here before he made his biggest hit by a fervid defense of President Cleveland, that fairly swept the house off its feet. That was in the last year of Cleveland's first term, when the new election was coming on. Four years later, at the Chicago democratic convention Cockran made another speech, which is perhaps the most extraordinary convention speech ever delivered. It was three o'clock in the morning, after the convention had been a howling mob for hours and after they had hooted down every oratorical light in the party. The confusion was simply indescribable. It was a Cleveland convention, but they would not listen even to those who tried to speak for Cleveland. When Cockran arose he had not spoken three minutes before he had the entire convention of 20,000 people as still as a church, and he held them thus for nearly an hour. It was the most brilliant attack on Cleveland as a candidate that could be conceived. Yet it did not affect a single vote in the convention. Cockran's speech ranks with the speeches of Bryan of 1896, of Ingersoll in 1876 and of Conkling in 1880, as one of the half dozen really great convention speeches. As a pure personal proposition it was the greatest of them all, for he mastered and held a hostile audience. Bryan simply voiced the sentiment of his audience, as nobody had been able to do before.

LOUIS A. COOLIDGE.

CZAR'S SQUADRON MAKES ITS ESCAPE

VLADIVOSTOK SHIPS DYNAMITE WAY THROUGH ICE AND PUT TO SEA.

Japanese Attack on Newchwang Expected and Plans Are Made to Resist It—Little Damage Done by Port Arthur Bombardment.

London, March 19.—The report comes from St. Petersburg this morning that the Vladivostok squadron dynamited its way through the ice in the harbor last Tuesday and put to sea. The report states, further, that it is conjectured at St. Petersburg that the fleet has gone to Saghalien island. If the news is true it proves that the squadron was really inside the harbor at Vladivostok when the Japanese fleet bombarded that port on March 6.

Ready to Resist.

All advices from the far east this morning indicate that Russia is making hurried preparation to resist a Japanese attack on Newchwang. It seems to be conceded by the Russians that Japan has landed a large force of troops in the Liaotung gulf, and that Newchwang is to be the first objective.

Fleet Fails to Escape.

Tokio, March 19.—The report that Admiral Makaroff attempted to make a dash out of Port Arthur for the purpose of uniting the remnants of his fleet with the Vladivostok squadron is officially confirmed.

On the night of March 10 Admiral Makaroff, with the few undamaged and repaired vessels under his flag, crept out of the outer harbor. The night was dark. On the next morning, however, Makaroff's vessels were discovered by Togo's scouts, and, knowing that the strong Japanese fleet had them shut off from the north, the Russians returned to Port Arthur, where the [illegible] remain.

Little Damage Done.

St. Petersburg, March 1[illegible].—A [illegible] correspondent, who has just visited Port Arthur, telegraphs from Mukden as follows: "Despite the various bombardments at Port Arthur the [illegible] of the city remains unchanged, although the enemy fired an enormous number of projectiles. The enemy [illegible] to stand as far as possible outside the range of the Russian batteries, rendered their own fire ineffective. Six hours of firing by the heaviest guns during the last bombardment did not demolish a single building, but cost a few lives."

Japanese Wounded.

According to information received from Russians at Shanghai during the fighting at Port Arthur February 10 and February 11 the battleship Mikasa was struck by ten projectiles and seriously damaged. Two Japanese battleships and two cruisers have been docked for repairs at Nagasaki and Sasebo and 2,000 wounded men are said to be in the Japanese hospitals.

No Japanese in Manchuria.

Newchwang, March 19.—Rumors that the Japanese have established themselves in southern Manchuria are unworthy of credence. No Japanese have been seen north of the Yalu, and none of their scouts seem to have been there since the beginning of the march. On the other hand, the Russians are reported to have crossed the Yalu to the south, leaving a small force to guard the river. Mounted messengers pass both ways daily.

WOOD CONFIRMED.

Long Contest Over His Appointment to Be Major General Ends in His Favor.

Washington, May 19.—By the action of the senate in executive session yesterday Gen. Leonard Wood became a major general, taking the rank from August 8, 1893, the day President Roosevelt made the promotion. The contest against his confirmation has been a notable one, beginning November 19, 1903, soon after congress convened in special session, and continuing through the present session until Friday, when by a vote of 45 to 16 the nomination was confirmed. Five democratic senators voted with the majority in favor of confirmation and two republican senators voted against.

Good Effect of Avalanche.

Seattle, Wash., March 19.—An avalanche in the Cascade mountains in the recent storm opened one of the largest veins of bituminous coal ever found in Washington. The big snowslide occurred in a lonely part of the mountains. It covered a mountain road for a quarter of a mile to a great depth, and timber cruisers estimate that it carried down 2,000,000 feet of timber from the mountain side.

Survivor of Light Brigade Dead.

New London, Conn., March 16.—William E. Miller, who claimed to be a survivor of the light brigade which made the famous charge at Balaklava in 1854, is dead at his residence in Groton. He was born in Scotland in 1828. He served in the United States navy during the civil war.

A BUSINESS PROPOSITION

Ancestral graves prove one of the most serious obstacles in railway making in China, and whenever possible the engineers have avoided them. Sometimes, says the Engineering Magazine, exorbitant prices are demanded for the removal of an ancestor's remains, but through the influence of Chinese interested in the railway something like uniformity has been arrived at, and the average price for a grave is taels four (about ten shillings).

"Feng Shui" presents another obstacle. The literal translation of the term is "wind, water," but it is best explained as a system of geomancy which rules the daily action of the Chinese as a race from the setting of a date for a marriage or a funeral to the location of a city. The site of every city, town or village has been fixed by geomancers after consulting the oracles; each community has its guardian dragon or some such hypothetical monster, and woe betide the individual who proposes to cut it in two with tunnel or railway track.

Mr. Frank M. Eddy denies that there is an understanding between Judge Collins and himself when in Northfield recently Judge Collins confided to a Democratic admirer that he was to fall heir to the Eddy strength.

– Nortfield News

You may be sure Mr. Eddy would denie such a statemen, as his friends might not consent to beig traded to Collins; should he (Eddy) fail to land the nomination.

It has not been our costom to pay much attention to cheap weather forcasts, that are put out to advertise patent medicine but we picked up one the other day that has done some good guessing on the weather of the past winter. He always starts in the month with this statement "This will be a remakable, cold stormey month". 4th to—th cold and the rest of the moth it will be cold, or storme. He only made one mistake, and that was when he said it would be pleasant weather from the 12th to the 15th of February, and we had the usal storms on them dates

Japanese Traits.

In no country is William Morris' golden rule, "Have nothing about you but what you know to be useful and believe to be beautiful," so scrupulously followed as in Japan. The politeness of the Japanese—a sign of "equality"—the politeness of this hierarchical east, is in surprising contrast with the aggressive rudeness of our democratic communities. Gentleness and cordiality are the Japanese rule; no scenes of violence. The readiness with which Europeans fly into a passion stupefies the Japanese, appears to them to be a sign of innate coarseness. In his consideration for others a Japanese habitually refrains from making any show of his personal sorrows. Only her vanity has led Europe to fancy that the Japanese regard western civilization as superior to their own and that therefore they are "Europeanizing" themselves purposely. The western diplomatist who described modern Japan as a "bad translation" of Europe merely shared the delusion and conceit of foreigners generally.—F. Challoye in Revue de Paris

"The Dog Will Have His Day."

In "Hamlet," act 4, scene 1, we read:

Let Hercules himself do what he may,
The cat will mew, the dog will have his day.

The latter line has become a popular saying, but we are naturally inclined to ask what it means. Why should a dog have a day all to himself any more than any other four footed creature? Is not the passage a piece of silly slang, and ought it not to be suppressed, like any other cant phrase that is born in the streets? To harmonize the verse with sense and Shakespeare a friend has suggested that the last word ought to be changed to bay. We should then read, "The cat will mew, the dog will have his bay." I have no doubt that Shakespeare wrote it so and that the word day is a misprint and nonsense. The analogy between the cat's mewing and dog's baying is self evident and intelligible.—Kansas City Independent.

The Korean Wife.

In Korea the rooms of a wife or mother are the sanctuary of any man who breaks the law. Unless for treason or for one other crime he cannot be forced to leave those rooms, and so long as he remains under the protection of his wife's apartments he is secure from the officers of the law.

Bound to Be Comfortable.

An author who had been jailed for debt wrote to his wife: "Do me the favor to send me my Shakespeare, my nightgown and slippers, my pipe and all letters asking for autographs and containing stamps. I want to be comfortable and at peace with the world."—Atlanta Constitution.

A Slow Photographer.

Irate Female—Look here! Do you mean to tell me that I have got such an ugly looking nose as that? Photographer—But my apparatus cannot lie, madam. Irate Female—Then, for goodness' sake, go and get one that can.

Just Help Himself.

He—If I tried to kiss you would you call for help? She—Would you need it?—Smart Set.

Auto Car Dangers

The Chauffeur's Life Depends on the Slightest Turning of a Wheel.

Henry Fournier's Narrow Escapes From Death While Speeding at a Mile a Minute Rate.

"The first narrow escape in an auto car that I can recall was in a motor tricycle race five years ago last June from St. Germain to Roubaix, 150 miles. Soon after the start a nut broke, and the steering bar of my machine came off," said Henry Fournier, the world's greatest chauffeur. "As I felt it give way I crouched over the head as low as possible and grabbed the front fork of the machine. It wabbled from side to side, of course, but I hung on and managed to shut off power and reduce the speed of the motor tricycle from thirty-five to fifteen miles an hour. How I did it I don't know.

THE AUTO STRUCK A TREE.

"When one must do a thing or die, one usually does the thing. Not only my own life was at stake, but the lives of spectators who were lined up along the road by hundreds. With speed reduced the machine managed to upset. That was nothing, a mere spill. I jumped up, righted the tricycle, a bicyclist gave me a nut to repair the handle bar, and in a few minutes I was speeding away again. A shock? Yes, but the shock of losing the race would have been greater.

"In the Gordon Bennett race from Paris to Lyons three years ago, the first in which Mr. Winton competed, we had a close call from death. Charron and I were in a big twenty horsepower automobile, Charron steering. About fifteen miles from Lyons we had just crossed a railroad track and were going downhill. As we swung around the corner, going at a pace not far from a mile a minute, an immense dog, which neither saw nor heard us, trotted out of the woods, headed straight for us. He was an ugly beast, big as a St. Bernard, shaggy, his color a dirty brown and white. It was impossible to swerve from our course because of the curve. By some miraculous chance the heedless dog dived in between our front and hind wheels on the right side. He never cried out. He was dead before he knew anything had happened.

"In the twinkling of an eye the great animal was being ground to death between our car and the flinty road, and our automobile meanwhile leaped and slid from side to side, pitching and plunging as the grinding process went on. Bits of fur flew through the air. In spite of Charron's efforts our machine left the road, dodged past a great tree and leaped back to the road again, only to jump close to another tree and once more return to the road.

"I had shut off the power, of course, the moment I saw the collision was inevitable, yet I suppose twenty seconds of actual time elapsed before we stopped and the last fragments of fur dropped from our running gear. The time felt like twenty years. The big trees, any one of which would have smashed us to instant death, seemed to pass us as close together as spokes in a giant wheel. A hundred times we seemed to be gone beyond a doubt, yet we always missed destruction by a few inches.

"You may recall the celebrated thirty horsepower machine that killed Count Cahen d'Anvers when he was running it three years ago. Charron repaired the car. Captain Laycock of England bought it.

"One day Captain Laycock told me he was going to take a lady to luncheon at Versailles and wanted to know whether, as an extra precaution, I would mind riding on the rear seat, so as to be ready in case of emergency. We had a delightful luncheon at Versailles, and then we started for Chartres.

"We were not many miles on the journey, going downhill at the rate of a mile a minute and with no obstacles in the way, when the machine suddenly bolted to the side of the road. A shying horse gives you, say, a half second's warning. A shying automobile, at a mile a minute pace, gives you no warning at all.

"Before we knew what had happened we had smashed into a tree. The body of the car tore away from the frame and tilted up as if it were a dump cart. Captain Laycock was shot forward as if by an explosion of gunpowder. His body struck first the wheel of the steering bar, and this broke his impetus a little. Then he hit the tree head first. His wonderful luck was that the blow was glancing, so that his skull was not crushed in.

"The lady and I flew through the air like birds for twenty yards, I of course following her just as our relative positions were in the car. I do not recollect this, but infer it from what I learned later. I remember nothing from the time we were running swiftly along the road until I awoke from a sleep that seemed to have lasted for months. I felt no pain. I was still drowsy. I could not see.

"'What is this?' I asked myself. 'What is this cloth bandage around my head?' After a long time I puzzled out the information that the cloth was a lady's dress. By a great effort I concentrated my attention on my surroundings, and soon I had strength enough to sit up. The lady and her long costume had so broken my fall that I was not cut, not even scratched. She lay still unconscious, suffering from shock and bleeding. I carried her back and laid her beside what I thought must be the dead body of Captain Laycock.

"But a good English sportsman is not so easy to kill. In a few minutes Captain Laycock woke up, terribly lacerated and bleeding, but clear headed. I got both to a farmhouse and then asked for a horse that I might get a doctor quickly. The only beast they had was a little donkey, and away I went on him, trot, trot, trot, for the doctor. It was such a ridiculous anticlimax to what was so near a tragedy that I laughed on the way."

Bismarck's Wonderful Eyes.

No one ever came into the presence of the chancellor without a deep sense of the mind power reflected from those large gray blue orbs. Their flashing brilliancy and the piercing penetration of the glances shot from them were never to be forgotten. They seemed incapable of expressing affection, and their steel-like hardness only inspired awe for the towering intellect, the irresistible will, the defiant courage, the fiery energy of their owner. To watch the lightning changes of expression mirrored in them, reflecting the strong emotions evoked by humbled pride, wounded ambition and thwarted selfishness, and, above all, by the loss of his absolute sway, was indeed an enviable privilege.—Henry Villard in Century.

The Jilt in Italy.

In some countries a betrothal is considered only a degree less sacred than a marriage and therefore a breach of promise, especially on the girl's side, is regarded as very shocking. This is very much the case in Italy, where a girl who after betrothal has changed her mind is known for life as a civetta (owlet) and has rarely another chance of matrimony. The term "owlet" conveys no idea of reproach here, but in Italy it is significant, because owlets are there used for insnaring other birds.

Korean Mourning.

Koreans wear full mourning for their fathers. The dress is of hemp cloth, with a hempen girdle. This is worn for a father only. Secondary mourning is worn for a mother and no mourning at all for a wife.

Malay Superstition.

Malays have very much the same ideas of bad and good luck signs as prevail in other countries. If one trips on the steps of his house or knocks his head against the lintel when starting for a journey he delays a day, if possible, for the accident portends death. Fearful ill luck will attend a native who starts on a journey in the rain, for the rain signifies tears. As a swarm of bees settling on or near a house in England brings good luck, so the result is the very opposite in Malay districts. A bird flying into a Malay house decidedly benefits the occupier, for, if caught, smeared with oil and commanded to fly away with all the ill luck and misfortunes of the house, all will be well.

In Singapore we see Malay cottages around us, here and there, yet few know the superstitions prevailing with regard to the building of these habitations. For instance, if the steps in front are by an unlucky chance placed exactly under the center rafters it will mean quarrels and fighting under the roof. A visitor to one of these dwellings must never lean against the steps when talking. That would entail a funeral from the house. This weird notion arises from the fact that coffins are handed to men at the bottom of the steps.—London Times.

A Joke He Liked.

In the strain and excitement of trading in Wall street the brokers, says Mr. E. C. Stedman in the Century Magazine, often relapse into wild merriment and play boyish pranks. On one occasion an old Indian with a young brave, a boy and two squaws entered the gallery. At once the "floor" put forth every effort to break down their stolidity. A war whoop had no effect, a war dance did not arouse even a smile.

At last a baldheaded man was thrust into a ring of young fellows, his hands held behind him, a knife drawn around his pate, and the mummery of a futile attempt to detach his scalp was enacted.

This was at last too much for the dignity of the aborigines. The boy broke into a broad laugh, in which the squaws joined; the young warrior [illegible]

Yes, [illegible] the first [illegible] semblance of grim humor overspread the face of the ruthless old chief, who may have been the perpetrator of as many atrocities as Geronimo.

London English a Base Jargon.

The vigor and purity of a language can only be preserved by the fashionable class, the class whom in matters social everybody imitates, speaking it well. But how can English be well spoken when some of the greatest ladies speak the idiom of Massachusetts through their noses and a large proportion of the men cough the idiom of Frankfort from their throats? The constant babbling of broken English at dinner tables and in drawing rooms is becoming quite fatiguing, and as a result the English speak their tongue worse than it was ever spoken before. Everybody knows the temptation to speak a sort of baby pigeon English to a foreigner in the strange hope that it may be more intelligible to him. This and the slang taught us by the Yankees have reduced the English language as spoken by smart people to a base jargon.—Saturday Review.

How One Fact Was Discovered.

In the early part of the last century an English buttonmaker became famous for the steel waistcoat buttons which he used to manufacture with lines cut upon them for ornament. He gradually put the lines nearer and nearer together and observed that as he increased the number of lines the buttons became more and more iridescent. He explained his discovery to a scientist, who began experimenting upon ruled plates of steel. The result was the wonderful diffraction grating which is now used in place of the glass prism upon all great telescopes to break the ordinary ray of light into its primary colors.

Less Profanity Than Formerly.

The habit of swearing is not as common as it used to be in this country. Gentlemen no longer use the language with the unvarnished freedom of the days of Sheridan, when a gentleman was accustomed to consign himself, collectively and in sections, to the lowest depths of perdition in the presence of ladies while paying tribute to their charms. Undoubtedly many youths who were not brought up to swear do swear now and then under provocation, but there is, all things considered, an increasing respect for the English language.—Washington Times.

A Mental Strain.

"I'm thinking of a trip to California," said Smartie.

"Really, old man," remarked Pepprey, "you can't afford that. You're not accustomed to that sort of thing."

"I merely said I was thinking of it. I can afford to think, can't I?"

"No; that's what I meant. You're not accustomed to thinking."—Philadelphia Press.

Sauce For Plum Pudding.

Four tablespoonfuls of butter, whites of two eggs, one cup powdered sugar, one gill of brandy and one gill of boiling water. Cream the butter, add gradually the sugar, and beat until white and light, add the whites one at a time, beating all the while. When ready to serve add the brandy and water. Stand in a basin of boiling water over the fire, stir until creamy, and it is ready for use.

A sauce without brandy is made as follows: [illegible] pint of boiling water, [illegible] cup of sugar [illegible] stir over the fire until thick. Add any flavoring.

Cranberry and Apple Sauce.

Take one quart of cranberries, two cupfuls of sugar, two cupfuls of water. Pick over the berries carefully and wash in cold water. Put them into a porcelain lined saucepan, with enough water to cover, and cook until tender. Then add the sugar and remove from the stove just as soon as the sugar has been dissolved. Serve hot or cold. Select the berries carefully; boil them slowly without stirring. If treated in this way they will retain their shape and the sauce will be clear and transparent.

Apple sauce is for roast goose. Peel and core six tart apples. Put them into a saucepan and just cover with water. Boil until tender, then press through a colander. Add a teaspoonful of butter, a dash of nutmeg or cinnamon and sweeten to taste.

Naval Gun Crews.

Each gun crew of a naval vessel consists of seven men besides the captain of the turret, who has general charge. There are two guns in each turret, so that when in action there are in a turret fifteen men. At each gun there are a pointer, a trainer, a sight setter, a rammer man, a hoist man, a breech block man and a loader. Each has his station, and the seven men practically become part of the gun, working together like a machine.

The Originator.

"I wonder who made the first after dinner speech?" asked the philosopher.

"Adam," replied the wise guy promptly. "As soon as he got through with the core of that apple he said, 'The woman tempted me,' didn't he?"—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Forced to It.

"You ought not to beg," she said.

"No, ma'am," admitted the tramp.

"Why do you do it?"

"Well, ma'am, I wouldn't if I could git people to give me money by jest lookin' sad."—Chicago Post.

Butchers and Blue.

The blue smock of the butcher, says an English paper, has often aroused curiosity. The color was originally adopted by the guild of butchers in the middle ages at a time when each trade had its distinguishing color; but, while other guilds dropped their colors, butchers stuck to blue because blood stains are less noticeable upon that color than upon any other. At a very early period blue was the universal wear of serving men. It was then the cheapest of dyes. Sir Walter Scott in his well known poem "Marmion" talks of "an old, blue coated serving man."

Not Fatal.

No Matter What Doctors Say—We Know That Heart Trouble in Many Cases Can Be Cured.

There are seven main features of heart disease, viz.: (1) Weakness or Debility; (2) Rheumatism or Neuralgia; (3) Valvular Disorder; (4) Dilation; (5) Enlargement; (6) Fatty Degeneration; (7) Dropsy.

Documentary evidence will prove thousands of so-called "incurables" have been absolutely cured by Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure.

Patients often have no idea their disease is heart trouble, but ascribe it to Indigestion, Liver Complaint, etc.

Here are some of the symptoms: Shortness of breath after exercise. Smothering Spells. Pain in Chest, left Shoulder and arm. Discomfort in Lying on one side. Fainting Spells. Nervous Cough. Swelling of Feet and Ankles. Paleness of Face and Lips. Palpitation. Nightmare. Irregular Pulse.

"I have great faith in Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and speak of its merits whenever opportunity presents. I can now go up and down stairs with ease, while three weeks ago I could hardly walk one block." One year later.—"I am still in good health; the Heart Cure did so much for me, that I find it a far greater medicine than you claimed it to."—S. F. YOUNG, D. D., 697 North Pine St., Natchez, Miss.

At Gay Yuletide.

All hail the genial time of year
 When every heart is kind,
When far and near there is good cheer
 And care is left behind.

Old feuds forgot, old hates aside,
 Now hearty clasps of hand,
While far and wide at Christmastide
 Love reigns throughout the land.

Forgive, forget, a truce to pride;
 Healed are all friendship's rifts.
At gay Yuletide on every side
 We're "worked" for Christmas gifts.

Serpent Worship in India.

Serpent worship, once very widely diffused, survives in India. Sometimes when Hindoos find a cobra in some crevice in the wall of their house it will often be reverenced, fed and propitiated, and if fear or the death of some one bitten by it induces them to remove it they will handle it tenderly and let it loose in some field. When Hindoos are bitten, they have far more confidence in their magic spell or "muntra" than in any medicine, even if they do not scruple to make use of medical aid.

Miss Agnes Miller, of Chicago, speaks to young women about dangers of the Menstrual Period.

"To Young Women:—I suffered for six years with dysmenorrhea (painful periods), so much so that I dreaded every month, as I knew it meant three or four days of intense pain. The doctor said this was due to an inflamed condition of the uterine appendages caused by repeated and neglected colds.

"If young girls only realized how dangerous it is to take cold at this critical time, much suffering would be spared them. Thank God for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, that was the only medicine which helped me any. Within three weeks after I started to take it, I noticed a marked improvement in my general health, and at the time of my next monthly period the pain had diminished considerably. I kept up the treatment, and was cured a month later. I am like another person since I am in perfect health, my eyes are brighter, I have added 13 pounds to my weight, my color is good, and I feel light and happy."—Miss Agnes Miller, 25 Potomac Ave., Chicago, Ill.—$5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

The monthly sickness reflects the condition of a woman's health. Anything unusual at that time should have prompt and proper attention.

This Is Miraculous.

Manhattan, Kans., March 14.—One of the strangest cases that has ever been heard of in Riley Co. is that of the three-year-old daughter of Mr. Jonas Brubaker of this place.

Some time ago the little girl took whooping cough, which was followed by pneumonia. When the pneumonia left her, she was taken down with malaria fever with at times symptoms of Spinal Meningitis.

The family doctor brought her safely through these troubles, but after the fever Bright's Disease set in and the doctors gave her up. Her father tells the rest of the story:

"We began to give her Dodd's Kidney Pills and after she had taken about three and a half boxes, she was entirely cured. Now she is well as any child, running and playing on if nothing had ever been the matter with her. The doctors said she was beyond the reach of medicine. Dodd's Kidney Pills certainly saved our little girl's life, when she was so far into the chronic stage of Bright's Disease that we thought nothing could save her."

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Unique Display.

Elaborate preparations are being made by Coss & Co., of Eveleth, for a moose, caribou, elk and deer display at the world's fair at St. Louis. J. C. Congdon, a representative of the firm, is in St. Louis, securing a site for a building and to let the contract for its erection. William Coss, the senior member of the firm, owns or controls between 150 and 175 mounted moose, deer, caribou and elk heads, and these, in addition to many mounted ducks, geese, prairie chickens and birds of the Minnesota forests and lakes, will go to make up a scientific display. Two live moose, a stuffed bear and other wild animals are also included in the list for the exhibit. Another feature will be four buck Indians and two squaws, to be taken from the Sucker Point reservation. The bucks will demonstrate how birch bark canoes are made and the squaws will be engaged in bead work and making moccasins.

A Blow at Grafters.

If present plans carry, the grafters of Minnesota will have a hard time during the approaching campaign to mulct the many candidates out of the price of a drink of beer or whisky or a keg of beer or ale as the case may be.

It will also be tough sledding for the gentlemen who are always just a little short on ready cash just about the time the candidate puts in his appearance and wants to negotiate a loan of five or ten for a few days, and then forgets to pay it back.

When the members of the Minnesota delegation in congress return home after the adjournment they will hold meetings in their respective districts which will be attended by all the candidates for nomination on the Republican ticket. They will devise means whereby they will be protected from the "grafters" who are always about during a campaign.

It is stated that the Democrats in Minnesota intend to adopt a similar plan.

A Queer Accident.

An accident occured to a logging train near Burwell that has proved more serious than the first report suggested. One of the cars broke in two and the front part derailed, the engine dragging it for a distance of between five and six miles. One of the wheels on the front truck was broken off, and the engine dragging it over the ties, caused it to act as a huge saw or knife, cutting off the ends of the ties in pieces about a foot long and hurling them upon the track in front of the car. This went on for the entire distance between Burwell and the Northern Pacific junction before the engineer noticed it, cutting off the ends of over 10,000 ties.

The story seemed almost incredible, but is nevertheless a fact. All travel over that piece is necessarily slow, while all freight traffic is suspended. It will take several days to repair the damage.

Horticultural Society.

The Red River Valley Horticultural society met at Crookston for its first annual gathering and permanent organization. The association was started at a farmers' institute held at Crookston last year, but officers were not selected. Representatives of the fruit growing industry from various points in the valley gathered and after an interesting session choose Frank T. Haseltine of Crookston president, O. J. Hagen of Hendrum vice-president, T. A. Hoverstad of Crookston secretary and A. E. Cannon of Detroit, treasurer.

Wyman Elliott, president, and A. W. Latham, secretary of the state association, delivered addresses; Frank T. Haselstine, the pioneer nurseryman of the valley, O. A. Solem of Norman county, who has been successful in growing apples, and Mr. Cannon of Detroit read papers, and all reported success in some of the lines followed.

Badly Burned.

Mrs. Snyder, wife of Prof. Harry Snyder, professor of chemistry at the school of agriculture, was horribly burned at her home, 2900 Commonwealth avenue, St. Paul, and is said to be in a critical condition.

Miss Hansen, a servant, who went to Mrs. Snyder, was also badly burned about the arms and face. The house was set on fire, and the rear portion of it burned away, causing a loss of $500. The accident had been caused by a skirt that had been cleaned by gasoline catching fire. Altho Mrs. Snyder's condition is serious it is thought she will recover.

Lumbering.

Seventy squatters from the Twin Cities and other towns in Minnesota who have taken up the greater portion of an unsurveyed township in Itasca county, have formed the Northern Minnesota Log and Timber company, for the purpose of marketing their product direct, without having to contribute the middleman's profit. They will put in a sawmill, cut off the timber and dispose of it to the open market.

He Didn't Have to Prove It.

The other day a stranger stepped off the train at Hopkins and said to a man on the depot platform: "Can you tell me who is the best lawyer in this town?" "I am," replied the man on the platform without hesitation. The stranger seemed somewhat disconcerted by this display of egotism and gently said: "Excuse me, sir, but I should like to have you prove it." "Don't have to prove it, sir," answered the man on the platform. "I admit it. I am the only lawyer in the town, sir." And immediately the stranger got a lawyer and the lawyer got a client.—Kansas City Journal.

"I write to let you know how I appreciate your Cascarets. I commenced taking them last November and took two ten cent boxes and passed a tape-worm 14 ft. long. Then I commenced taking them again and Wednesday, April 4th, I passed another tape worm 28 ft. long and over a thousand small worms. Previous to my taking Cascarets I didn't know I had a tape-worm. Love Triumphs Over Death

Love is a spirit throbbing through all life
To utterance delicate. The frailest flower,
By love inspired, a miracle of power,
Defies the weight of earth, the tempest's strife,
And blossoms gladly in the darkest hour.

Each living thing is taught by Love to hide
Its form and colors in a chosen cell
That it may safely pass the gates of hell.
But in that narrow tomb it must abide
Until the force of Love shall break the shell.

Death is to Love a kindly door that leads
To clearer vision and to fairer scene,
E'en though the cross of sorrow stand between,
For Love has strength unto life's utmost needs;
And, knowing this, I go my way serene.

Charles Eugene Banks

"THAT CITY TENOR"

An Easter Story Which Proves That Love Will Find a Way

By MANDA L. CROCKER

"BAH! Who ever heard of an oratorio being sung at Eams, anyway? And what do I care for that city tenor? It isn't much of a singer who would condescend to sing at the Cross Roads' church, I know, and I've a good notion to not go home; so there!"

Rena Waring gave a freshly laundered shirt waist a spiteful little thrust, by way of schoolgirl emphasis, as she knelt beside an open suit-case, flushed and tearful. After a moment's hesitation the trembling fingers began their task of folding carefully a lovely Easter gown which was meant to be worn on a far different occasion than a prosaic home-going to hear a "botch of an oratorio at Eams."

"I'VE A NOTION NOT TO GO HOME."

But Judge Waring had decreed that his daughter should not spend Easter week with the Burns family. "Good people, to be sure," he had said, "but not aristocratic."

"Of course," exclaimed Rena, hotly, as the silken folds of the beautiful dress glinted in the April sun, hinting at the prospective good times from which it had been so rudely divorced; "of course papa aims all his protests against Welcome simply because he hasn't a million in his own right, and because he worked his way through college.

"But, O dear! I will have to go home after all. Mamma expects me, now, and besides I have sent my regrets to the Burns'. But," she added, maliciously, "I really should rejoice with exceeding joy if Papa Waring's city tenor broke down right in the middle of that Waring oratorio."

"O fudge!" Max Hessinger tossed a scrawl into the waste-basket and curled his aristocratic lip. "I wasn't born to sing among the mossbacks," he said, disgustedly. "Fancy the leading tenor of Grace Street church wading through an oratorio with a lot of country gawkies, without a life-preserver, all for the magnificent sum of $50. Of course I shall not go. Ha-ha! But stop. I have an idea," and he went [illegible] to the 'phone.

"O, yes, you can!" he said, assuringly, as the fellow at the other end raised objections. "Of course you can. Take that old oratorio that the Pilgrim Fathers considered stale, with you. They have been practicing on that for a month, Hayseed informs me, so take it and go out Saturday. You are Max Hessinger, now, for a week, mind, and are perfectly welcome to the $50 and all the fun you can get out of it. Obedience, now, old fellow. Good-by."

On Saturday afternoon at precisely three o'clock Rena Waring fell plump into the arms of pater-familias, suit-case and all, and the train crept away as if ashamed of leaving such a discontented budget of girlhood at such a contented crossing.

"Come right over to the church, Rena," said her father, after the usual greeting, "and see the decorations before we go up to the house. I tell you Eams has simply gone beyond all former efforts; and that professional singer will be surprised to see the Cross Roads putting on real city airs.

"He comes at four o'clock," he continued, confidentially, "and I want you to meet him, Rena; they do say he is fine." A queer little disdainful pucker played around Miss Rena's mouth as she crossed the street and followed her paternal care-taker into the church. Truly the modest little auditorium was a marvel of floral beauty. Ferns, smilax, callas and real Easter lilies adorned the simple altar and nodded from every imaginable nook and recess.

On any other occasion but this particular one Miss Rena would have gone into ecstasies over the really exquisite picture; but as it was, she merely said "quite fine," and stepped from the vestibule with an air of "all this is but common," and a very elevated chin.

The judge was puzzled and disappointed more than he was willing to admit, knowing that his daughter was so fond of flowers. "Never mind," he said to himself, "it's that beggar, Burns, coming in between."

Up at the house Rena found her mother and Kitty in primp attire and the rooms in gala dress.

"The singer is to stop with us," explained Mamma Waring.

The suit-case and its owner disappeared upstairs as if by magic.

"Heavens!" she exclaimed, with rebellious inflection, "papa is determined that I shall meet this musical prodigy, whether I will or not!" Then, after a little consideration, she added, mischievously: "O, well, I will meet him."

Taking a hasty bath, Miss Waring twisted her wealth of hair into a very unbecoming pug, and donning an old, faded gown, without ribbon or ornament, descended the stairs.

At the foot she met her expectant father.

"Good gracious!" he exclaimed. "You are a fright, Rena. Mr. Hessinger is now in the parlor and I want you to meet him; but I will never introduce such a dilapidated rag-bag as my daughter. Did your mother not tell you that the tenor was to stop with us?"

"Yes, papa—but—"

The parlor door opened slightly and the guest was heard saying: "I should be pleased to train the young people after tea."

If Miss Rena had meant to offer any demur it was suddenly put to flight. As a bird flies to the covert, so did she seek the privacy of the blue and white boudoir, sacred to the presence of the eldest daughter of the judge.

"What can it mean?" she gasped, staring at the dimpled reflection in the mirror which, between a cry and a laugh, presented a ludicrous appearance.

"Papa never prevaricates; he's always right out with everything, but that accomplished personage downstairs is not Max Hessinger, whoever else he may be. There's some mistake

RENA CHANGED HER MAKEUP.

—there could be a substitute— [illegible] something queerly. [illegible] little hysterical giggle [illegible] connected confidences.

The very unbecoming pug [illegible] down at once and a very becoming [illegible] of wavy [illegible] planted it; the old gown was hustled back into the closet, and a pretty, [illegible] make-up enveloped Miss Rena as if by magic, and all the while numerous half-suppressed "Oh's!" and "My [illegible]" alternated as safety valves at this trying time.

Meantime the judge fidgeted in the hall. "She's always on the contrary part," he growled; "now if that beggarly Burns had half the prestige of this accomplished tenor, she and I would get on better. I have never seen him—I don't want to—but I've heard enough—he's one of those threadbare gentry which makes me sick. I—but here comes Rena. I hope she likes Max Hessinger."

After rehearsal there was still time for a song at the Warings. Miss Rena's dignity thawed out satisfactorily and she presided at the piano while the handsome musical director sang a solo in the most approved style of quiver-quaver extant.

Easter night the silken gown shimmered and twinkled in the soft light of the auditorium and Miss Rena smiled happily as if no city tenor had broken up her plans for its debut.

The large, appreciative audience fairly held its breath as the wonderful oratorio began; then sank back into blissful content to drink in the harmony of an old-fashioned Resurrection number.

After services all Eams craned its neck to see the accomplished tenor and Miss Rena walk confidentially home together. And when the judge entered the parlor the two were conversing in low tones; but his daughter came forward at once, saying: "There has been some mistake about the tenor's name, papa."

"How?" interrogated the judge, a sudden premonition of defeat seizing him.

"Max Hessinger sent a substitute, papa."

"N—no!" stammered the judge. "Why, I called him Mr. Hessinger from the first, waiting for no introduction."

"And I hadn't the heart to undeceive you until the oratorio was over," apologized the handsome tenor. "I was afraid it might spoil your confidence in my musical ability, as well as affect the audience, sir. I humbly beg your pardon, my name is Welcome Burns; perhaps you have heard Miss Rena speak of me."

For once the judge was circumvented, but he was game. He extended his hand, saying: "I bid you a kindly welcome to my home. I have almost hated you 'sight unseen.'"

"And I hated the city tenor," confessed Miss Rena, laughing a little.

"Seeing is believing," smiled her father; "now we shall agree."

"Mamma!" cried the daughter, through the open doorway, "papa and I have agreed at last."

Stopping an Artery.

The prompt application of the tourniquet or even of the finger to stop the bleeding of an artery before the doctor comes will often save life. A wound anywhere below the middle of the upper arm or below the middle of the thigh may be easily stopped by a tourniquet. The simplest improvised form of this implement, which may be always found ready to hand, is a linen handkerchief and a strong stick. The best place to apply the tourniquet for a wound of the arm is above the elbow, where the pulsations of an artery may be felt by any one.

The handkerchief should be tied around the arm rather loosely; the stick is thrust in and turned to tighten it until the blood ceases to flow. Of course this is only a temporary relief [illegible] the responsibility of the doctor, who in case of serious bleeding, must be summoned as soon as possible. When you have nothing at hand in case of sudden accident even the pressure of the [illegible] and the thumb over the [illegible] the time.

The People Next Door.

The reason why the people next door are invariably regarded as most unworthy [illegible] is plain to me. They [illegible] a piano, I do not know of any[illegible] that is quite so unpleasant as the people next door. They are not like any ordinary people who live elsewhere. They obtain their music on the hire system, as it were, and it is generally of the type we most detest. Are we worldly minded? They chasten us obtrusively with hymns or Mendelssohn, who is for some obscure reason regarded as a moral force in the suburbs. Are we of the elect? They hurl at us with defiant persistency the latest blood curdler from the "halls." The thing that passes with them for a piano is called upon to do the work of three, and the wall dividing our respective houses, be it borne in mind, is a beautiful conductor of sound.—Outlook.

Nature's Distillery.

Chemists at one time believed that petroleum was formed in the depths of the earth by the action of water working on metallic carbons in a state of fusion. Now that statement is challenged by some geologists, who contend that petroleum is the result of putrefaction of animals which ages ago were swallowed in enormous cataclysms, similar to that at Mont Pelee. This upheaval, says Professor Engler, buried millions of prehistoric quadrupeds, lizards, serpents and sea monsters, and during all the cycles of years that have elapsed since then the bodies of these animals have been distilled by Mother Nature in her immense laboratory beneath the earth's surface. The result of this distillation, according to this theory, is petroleum.

Joy and Sorrow.

Joy, they say, is a sensation similar to sorrow. It merely hurts along lines that we enjoy. We go to the theater, weep over a teary play and are delightfully sad. Some people's greatest joy lies in being sad.

What a remarkably interesting study must humanity be to the scientists of the lower kingdom!—San Francisco Bulletin.

Oddly Marked Tombstone.

In an old graveyard in Maine the monument to the founder of a distinguished family is marked with the outline of a human leg. It is formed by black streaks in the granite running through the stone, for at the back there is another leg, but much smaller in dimensions. Nobody saw this blemish when the stone was set up. Not until years had passed did any one notice it. People concluded that the stonecutters, not wishing to go to the expense of quarrying out another block, so hid the leg with cement and stone dust that the actions of the storms of a dozen winters were necessary to expose the strangely formed disfigurement.

Knocked Down by a Wounded Bull, He Was Repeatedly Gored by the Infuriated Animal.

Mr. W. T. Hornaday, the director of the Bronx zoo, in New York, has had a large experience of hand to hand combats with wild animals, but if he is asked to tell the story of one of them he prefers to recount what happened to an Anglo-Indian friend of his, Mr. Rhodes Morgan, when the latter tracked down a wounded buffalo in an Indian jungle.

"I wasn't there," says Mr. Hornaday, "but this is the story as Morgan tells

it. The buffalo suddenly charged out from a dense mass of undergrowth with a snort like a steam engine and sent Morgan flying through the air. He fell on his back and was immediately struck a blow [illegible] made them spring [illegible] of a hencoop [illegible] sitting on it.

"Morgan says that he felt his last hour had come. The brute struck him with his head [illegible], sometimes [illegible] his [illegible] and legs, sometimes on his [illegible] sometimes he butted [illegible] in his blind fury. The blood [illegible]ed in a stream from the animal's open mouth, and the hot breath from his nostrils sent that blood in sprays all over the prostrate man.

"Morgan, though conscious, lay quite still. Presently the buffalo stopped and looked at him. Imagining that he was dead, he slowly walked away a short distance and stood eying the body malevolently.

"There was a big tree stump near by, and Morgan thought if he could only drag himself behind it he might be safe. He began to draw himself along, bit by bit, but in an instant the bull rushed at him again and struck him several fearful blows.

"'All this time,' said Morgan in telling me the story, 'no fewer than six native beaters had been calmly looking on, and I heard one of them say: "Dear me! The buffalo is killing the sahib!" And another said, "Send for the shikaree to shoot it." (The shikaree was two miles away, with my tiffin basket and spare gun!) But presently one of the beaters uttered the most diabolical yell I ever heard in my life. The bull instantly threw up his head, turned tail and dashed away in terror. If only that beater had yelled at first I might have been saved from being pounded almost to a jelly.'

"You would have thought that Morgan had had enough of that bull, but his bulldog English spirit was aroused. He waited for the shikaree to arrive with the extra gun, his own having been broken by the infuriated animal, and then followed the trail, his natives supporting him.

"They found the buffalo standing in open ground near by, wounded and weak from exhaustion. Morgan fired twice, but he could hardly hold the gun, and the shots went wild. The buffalo fled some distance and then stood still again on another piece of open ground. Morgan got within twenty yards of him, when he charged and received the contents of two barrels. He fell, and a bullet through the heart finished him.

"Morgan sank helplessly to the ground beside the carcass. His natives carried him home, and he was confined to his bed for a fortnight, his whole body being black and blue."

Stopping an Artery.

The prompt application of the tourniquet or even of the finger to stop the bleeding of an artery before the doctor comes will often save life. A wound anywhere below the middle of the upper arm or below the middle of the thigh may be easily stopped by a tourniquet. The simplest improvised form of this implement, which moy be always found ready to hand, is a linen handkerchief and a strong stick. The best place to apply the tourniquet for a wound of the arm is ohove tho elbow, where tha pulsations of an artery may be felt by any one.

The handkerchief should be tied around the arm rather loosely; the stick is thrust in and turned to tighten it until the blood cases to flow. Of course this is only a temporary relief [illegible] moned as soon as possible. When you have nothing at hand in a case of [illegible] den accident even the pressure of the [illegible] finger and the thumb over [illegible] the time.

The reason why [illegible] are invariably [illegible] most [illegible] javelins is plain to me. They [illegible] a piano. I do not know [illegible] that is quite so unpleasant as the people next door. They are bot like any ordinary people who live elsewhere. They obtain their music on the hire system, as it were, and it is generally of the type we most detest. Are we worldly minded? They chasten us obtrusively with hymns of Mendelssohn, who is for some obscure resson regarded as a moral force in the suburbs. Are we of the elect? They burl at us with defiant persistency the latest blood curdler from tho "halls." The thing that passes with them for a piano is called upon to do the work of three, and the wall dividing our respective houses, be it borne in mind, is a beautiful conductor of sound.—Outlook.

Nature's Distillery.

Chemists at one time believed that petroleum was formed in the depths of the earth by the action of water working on metallic carbons in a state of fusion. Now that statement is challenged by some geologists, who contend that petroleum is tha result of putrefaction of animals which ages ago were swallowed in enormous cataclysms, similar to that at Mont Pelee. This upheaval, says Professor Engler, buried millions of prehistoric quadrupeds, lizards, serpents and sea monsters, and during all the cycles of years that have elapsed since then tha bodies of these animals have been distilled by Mother Nature in her immense laboratory beneath the earth's surface. The result of this distillation, according to this theory, is petroleum.

Joy and Sorrow.

Joy, they say, is a sensation similar to sorrow. It merely burts along lines that we enjoy. Wa go to the theater, weep over a teary play and are delightfully sad. Soma peopie's greatest joy lies in being sad.

Oddly Marked Tombstone.

In an old gravsyard in Maine the monument to the founder of a distinguisbed family is marked with the outline of a human leg. It is formed by black streaks in the granite running through the stone, for at the back there is another leg, but much smaller in dimensions. Nobody saw this blemish when the stone was set up. Not until years had passed did any one notice it. People concluded that the stonecutters, not wishing to go to the expense of quarrying out another block, so hid the leg with cement and stone dust that the [illegible] were necessary to expose the [illegible] formed disfigurement.

Calendars of the Aztecs.

Calendars are probably the oldest form of literature in the world. The cards which appear by the millions in all civilized countries nowadays have their countarpart among the most ancient known races. The Aztecs, for example, were well supplied with calendars, and several of them have been preserved to this day. They were published in stone and set up in public places.

Dante Rossetti's Practical Joker.

One day Howell picked up a treasure in the form of a piece of old blue Nankin. He invited a party of friends to come and admire it, and Rossetti surreptitiously carried it home with him and invited the same party to come and view an equally fine piece of china in his own possession. But Howell had his revenge. Guessing what had happened, he found his way to Rossetti's hiding place, took away the china and put another dish in its place. When the party assembled Rossetti was challenged to produce the china.

He returned to the dining room with the package and began to carefully remove the wrappings. As the dish became uncovered a curious puzzled expression came over his face, and when it was entirely exposed to view he stood still in blank astonishment. For a few moments he was silent; then his pent up feelings burst out in a wild cry:

"Confound it! See what the spirits have done!"

Every one rose to look at the dish. A dish it was certainly, but what a dish! Instead of the beautiful piece of Nankin that was expected there was only an old delft thing, cracked, chipped and discolored through the numerous bakings it had undergone.

Seven Bells.

Everybody who knows anything about nautical matters understands the method of keeping time at sea—eight bells every four hours, an additional bell being struck for each half hour.

From 6 to 8 in the evening is the second dog watch, but on British ships seven bells (half past 7) of the second dog watch are never struck. All other ships, even the American, strike these bells.

During the Napoleonic wars there was a great mutiny in the British navy. The crews of the fleets lying at Spithead and the Nore agreed to rise simultaneously against their officers. The signal agreed upon was seven bells of the second dog watch. The mutiny actually began at the arranged time, but failed, the ringleaders being executed. Ever since then seven bells of the second dog watch has never been struck on British ships, naval or mercantile.

Immortelles.

The manufacture of immortelle wreaths in Paris occupies at least 1,500 persons. The immortelles are gathered about the beginning of October and come chiefly from the arid hills in the middle and south of France. They are brought to the markets in their natural condition, and the yellow blossoms are dyed green, red and white and woven into wreaths by special workmen in readiness for All Saints' and All Souls' days, when all good Parisians visit their relatives' graves. On these "fetes des morts" the gates of the cemeteries are beset with crowds of dealers in immortelle wreaths, wire crosses and bead crowns. At Pere la Chaise alone more than 200,000 persons are calculated to visit the cemetery, and the sale of immortelle wreaths varies from 20,000 to 25,000.—Golden Penny.

Soulanges Canal.

Soulanges canal, fourteen miles in length, is the largest waterway on the St. Lawrence system of canals and undoubtedly of vast importance to Canadian commerce. Many difficulties had to be overcome in its construction, not the least of which was to avoid upsetting the course of three rivers. This was accomplished by providing pipes, which allowed the rivers to pass under the canal. Needless to say, the canal is not a very deep one.

Queer Anatomy.

Curious ideas about anatomy prevail in the press. It was stated the other day that a man was "shot in the ticket office." Another paper says a man was "shot in the suburbs." "He kissed her passionately upon her reappearance," "She whipped him upon his return," "He kissed her back," "Mr. Jones walked in upon her invitation," "She seated herself upon his entering," "We thought she sat down upon her being asked," "She fainted upon his departure."

Melody and Music.

Melody was the beginning and ever will be the essence of music through all ages. The Greeks based their melody on the tetrachord system, which they may have copied from the natural melody in human speech. Gregorian chants, Protestant hymn tunes, many national melodies and other musical themes are based on natural melody in human speech.

Dimensions of Noah's Ark.

"Within recent years," says the editor of the Syren and Shipping, "the general dimensions of the ark have been closely followed by cargo steamship builders for deep sea and the American great lakes service. According to the Bible, the ark was 480 feet long, 80 feet wide and 48 feet deep. Her tonnage was 11,413, and she had plenty of room for pairs of all the distinct species of animals that are classed by Buffon—244—and she could have accommodated a thousand persons and then have plenty of room for the storage of supplies. In the seventeenth century Peter Jansen, a Hollander, built a vessel of the exact proportions of the ark, and she was successful, as records of the times show, in making money for her owners. Noah, 'the father of naval architecture,' is held in profound respect by naval architects of today, who know how immeasurably the Phoenicians, Greeks and Romans and all other shipbuilders fell short of the excellence of the type of the ark as a commodious, safe and economical vessel."

Heels Half a Yard High.

The streets of the old city of Venice were often extremely thick in mud, in spite of the great sewers which dated from the tenth century. Even now the thoroughfares between the Piazza and Rialto are sometimes sufficiently bad. We are writing of the time when the population was nearly five times what it now is, and when Venetian trade was at its zenith. Well, to combat this mud the ladies took to high heeled shoes.

As the mud grew worse the heels became taller and taller until at length they were half a yard high and as difficult to control as a pair of stilts without handles. The consequence was that a lady in full dress, obliged to walk but a few yards, had to be supported on both sides. This was a task for the black pages or for the lovers, who had at that time become a very conventional part of Venetian society.

An authority on horses says the gray will live the longest and that roans come next in order. Blacks seldom live to be over twenty, and creams rarely exceed fifteen.

A "Friday" Ship.

A true story is told of a skeptical Massachusetts captain who, 'way back in the early years of the republic, determined to exhibit the fallacy of the Friday superstition. He contracted on a certain Friday for the building of a ship, and it was arranged that the keel of this vessel was laid on Friday, that she was launched on a Friday, named Friday, commenced loading on a Friday and hauled into the stream on the same day of the week. To add to the possibilities of disaster, a negro cook named Friday was engaged, and, thus fully freighted with the sinister name, the Friday sailed on a Friday, bound to a port in the West Indies. From that day to this no tidings of the ill conditioned craft have been received.

Feast of Fools.

The best authorities agree that the origin of the ancient custom of celebrating a feast of fools is unknown. Some identify it with the Roman feast of fools on March 31. But why did the Romans institute the feast of fools? In India March 31 is "the huli festival," when all manner of pranks are played upon the heedless. But, again, where did the Hindoos get it? The French call the April fool "un poisson d'Avril" (April fish). To the Scotch he is a "gawk" (a cuckoo).

Wakeful?

Sleeplessness Is a Sign of Nerve Trouble and Should Be Looked To.

There are three different manifestations of sleeplessness.

First, hardly to sleep a wink all night, second, to lie awake a long time before falling asleep; third, to fall asleep soon, waking up after several hours and then find it hard to sleep again.

They mean that somewhere in the nerve fibres, somewhere in the brain cells, somewhere in the blood vessels that carry blood to the brain, something is radically wrong, and must be righted, or the end may be worse than death.

To right it, take Dr. Miles' Nervine.

Some other symptoms of nervo trouble are: Dizziness, Headache, Backache, Worry, Fretfulness, Irritability, Melancholy, Lack of Ambition.

They indicate diseases which may lead to Epilepsy, Fits, St. Vitus' Dance, Nervous Prostration, Paralysis, Insanity.

Nothing will give such quick and lasting relief as Dr. Miles' Nervine.

"My husband had been sick for weeks, could not sit up to have his bed made. With all the medical help we could get he continued to grow worse. He could neither sleep or eat. Our baby girl was sent away and all callers barred, because he could not stand a bit of talking. [illegible] case of nervous prostration cured by Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. Pilgrims and Puritans.

The pilgrims were a body of English nonconformists who emigrated from Holland and settled Plymouth colony in 1620. The Puritans were a body of nonseparatist religious reformers from England who in 1629-30 founded and settled the Massachusetts Bay colony. The two bodies united in 1692 under the name of Massachusetts.

Simply Social. That's All.

"Yes," said Mrs. Wordsworth, "the family is most interesting. John dances divinely. Tom sings like an angel. David is a famous footballer. Susanna paints with great taste."

"And Henry?"

"Oh, Henry! Well, he's a rather dull sort of a fellow, you know. He only works and supports the others."—Chicago Journal.

Mistaken.

"I suppose you thought you were fishing when you caught me?" growled the man who is always disagreeable.

"Well, I used to think so," sighed his little wife, "but now I know I must have been bear hunting."

Theater Audiences.

A theater audience is fickle and not infrequently cruel, but it must be won. Augustin Daly had several ways of testing it. One was to station men in his employ at convenient points where they could hear the comments and judge whether the play was making an impression. But a test upon which he depended more was to listen himself at the moment when the curtain went down upon an act. If he saw people turning to one another eagerly and making quick comments he knew that they were being moved, whether for praise or blame. But if the talk began slowly after the curtain fell he was perfectly sure that the play had excited no interest—a worse fate than blame.

It is a favorite way of players to pick out some one person in the audience—one with a sympathetic countenance—and to play to him or her, and to judge by success from the expression seen there. The trouble is that the people in the front rows are often the regulars, who feel little emotion and show less, and who may be still unmoved when the rest of the audience is in ecstasy. If they could know the distress and the woe they cause—well, then they would not be the regulars.—New York Mail.

Genius finds its own road and carries its own lamp.—Willmott.

Charity.

It is simply wonderful the charity we would give and the sympathy we feel for suffering men at a distance, but remain heedless of the wants of those who are our neighbors.—Concord [illegible]

Dante Rossetti's Practical Joker.

One day Howell picked up a treasure in the form of a piece of old blue Nankin. He invited a party of friends to come and admire it, and Rossetti surreptitiously carried it home with him and invited the same party to come and view an equally fine piece of china in his own possession. But Howell had his revenge. Guessing what had happened, he found his way to Rossetti's hiding place, took away the china and put another dish in its place. When the party assembled Rossetti was challenged to produce the china. He returned to the dining room with the package and began to carefully remove the wrappings. As the dish became uncovered a curious puzzled expression came over his face, and when it was entirely exposed to view he stood still in blank astonishment. For a few moments he was silent; then his pent up feelings burst out in a wild cry:

"Confound it! See what the spirits have done!"

Every one rose to look at the dish. A dish it was certainly, but what a dish! Instead of the beautiful piece of Nankin that was expected there was only an old delft thing, cracked, chipped and discolored through the numerous mishaps it had undergone.

Seven Bells.

Everybody who knows anything about nautical matters understands the method of keeping time at sea—eight bells every four hours, an additional bell being struck for each half hour. From 6 to 8 in the evening is the second dog watch, but on British ships seven bells [illegible] of the second dog watch are never struck. All other ships, even the American, strike them. [illegible]

During the Napoleonic wars there was a great mutiny in the British navy. The crews of the fleets lying at Spithead and the Nore agreed to rise simultaneously against their officers. The signal agreed upon was seven bells of the second dog watch. The mutiny actually began at the arranged time, but failed, the ringleaders being executed. Ever since then seven bells of the second dog watch has never been struck on British ships, naval or mercantile.

Immortelles.

The manufacture of immortelle wreaths in Paris occupies at least 1,500 persons. The immortelles are gathered about the beginning of October and come chiefly from the arid hills in the middle and south of France. They are brought to the markets in their natural condition, and the yellow blossoms are dyed green, red and white and woven into wreaths by special workmen in readiness for All Saints' and All Souls' days, when all good Parisians visit their relatives' graves. On these "fetes des morts" the gates of the cemeteries are beset with crowds of dealers in immortelle wreaths, wire crosses and bead crowns. At Pere la Chaise alone more than 200,000 persons are calculated to visit the cemetery, and the sale of immortelle wreaths varies from 20,000 to 25,000.—Golden Penny.

Soulanges Canal.

Soulanges canal, fourteen miles in length, is the largest waterway on the St. Lawrence system of canals and undoubtedly of vast importance to Canadian commerce. Many difficulties had to be overcome in its construction, not the least of which was to avoid upsetting the course of three rivers. This was accomplished by providing pipes, which allowed the rivers to pass under the canal. Needless to say, the canal is not a very deep one.

Queer Anatomy.

Curious ideas about anatomy prevail in the press. It was stated the other day that a man was "shot in the ticket office." Another paper says a man was "shot in the suburbs." "He kissed her passionately upon her reappearance," "She whipped him upon his return," "He kissed her back," "Mr. Jones walked in upon her invitation," "She seated herself upon his entering," "We thought she sat down upon her being asked," "She fainted upon his departure."

Melody and Music.

Melody was the beginning and ever will be the essence of music through all ages. The Greeks based their melody on the tetrachord system, which they may have copied from the natural melody in human speech. Gregorian chants, Protestant hymn tunes, many national melodies and other musical themes are based on natural melody in human speech.

Dimensions of Noah's Ark.

"Within recent years," says the editor of the Syren and Shipping, "the general dimensions of the ark have been closely followed by cargo steamship builders for deep sea and the American great lakes service. According to the Bible, the ark was 480 feet long, 80 feet wide and 48 feet deep. Her tonnage was 11,413, and she had plenty of room for pairs of all the distinct species of animals that are classed by Buffon, 244, and she could have accommodated a thousand persons and then have plenty of room for the storage of supplies. In the seventeenth century [illegible] Janson, a Hollander, built a vessel of the exact proportions of the ark, and she was successful. [illegible] of the times show [illegible] making [illegible] Noah, the father of naval architecture, is held in profound respect by naval architects of today, who know how immeasurably the Phoenicians, Greeks and Romans and all other shipbuilders fell short of the excellence of the type of the ark as a commodious, safe and economical vessel."

Heels Half a Yard High.

The streets of the old city of Venice were often extremely thick in mud, in spite of the great sewers which dated from the tenth century. Even now the thoroughfares between the Piazza and Rialto are sometimes sufficiently bad. We are writing of the time when the population was nearly five times what it now is, and when Venetian trade was at its zenith. Well, to combat this mud the ladies took to high heeled shoes.

As the mud grew worse the heels became taller and taller until at length they were half a yard high and as difficult to control as a pair of stilts without handles. The consequence was that a lady in full dress, obliged to walk but a few yards, had to be supported on both sides. This was a task for the black pages or for the lovers, who had at that time become a very conventional part of Venetian society.

An authority on horses says the gray will live the longest and that roans come next in order. Blacks seldom live to be over twenty, and creams rarely exceed fifteen.

A "Friday" Ship.

A true story is told of a skeptical Massachusetts captain who, way back in the early years of the republic, determined to exhibit the fallacy of the Friday superstition. He contracted on a certain Friday for the building of a ship, and it was arranged that the keel of this vessel was laid on Friday, that she was launched on a Friday, named Friday, commenced loading on a Friday and hauled into the stream on the same day of the week. To add to the possibilities of disaster, a negro cook named Friday was engaged, and, thus fully freighted with the sinister name, the Friday sailed on a Friday, bound to a port in the West Indies. From that day to this no tidings of the ill conditioned craft have been received.

Feast of Fools.

The best authorities agree that the origin of the ancient custom of celebrating a feast of fools is unknown. Some identify it with the Roman feast of fools on March 31. But why did the Romans institute the feast of fools? In India March 31 is the huli festival, when all manner of pranks are played upon the heedless. But again, where did the Hindoos get it? The French call the April fool "un poisson d'Avril" (April fish). To the Scotch he is a "gawk" (cuckoo). [illegible]

Wakeful?

Sleeplessness Is a Sign of Nerve Trouble and Should Be Looked To.

There are three different manifestations of sleeplessness.

First, hardly to sleep a wink all night, second, to lie awake a long time before falling asleep; third, to fall asleep soon, waking up after several hours and then find it hard to sleep again.

They mean that somewhere in the nerve fibres, somewhere in the brain cells, somewhere in the blood vessels that carry blood to the brain, something is radically wrong, and must be righted, or the end may be worse than death.

To right it, take Dr. Miles' Nervine.

Some other symptoms of nerve trouble are: Dizziness, Headache, Backache, Worry, Fretfulness, Irritability, Melancholy, Lack of Ambition.

They indicate diseases, which may lead to Epilepsy, Fits, St. Vitus' Dance, Nervous Prostration, Paralysis, Insanity. Nothing will give such quick and lasting relief as Dr. Miles' Nervine.

"My husband had been sick for weeks, could not sit up to have his bed made. With all the medical help we could get he continued to grow worse. He could neither sleep or eat. Our baby girl was sent away, and all callers barred, because he could not stand a bit of talking. It was a bad case of nervous prostration, cured by Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. We began giving it to him, and in a few days he was able to be dressed. From that time he steadily improved. Nervine saved his life."—MRS. A. C. LARKIN, Freeville, N. Y.

Pilgrims and Puritans.

The pilgrims were a body of English nonconformists who emigrated from Holland and settled Plymouth colony in 1620. The Puritans were a body of nonseparatist religious reformers from England who in 1620-30 founded and settled the Massachusetts Bay colony. The two bodies united in 1692 under the name of Massachusetts.

Theater Audiences.

A theater audience is fickle and not infrequently cruel, but it must be won. Augustin Daly had several ways of testing it. One was to station men in his employ at convenient points where they could hear the comments and judge whether the play was making an impression. But a test upon which he depended more was to listen himself at the moment when the curtain went down upon an act. If he saw people turning to one another eagerly and making quick comments he knew that they were being moved, whether for praise or blame. But if the talk began slowly after the curtain fell he was perfectly sure that the play had excited no interest—a worse fate than blame.

It is a favorite way of players to pick out some one person in the audience—one with a sympathetic countenance—and to play to him or her, and to judge by success from the expression seen there. The trouble is that the people in the front rows are often the regulars, who feel little emotion and show less, and who may be still unmoved when the rest of the audience is in ecstasy. If they could know the distress and the woe they cause—well, then they would not be the regulars.—New York Mail.

A Wonderful Discovery.

Broadland, S. Dak., March 28.—Quite a sensation has been created here by the publication of the story of G. W. Gray, who after a special treatment for three months was prostrate and helpless and given up to die with Bright's Disease. Bright's Disease has always been considered incurable, but evidently from the story told by Mr. Gray, there is a remedy which will cure it, even in the most advanced stages. This is what he says:

"I was helpless as a little babe. My wife and I searched everything and read everything we could find about Bright's Disease, hoping that I would be able to find a remedy. After many failures my wife insisted that I should try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I praise God for the day when I decided to do so, for this remedy met every phase of my case and in a short time I was able to get out of bed, and after a few weeks' treatment I was a strong, well man. Dodd's Kidney Pills saved my life."

A remedy that will cure Bright's Disease will cure any lesser Kidney Disease. Dodd's Kidney Pills are certainly the most wonderful discovery which modern medical research has given to the world.

NO APPETITE-EMACIATED-NERVOUS.

Many Women During the Spring Months Suffer From Extreme Lassitude, Loss of Appetite and Nervousness—What They Need Is Pe-ru-na, the Great Tonic.

Miss Bertha M. Rush, 5435 Kincarde street, Pittsburg, Pa., Superintendent Junior Society of Methodist Protestant Church and leading Soprano of the choir, writes: "Words cannot describe my thankfulness to you for Peruna. I was a sufferer from systemic catarrh for years and was in a very much run-down condition. I was extremely nervous and had the most foolish fears over nothing. I was thin and emaciated.

"My physician advised me to leave this climate but as it was not convenient to do so at this time, I took the advice of a friend to use a bottle of Peruna. I took it faithfully and when the first bottle was gone I felt so much better that I bought six more and took them faithfully, after which I looked like a new woman.

"I gained in flesh, my appetite returned and all my old symptoms had disappeared. I am more than thankful to Peruna."—Miss Bertha M. Rush.

MISS BERTHA M. RUSH—PITTSBURG.

Miss Rush Suffered With Systemic Catarrh—Was Nervous, Had No Appetite, Grew Thin and Emaciated. She Now Looks Like a New Woman After a Course of Pe-ru-na.

I AM TIRED.

Everybody is Tired—Spring Weather Does It—Every One Should Be Cautious.

Depression of the nervous system at the approach of spring is the cause.

General lassitude, dull, heavy sensations, continual tired feeling, with irregular appetite, and sometimes loss of sleep. Peruna meets every indication and proves itself to be perfectly adapted to all their varied peculiarities. Peruna invigorates the system, rejuvenates the feelings, restores the normal appetite and produces regular sleep.

That tired feeling which is the natural result of the depressing effect of warm weather immediately after the invigorating cold of winter, quietly disappears when Peruna is taken. Thousands are daily testifying to its priceless benefit.

Mrs. H. Kassatt, 1300 W. 13th street, Des Moines, Ia., writes: "I am happy to give my endorsement for your valuable medicine, Peruna, as I consider it a valuable medicine to take when the system is run down from over work. About two years ago I felt that I must take a long rest as I had been unable to work for over a month and could not regain my strength. I could not sleep at night and was in a very nervous, high strung condition. I decided to try what Peruna would do to build up my strength, and am pleased to say that I began to improve very shortly, and in less than two months I was able to take up my work, and felt better than I have for years. I take it now twice a year and find that it keeps me in perfect health." Mrs. Kassatt was for over ten years the manager of a plant furnishing ladies' wear and employing hundreds of women.

Tired, Nervous Women.

There are thousands of them everywhere. A few bottles of Peruna would do them untold benefit. As a tonic and nerve invigorator it has no equal. It builds up the nerves, it gives strength to the circulation and at once restores the appetite and digestion. No feeble woman should be without Peruna.

Might Have Been Worse.

"John!" whispered Mrs. Swackhammer, hoarsely. "John, wake up! In the basement—hear them—they're—they're working in the basement——"

"Wh-wh-what!" gasped Swack. He dived under the pillow and clutched his pocketbook. "What is it?"

"B-b-burglars!" chattered poor Mrs. Swackhammer. "Don't you hear them——"

"Aw, rats!" said Swack as he lay down and prepared for sleep again. "You scared me nearly to death. I thought it was plumbers."—San Francisco Bulletin.

HAPPY WOMEN.

Wouldn't any woman be happy,
After years of backache suffering,
Days of misery, nights of unrest,
The distress of urinary troubles,
She finds relief and cure?
No reason why any reader
Should suffer in the face of evidence like this:

Mrs. Almira A. Jackson, of East Front St., Traverse City, Mich., says: "For twenty years I never knew what it was to have good health. Every physician consulted said I had liver trouble but their medicines did me no good. Just before I began using Doan's Kidney Pills I was almost paralyzed. I could hardly stand on my feet because of the numbness and lack of circulation. Had a knife been thrust into my kidneys the pain could not have been more intense. My sleep was disturbed by visions of distorted figures. The kidney secretions were annoyingly irregular and I was tortured with thirst and always bloated. I used seven boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills. The bloating subsided until I weighed one hundred pounds less, could sleep like a child and was relieved of the pain and the irregularity of the kidney action. My circulation is good and I feel better in every way."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mrs. Jackson will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists, price 50 cents per box.

TWO APRIL FIRST LETTERS

By MRS. CLARA S. COLTON

JEFFREY RANSON prided himself upon his ability at getting off jokes on others and his shrewdness in seeing through any attempt at a return of the compliment. The month of March always found him busy planning new tricks for the first of April. He even let the subject absorb his thoughts during the day at the store. His absent-mindedness necessitated the repetition of questions by customers and directions by head clerks until a sharp reproof from the floor walker brought his wits back to the duties in hand.

The evening of March 31 Jeffrey spent in getting his joke materials ready for the next day, and in disposing of those for which darkness was best. He mailed several invitations to parties that existed only in his fancy; he dropped false orders into the boxes of express companies and physicians; he mailed packages of confectionery and fruit; candies opened and filled with flour paste and skillfully closed again; oranges and bananas carefully refilled with damp sawdust and the skins carefully glued together. He had several temptingly fat looking pocketbooks to drop on the sidewalks and the store floor.

Jeffrey had a specially "good sell" prepared for Frank Burns, a former high school classmate, whose greater popularity and better scholarship had been an eyesore to him. Frank, who needed work very much, his father being ill, had failed as yet in securing a position. Jeffrey felt no sympathy for him, but only triumph at his own success.

"In getting a joke on a fellow you want to find his tenderest point and touch him there with your arrow," was the principle on which Jeffrey said the joking genius rested.

Jeffrey wrote a letter to Frank saying that he had just heard accidentally of a fact not yet announced in the store, that one of the clerks was to leave, and that if Frank would apply for the place at once he might stand a good chance of getting it.—"Bring your best testimonials," he wrote, "and go right to Mr. Sanborn's private office and send in your card marked 'important business.' Of course you must give no hint to any one of how you learned of the vacancy."

As Jeffrey well knew, but Frank did not, Mr. Sanborn, the senior partner, was a testy, quick-tempered old gentleman. Jeffrey thought with great satisfaction of the expression he expected to see on Frank's face as he came out of the office after asking for a position which "existed only on a first of April basis," as he was going to say to Frank.

Frank entered the store at the time Jeffrey had suggested, and as he passed his counter he clasped Jeffrey's hand, whispering: "How can I thank you for remembering me so kindly?"

"Oh, that's all right," replied Jeffrey, avoiding Frank's eager eyes.

Frank was a long time in the office, so that Jeffrey was not watching him when he stepped out, and was startled when he heard his voice close behind him.

"He's going to give me the place, old fellow! Won't it be great for us to be together here? I'll never forget this good turn you've done me as long as I live."

Jeffrey stared in utter bewilderment at Frank's beaming face, but was too busy with customers to ask the many questions that rose to his lips.

Only a short time before Frank's call one of the clerks had entirely unexpectedly given his resignation to Mr. Sanborn.

As soon as Frank entered the office, Mr. Sanborn said, brusquely:

"Well, young man, what is it?"

Frank had a letter of introduction addressed: "To whom it may concern," and written by his pastor, who was well known as author and pulpit orator. This he handed to Mr. Sanborn, saying: "Will you kindly read this short letter from Rev. Dr. Levering? He has known me all my life."

"I know him well, too," said Mr. Sanborn, opening the letter.

He read it, replaced it in the envelope and handed to Frank with the words:

"Do you want to start in with the place to-day? Somers will be glad to leave just as soon as I can get a substitute. If you are ready take this card to Mr. Gray on the third floor and he'll start you in. Rev. Dr. Levering and I were schoolmates and have kept up our friendship. We used to call him 'Truthful George,' because he was always so afraid of exaggerating. He seems to have kept track of you while you worked in Brown & Bogg's. Too bad they failed. You're not the only one that was thrown out by their going to the wall. We don't expect any crash here," Mr. Sanborn smiled, "so, Mr. Burns, it won't be our fault if you don't stay with our firm till your head is whiter than mine. All you have to do is to live up to what Dr. Levering says here of you."

As Frank's position thus obtained was a higher one than Jeffrey's, his chagrin over the successful failure of his April Fool joke soon became envy and dislike of Frank's boundless gratitude to him. So Jeffrey was very glad to go when his uncle in the west sent him an offer of a place with him.

Fifteen years passed by, bringing prosperity to both Jeffrey and Frank, and very rapid advancement to the latter. But in the financial crisis of a certain year in the west, Jeffrey's uncle failed, and involved him so heavily that the loss of everything stared him in the face.

"If I could only raise a few hundred dollars I might still save the business," he groaned.

But drought and cornering in cattle and banks closing had made it impossible to borrow ready cash except at enormous interest which he could not pay. Jeffrey looked around his cozy little study and thought of losing the pretty home that his wife and children loved so well. His little daughter opened the door softly, saying:

"Papa, here's a letter the postman left."

His face lighted up so as he read it that she clapped her hands, exclaiming

"Oh, it's some good news!" But suddenly he smiled bitterly, threw the letter in the grate, and said: "No, it's nothing, Jeanie, run out. So," he continued to himself, "he has waited all this time to pay me back for that joke. I didn't suppose he would ever find it out; he thinks I've forgotten, but I'm too sharp for him. I never was caught yet on a first of April trick, and I'm too old a bird to be taken now."

The letter was from Frank [illegible] stating that he had just learned of Jeffrey's financial [illegible] through a stray item in a western paper which did not give his address [illegible] inquiry he sent this letter to the address named by a former friend of Jeffrey's, but of which he [illegible]

"I have placed a check for $5,000 to your order in Blank & [illegible] in B—— City. I do hope it will help. It only partly expresses my gratitude to you for your favor to me years ago, which gave me my start in life;" so ran Frank's letter; that it should reach Jeffrey on April 1st was entirely unthought of by Frank. After a few days he wrote one to the pastor of Jeffrey's town inquiring if he lived there still, and if not, where he was. When Jeffrey learned of this he wrote a postal card to Frank as follows: "Your favor of April 1st came duly to hand. Having a good memory, I am able to decline your offer."

Frank was puzzled about the odd expression about memory, and was so hurt by the discourteous refusal of his proffered aid, that he called in his check and did not reply to Jeffrey.

Jeffrey lost everything and was obliged to start life over again. He became a traveling salesman, and was often in B—— City. One day when he was in Blank & Co.'s bank the cashier said:

"Did you notice the death of Francis M. Burns in the morning paper? His will leaves very large sums to charity. Do you know, I always wondered why you didn't take that check for $5,000 that he deposited here for you two years ago? He wrote us confidently that you would call or send soon."

So Jeffrey could not ask Frank's forgiveness for his selfish suspicion, as he sincerely wished he could do, for his better nature asserted itself. But he went to the kind old minister to whom Frank's letter of inquiry had been sent, and told him the whole story, not sparing himself in the least.

Jeffrey's sons and daughters have been brought up to think the thoughtless folly of practical joking not only hurts the victim, but hardens and narrows the heart of the perpetrator.—Christian Work.

GRASS ON CANAL BANKS.

Recent Experiments Show That It Prevents the Washing Away of the Earth.

The engineers in charge of the work of maintaining the Suez canal have discovered that the best of all methods of protecting the banks from crumbling and decay is provided by the natural growth of reeds which fringe the channel for some distance below Ismailia on the African side, and some rather interesting attempts have been lately made to plant new beds in other parts of the canal.

It is stated that the local species of reed with which the experiment has been so far made will not live in salt or very brackish water in the early stages of its growth, though it will bear transplantation later; and that at present the serviceableness of the natural means of protection is consequently limited.

Where the water is sufficiently free from brine, however, the network of roots is found to put a facing on the loose soil of the banks more successful and permanent than a wall of brick or stone, and it would probably not be difficult to discover and establish some coarse sedge or other plant [illegible] the sea marshes.

Life's Dainties.

A South Dakota woman was killed a few days ago by poisoned candy, and a New York family has been stricken down by poisoned sausage. The Chicago Record-Herald asks if it is going to be necessary for people to give up all the dainties in self-defense?

Now that Judge Collins is down and out of the supreme court he has as good a right to hustle with the politicians as Dunn and Eddy.

You should not spend your time reading "Appeal to Reason", while your neighbor is at work sowing his crop, for you may not be able to convince him to divide the product of his summers toil, next fall.

Congressman Halvor Steenerson can continue to do his district yeoman service in congress, without taking time to go into a campaign for realection. The people of the 9th district will attend to it and see that he is renominated and realected.

Erskine is rejoiceing over the Soo line at that place. In about a year they will begin to mourn the loss of the farmers trade liveing north and south of them, that will be doing their business in a town nearer to their homes.

With the hig meadows north of here one vast lake and the snow just begining to melt on the head waters of the Clearwater river, the citizins of Crookston had better make preperations to move on high land. When the people liveing on the flat lands are driven out of their homes by the floods, we ask them to remember that the newspapers of their city are opposed to diverting the head waters of the Clearwater river into the Missisippi, but want it all.

The rain and disagreecable weather of yesterday and last evening were conducive to balloon heads. There were several free-for-all fights, but they were not reported to the police. They resulted in black eyes and bruised faces. The weather is conducive of combativeness. —Crookston Dily Journal. Apr. 1.

It isen't the weather, but it is to many contest cases, with liberal fees. If you feed a colt lots of oats he will kick and play when he gets out of the barn.

The czar of all the Russians had better put a hulldog mussle on that St. Petershurg Novoe Vremya editor and transport him to Siberia before he writes many more anti-Yankee editorials, of the character he wrote las week, which aroused the American newspapers and set them to cackling like a flock of of old hens when they see a big hawk. It does not seem to satisfy a certain element in Russia to allow England and the United States to remain nutral in their war with Japan, hut expect the press of two liberty loveing country's to shout for a monarchal government of the knaut and bayenet.

The ever-recurring rumor that Gov. Van Sant is plotting for a third term while otensibly supporting Judge Collins for governor belongs in much the same category as the oft repeated intimation that Joel Hetwole is not sincere in his support of Mr. Dunn, but is building up a machine for his own benefit. And the merits of some of the propisitions involved in the coming campaign would be brought out quite clearly if thease two eminent statesmen were to be pitted directly against each other in coming state convention.—Minneapolis Tribune.

If that should happen it would be better to have the state convention in Duluth so the delegates could get a cool breeze off the lake after the first [illegible]

AN INDIAN DUEL.

The Famous Fight Between Chief Carpenter and Price.

"The methods of fighting duels among the Indians," said an old frontiersman, "were varied, each tribe having its own peculiar custom. Some of the tribes learned to fight according to the code of the white man, however, among these the Choctaws or Cherokees, which reminds me of the famous duel in July of 1883, when the celebrated Choctaw chief, Carpenter, fought near the Pine Creek Indian agency with a white man named Price. Chief Carpenter was a splendid type of Indian, tall and straight and comely, and he had been well educated and had natural talents and natural instincts that put him head and shoulders over his Indian associates.

"As usual, this trouble was started by a disagreement over some trivial matter, which caused a dispute and ended in the white man calling his red brother a liar. Throughout the trouble the big Indian had remained perfectly calm, although considerably angered, and as the insult fell he gazed coldly into the eyes of Price and said:

"'Your blood shall wash out that word.'

"'Whenever you're ready, say the word,' cried Price. 'You can do your washing right here and now if you please.'

"'Not now, sir, but tomorrow morning, when the sun peeps over the top of that wild plum tree, you must be here and without fail.'

"The report of the duel spread far and wide, and at an hour considerably before sunrise a large crowd had gathered on the dueling ground to witness the encounter. Price was the first on the field, and for a time it looked as if there would be no Carpenter. But, true to his Indian blood, the chief disdained coming too soon at the appointed place as much as he would have feared coming too late, and it was just as the first rays of the sun stole over the soft green of the tree that the red man stood in place. Not a word was spoken by either man. Both drew their pistols, and, raising the weapons, they fired almost simultaneously. Carpenter reeled, but with a mighty effort checked a tendency to spin round, and, staggering, fired as the crack of his opponent's pistol sounded for the second time. This time Price jumped high in the air and landed on his face stone dead.

"With a wild shout the crowd pressed forward to surround the lucky chief, but before aid could reach him he fell senseless. Price had been shot through the heart, clean as a whistle, a remarkable shot considering the condition of the Indian when he made it and a shot Carpenter could have made in the first place without a doubt had he been as determined to kill as Price proved himself when his bullet buried itself in the Indian's breast."

The Vice of Nagging.

Nagging may or may not be a vice of the thin, as a famous physician suggests, but that there is some truth in his theory that there is a scientific basis for this ugly habit seems likely. "Perfect health," he says, "has as one of its factors content of mind. A nervous man or woman who is anxious, discontented, gloomy, dissatisfied, worried from any cause, cannot enjoy good health. This mental turmoil produces as one of its primary effects on the body an inability to digest food properly. The blood which should supply the force necessary for the function of digestion is continually drawn away from the stomach by excitement in the brain, and the woman who nags suffers. While there be those whose tendency to lay on fat is so great that nothing will stop it a nagging man or woman is generally thin. Their habit of mind has partially starved their bodies."

Accommodating.

The buzzards enjoy the same "sacredness" in the New river district of West Virginia as they do in tropical countries. A breaker boy was brought before a squire in a coal mining town on the charge of having killed one of the only scavengers of that country. After severely reprimanding the boy the old squire, who was a German said: "I fine you $10!"

"I hain't got thet much," replied the boy.

"Den I fine you $5!"

"I hain't got $5."

"Vell, how much haf you got?"

"Three dollars and seventy-five cents."

"All right; den I fine you $3.75!"

Brain Growth.

Brain development is found by Professor Seggel of Munich to have two periods of acceleration, from ten to eleven and from seventeen to eighteen in girls and from twelve to thirteen and nineteen to twenty in boys. At the period of most rapid increase in height, from twelve to fourteen years, the growth of the brain is less than one-hundredth that of the body, but at seventeen to nineteen it grows one-thirtieth as fast and at twenty reaches one-seventh of the body growth.

Some Misnamed Drugs.

Some misnomers of the drug store: Oil of vitrol is not an oil. Copperas is an iron salt and contains no copper. Salts of lemon has nothing to do with a lemon, but it is a salt of the extremely poisonous oxalic acid. Soda water contains no soda. Sulphuric ether contains no sulphur. Sugar of lead has nothing to do with lead, nor has cream of tartar anything to do with cream. Oxygen means the "acid generator," but hydrogen is really the essential element, and many acids contain no oxygen. German silver contains no silver, and blacklead contains no lead. Berberine is usually made from hydrastis canadensis. Wormseed is unexpanded flower buds. Milk of lime has no milk. Quicksilver is purely mercury. Oil of origanum is made from thyme and not from origanum.

Genius in the Hat.

You seldom will find a brainy man with a round head. The head that contains lots of brains either is very long from front to back or else irregular. You can learn something of a man's mental ability by the hat he wears. If his head is so bumpy that it seems as if he never could get a hat to fit him he probably is a genius or an eccentric in some particular line. If his head is long from front to back he is a clear thinker and keen as a razor. So if your hat costs more money than your friend's [illegible]

The Strutting Woodcock.

One evening in November, many years ago, a country friend brought a live cock woodcock to my house in Byron, Ill. A spent shot had made his capture possible; in fact, one could not see that he was hurt in any way after a sharp, scrutinizing search under a powerful light on the kitchen table. All at once the beautiful creature slipped from my hand, and, assuming the air, mien and ways of a turkey gobbler in the mating season, proceeded to strut about on the table in the circle of powerful light. It was one of the strangest, wildest, most beautiful sights the writer ever beheld. After a solid hour's performance the little audience decided that no taxidermical touch should ever desecrate that beautiful feathered form, and the bird was gently slipped into the pocket of an old hunting coat, carried a mile out of town into the country and turned loose in the edge of a hundred acre cornfield, into which he quickly scuttled.—Forest and Stream.

Richard Brinsley Sheridan.

Sheridan gave almost no promise in childhood of his future brilliancy. His mother pronounced "Richard Brinsley" to be "the dullest and most hopeless of her sons," and he was sent home from Dr. Whyte's academy with the reputation of being an impenetrable dunce; who wrote "think" for "thing." But he must have been able to think a thing or two even in those days, for at twenty-six he had written the "School For Scandal," of which Leigh Hunt observed, "It is a very concentration and crystallization of all that is sparkling, clear and compact in the materials of pure comedy." It should, however, be mentioned that a more judicious of the youthful Sheridan's preceptors, Samuel Parr, one of the masters at Harrow, detected the latent spark of his pupil's genius and aided it by judicious cultivation.

The Real Thing.

"My dear," remarked Mr. Jones to his wife as he gathered up his mail on the first of the month, "you have missed your vocation. You should have been a member of the state legislature."

"What do you mean by that?" asked his innocent wife.

"You are so indefatigable in introducing bills," replied Jones.—Cincinnati Tribune.

OPENING PARLIAMENT.

The Pomp With Which It Was Done by Queen Victoria.

The trumpets sound! The queen approaches! The trumpet continues, and first enter at a side door close at my elbow the college of heralds richly dressed, slowly, two and two. Then the great officers of the household, then the lord chancellor bearing purse, seal and speech of the queen, with the mace bearers before him. Then Lord Lansdowne with the crown, the Earl of Zetland with the cap of maintenance and the Duke of Wellington with the sword of state. Then Prince Albert, leading the queen, followed by the Duchess of Sutherland, mistress of the robes, and the Marchioness of Douro, daughter-in-law of the Duke of Wellington, who is one of the ladies in waiting. The queen and prince sit down, while everybody else remains standing. The queen then says in a voice most clear and sweet, "My lords (rolling the r), be seated." Upon which the peers sit down, except those who enter with the queen, who group themselves about the throne in the most picturesque manner. The queen had a crown of diamonds, with splendid necklace and stomacher of the same. The Duchess of Sutherland close by her side with her ducal coronet of diamonds and a little back Lady Douro, also with her coronet. On the right of the throne stood the lord chancellor, with scarlet robe and flowing wig, holding the speech, surrounded by the emblems of his office; a little farther, one step lower down, Lord Lansdowne, holding the crown on a crimson velvet cushion; and on the left the Duke of Wellington brandishing the sword of state in the air, with the Earl of Zetland by his side. The queen's train of royal purple, or, rather, deep crimson, was borne by many train bearers. The whole scene seemed to me like a dream or a vision. After a few minutes the lord chancellor came forward and presented the speech to the queen. She read it sitting and most exquisitely. Her voice is flutelike and her whole emphasis decided and intelligent. Very soon after the speech is finished she leaves the house, and we all follow as soon as we can get our carriages.—Mrs. George Bancroft in Scribner's.

Wakeful?

Sleeplessness Is a Sign of Nerve Trouble and Should Be Looked To:

There are three different manifestations of sleeplessness:

First, hardly to sleep a wink all night, second, to lie awake a long time before falling asleep; third, to fall asleep soon, waking up after several hours and then find it hard to sleep again.

They mean that somewhere in the nerve fibres, somewhere in the brain cells, somewhere in the blood vessels that carry blood to the brain, something is radically wrong, and must be righted, or the end may be worse than death.

To right it; take Dr. Miles' Nervine.

Some other symptoms of nerve trouble are: Dizziness, Headache, Backache, Worry, Fretfulness, Irritability, Melancholy, Lack of Ambition.

They indicate diseases which may lead to Epilepsy, Fits, St. Vitus' Dance, Nervous Prostration, Paralysis, Insanity. Nothing will give such quick and lasting relief as Dr. Miles' Nervine.

"My husband had been sick for weeks, could not sit up to have his bed made. With all the medical help we could get he continued to grow worse. He could neither sleep or eat. Our baby girl was sent away, and all callers barred, because he could not stand a bit of talking. I read of a case of nervous prostration cured by Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. We began giving it to him, and in a few days he was able to be dressed. From that time he steadily improved. Nervine saved his life."—MRS. A. G. [illegible], Freeville, N. Y.

Theater Audiences.

A theater audience is fickle and not infrequently cruel, but it must be won. Augustin Daly had several ways of testing it. One was to station men in his employ at convenient points where they could hear the comments and judge whether the play was making an impression. But a test upon which he depended more was to listen himself at the moment when the curtain went down upon an act. If he saw people turning to one another eagerly and making quick comments he knew that they were being moved, whether for praise or blame. But if the talk began slowly after the curtain fell he was perfectly sure that the play had excited no interest—a worse fate than blame.

It is a favorite way of players to pick out some one person in the audience—one with a sympathetic countenance—and to play to him or her, and to judge by success from the expression seen there. The trouble is that the people in the front rows are often the regulars, who feel little emotion and show less, and who may be still unmoved when the rest of the audience is in ecstasy. If they could know the distress and the woe they cause—well, then they would not be the regulars.—New York Mail.

Genius finds its own road and carries its own lamp.—Willmott.

Miss Hapgood tells how she was cured of Fallopian and Ovarian Inflammation—and escaped an awful operation by using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I suffered for four years with what the doctors called Salpingitis (inflammation of the fallopian tubes) and ovaritis, which are most distressing and painful ailments, affecting all the surrounding parts, undermining the constitution, and sapping the life forces. If you had seen me a year ago, before I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and had noticed the sunken eyes, sallow complexion, and general emaciated condition, and compared that person with me as I am today, robust, hearty and well, you would not wonder that I feel thankful to you and your wonderful medicine; which restored me to new life and health in five months, and saved me from an awful operation."—MISS IRENE HAPGOOD, 1022 Sandwich St., Windsor, Ont.

Ovaritis or inflammation of the ovaries or fallopian tubes which adjoin the ovaries may result from sudden stopping of the monthly flow, from inflammation of the womb, and many other causes. The slightest indication of trouble with the ovaries, indicated by dull throbbing pain in the side, accompanied by heat and shooting pains, should claim your instant attention. It will not cure itself, and a hospital operation, with all its terrors, may easily result from neglect.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I can truly say that you have saved my life, and I cannot express my gratitude to you in words.

"Before I wrote to you telling how I felt, I had doctored for over two years steady and spent lots of money in medicine besides, but it all failed to do me any good. My menses did not appear in that time, and I suffered much pain. I would daily have fainting spells, headache, backache and bearing down pain, and was so weak that it was hard for me to do my work.

"I used your medicine and treatment as directed, and after taking three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, menses appeared, my womb trou[illegible] regular ever since. I used [illegible] of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier together, and am now restored to perfect health. Had it not been for you, I would have been in my grave.

"I will always recommend your wonderful remedies, and hope that these few lines may lead others who suffer as I did to try your remedies."—MRS. T. C. WILLADSEN, R. R. No. 1, Manning, Iowa.

Such unquestionable testimony proves the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound over diseases of women.

Women should remember that they are privileged to consult Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., about their illness, entirely free.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Cows and Milk.

Only four states have more creameries than Minnesota. Iowa leads with 820; Wisconsin is next with 750; New York is third with 050; Pennsylvania follows with 611, and Minnesota is fifth with 542. Those figures are based on the returns of 1000. Since then Minnesota creameries have increased in number to approximately 731.

The twelve states producing the largest number of gallons of milk per head are: Minnesota, 403; Maine, 574; Massachusetts, 572; Rhode Island, 546; Connecticut, 545; New Hampshire, 528; Vermont, 526; Pennsylvania, 516; New York, 515; Ohio, 520; Wisconsin, 473; Illinois, 454.

Minnesota creameries make 03,000,000 pounds of butter a year, receiving for it, in round numbers, $14,000,000. Minnesota has 753,386 cows.

Farmers' Elevators.

Fully one hundred farmers' elevators will be built in Minnesota within the next year, making a total of 240 in the state, according to the statements of C. E. Jackson of Buckman, president of the Minnesota Farmers' exchange. The latter organization is a new one and has already sold $400,000 of the $500,000 stock issue. It is the intention to build elevators and terminals and begin, in a short time, to handle grain and produce.

Elevators will be built in parts of the state not now supplied. The small receiving elevators will co-operate with the terminal elevators, and in this way the farmers will act in a way as their own commission agents.

Damaged by Wind.

The hotel which is being built by a stock company on the north shore of Detroit Lake was badly damaged by a severe wind. The gale swept across the lake with such violence that the building buckled, the two lower stories being thrown about five feet out of plumb. It is expected that the entire structure will have to be taken down and rebuilt, which will involve an expenditure of about $2,030. The hotel was 40x130 feet with three stories and attic and had just been enclosed and shingled.

A Close Call.

A fire in the fifth floor of the Gilfillan building, Jackson and Fourth streets, St. Paul, filled the floor with dense black smoke and forced Inga Cedarburg, a stenographer, to seek refuge at a window. She was carried down to the street on a 100-foot ladder by Lieut. Edward Low of truck company No. 2. The feat was particularly hazardous, for the ladder did not quite reach to the window. The girl had to climb along a narrow ledge and be guided by a long pole to reach the steps of the ladder. [illegible]

The loss is estimated at about $1,00[illegible]

Sugar Beets.

[illegible] acreage of sugar beets in Minnesota this year. The Minnesota Sugar company is just winding up the business of 1903-4, and those interested declare the year a successful one. In 1903 the company contracted with 1,500 farmers for 3,700 of acres. On account of the excessive rainfall and floods the acreage was reduced to less than 3,0[illegible] acres. The total yield amounted to 31,000 tons, from which the sugar company produced, in 105 working days, 7,000,000 pounds of granulated sugar.

Had a Fat Purse.

Ivan Vukerlio is an Austrian who, n rols of beggar, claims to have a crippled hand. He acquired the habit of entering people's homes without the formality of knocking or ringing the bell, and they had him arrested. When arraigned he pleaded guilty, and was fined $30 by Judge Gearheart at Duluth. The prisoner produced a large roll of bills and paid the fine with as little concern as if he were buying a postage stamp. He has been instructed to move on.

Dropped Dead.

Herbert Wink, a 9-year-old boy who resided with his parents at 1201 Fifth street north, Minneapolis, dropped dead while playing in the yard with some of his young friends.

Herbert had just recovered from a severe attack of typhoid pneumonia, and the coroner, while not holding an autopsy, believes that the boy died of a heart affection caused by his recent illness.

No More Free Lunch.

Every saloonkeeper in Minneapolis was notified by the police officers to give no more free lunches, which are now under the ban of the city ordinances. A delegation from the Retail Liquor Dealers' association waited upon Police Supt. Conroy and told him that the ordinance would meet with no opposition. One dealer says that he pays $14,000 per year for free lunches and is not sorry to do away with them.

News Notes.

OT SUPERLATIVELY POOR.

And That a Poverty-Stricken Man Was Not Bad Enough Off to Want.

Bourke Cockran was condemning a certain popular novel, relates the New York Tribune.

"This novel," he said, "is as poor and barren as Elmo county land."

"Is Elmo county land very poor and barren?" asked one of Mr. Cockran's interlocutors.

"Is it?" said he. "Well, I should say it is. Once two strangers rode on horseback through Elmo county, and the barrenness of the land amazed them. Nothing but weeds and rocks everywhere. As they passed a farmhouse they saw an old man sitting in the garden, and they said: 'Poor chap! Poor, poverty stricken old fellow!'

"The old man overheard them, and called out in a shrill voice:

"'Gents, I hain't so poor an' poverty stricken as ye think. I don't own none o' this land.'"

In the Spring.

Lowndes, Mo., April 4th.—Mrs. H. C. Harty, of this place, says:

"For years I was in very bad health. Every spring I would get so low that I was unable to do my own work. I seemed to be worse in the spring than any other time of the year. I was very weak and miserable and had much pain in my back and head. I saw Dodd's Kidney Pills advertised last spring and began treatment of them and they have certainly done me more good than anything I have ever used.

"I was all right last spring and felt better than I have for over ten years. I am fifty years of age and am stronger today than I have been for many years and I give Dodd's Kidney Pills credit for the wonderful improvement."

The statement of Mrs. Harty is only one of a great many where Dodd's Kidney Pills have proven themselves to be the very best spring medicine. They are unsurpassed as a tonic and are the only medicine used in thousands of families.

Not Wasteful.

"I suppose," said the physician, after he had sounded the new patient, "that you exercise judgment in the matter of smoking? You do not indulge to foolish excess in it?"

"No, indeed," replied the inveterate individual. "I never smoke more than one cigar at a time."—Cincinnati Times-Star.

A VENERABLE PASTOR CURED BY PE-RU-NA.

Pe-ru-na is a Catarrhal Tonic Especially Adapted to the Declining Powers of Old Age.

In old age the mucous membranes become thickened and partly lose their function.

This leads to partial loss of hearing, smell and taste, as well as digestive disturbances.

Peruna corrects all this by its specific operation on all the mucous membranes of the body.

One bottle will convince anyone. Once used and Peruna becomes a life-long stand-by with old and young.

Rev. J.N. Parker.

Strong and Vigorous at the Age of Eighty-eight.

Rev. J. N. Parker, Utica, N. Y., writes: "In June, 1901, I lost my sense of hearing entirely. My hearing had been somewhat impaired for several years, but not so much affected but that I could hold converse with my friends; but in June, 1901, my sense of hearing left me so that I could hear no sound whatever. I was also troubled with rheumatic pains in my limbs. I commenced taking Peruna and now my hearing is restored as good as it was prior to June, 1901. My rheumatic pains are all gone. I cannot speak too highly of Peruna, and now when 88 years old can say it has invigorated my whole system. I cannot but think, dear Doctor, that you must feel very thankful to the all loving Father that you have been permitted to live, and by your skill be such a blessing as you have been to suffering humanity."—Rev. J. N. Parker.

A Bishop's Letter.

T. H. Lomax, D. D., Bishop 2nd Dist, A. M. E. of Charlotte, N. C., writes: "I recommend your Peruna to all who want a strengthening tonic and a very effective remedy for all catarrhal complaints."—T. H. Lomax.

If you do not receive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

The spring is the best time to treat catarrh. Nature renews herself every spring. The system is rejuvenated by spring weather. This renders medicines more effective. [illegible] course of Peruna, assisted by the balmy air of spring will cure old stubborn cases of catarrh that have resisted treatment for years. Everybody should have a copy of Dr. Hartman's latest book on catarrh. Address The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP

IN AND OUT OF CONGRESS AT THE NATIONAL CAPITOL.

IMPEACHMENT PROCEDURE

Precedents That Have Established Rules for Proceedings—No Work for Rules Committee of the House.

Washington.—For the first time in 28 years a case of impeachment is to be tried by the United States senate sitting as a court of impeachment. The judiciary committee of the house has voted to recommend to the house the impeachment of Judge Charles Swayne, of the northern federal district of Florida, and there is little doubt that the house will adopt the committee's report. If this happens the house will present the case to the senate and then will follow a trial which may occupy the senate for weeks.

Judge Charles Swayne.

The last case of impeachment was that of Secretary Belknap in the Grant administration. The house of representatives in 1876 voted to impeach Belknap, but before the trial came to a conclusion in the senate, Belknap resigned from his position as secretary of war and that was the end of it, although a question arose as to whether the resignation of a government official could properly be accepted in such circumstances.

The most famous impeachment case is that of Andrew Johnson in the Fortieth congress, the result of which everybody is supposed to know. Johnson was impeached by the house, but after a long trial the senate failed to convict him, the vote standing 35 ayes to 19 noes, one less than the two-thirds majority required by the constitution.

[illegible] William Blount, United States senator from Tennessee. He was impeached for violating the neutrality laws of the United States in instigating the Creeks and Cherokees to aid the British in conquering the Spanish territory of western Florida. He was found guilty and expelled on July 8, 1797, but during his trial he was elected to the state senate of Tennessee and chosen its president.

All other impeachment cases have affected federal judges, as follows: John Pickering, district judge of New Hampshire, 1803-04; Samuel Chase, associate justice of the supreme court of the United States, 1804-05; James Peck, United States district judge for Missouri, 1826-1831; West W. Humphreys, United States district judge for Missouri, 1861.

Impeachment Procedure, Etc.

In trying Judge Swayne the senate will have to go back a long way for a precedent, although several members of that body are familiar with the procedure against Secretary Belknap through the fact that they were in one or the other branches of congress at the time. Teller of Colorado, Allison of Iowa, Cockrell of Missouri, and Mitchell of Oregon were even then senators. Blackburn of Kentucky, Hale and Frye of Maine, Money of Mississippi, Hoar of Massachusetts and Platt of New York were members of the house. Speaker Cannon is the only member of the house of representatives whose service dates back so far as the Belknap trial. Senator Hoar, now chairman of the judiciary committee, was one of the managers on the part of the house.

Announcing an Impeachment.

Should the case come before the senate great interest will be taken in the proceedings on account of their novelty, if for no other reason. After the action by the house a committee, appointed by the house, will proceed to the bar of the senate and there impeach Judge Swayne of high crimes and misdemeanors while in office and inform the senate that formal articles of impeachment will be presented. This committee will be announced by the sergeant at arms, will proceed to the area in front of the desk of the president of the senate, will make its announcement and will demand that the senate take order for the appearance of Judge Swayne to answer the impeachment. The senate will appoint a committee, to which the message of the house will be referred. The house will appoint managers to conduct for it the impeachment proceedings, and these managers will proceed to the senate where, after taking seats assigned, one of them will read the articles of impeachment. The president of the senate will then dismiss them, will set a day for a trial and will give due notice to the managers.

On the day set for trial the chief justice of the supreme court will be brought into the senate by a committee appointed for the purpose and will there administer to the senators an oath that they will do impartial justice according to the laws. The house will then be formally notified that the senate is organized for the trial and the house managers will be admitted, Judge Swayne will appear at the bar of the senate and will answer to the articles of impeachment by counsel, after which the trial will proceed as in other trials with arguments by counsel and testimony of witnesses. At the conclusion of the trial each senator will answer guilty or not guilty as the case may be.

Rules in the House.

Under Speaker Cannon there is a marked change in the personnel of the managers of the republican majority in the house. The committee on rules has fallen into innocuous desuetude in striking contrast to its autocratic performances under the administrations of Speakers Reed, Crisp and Henderson.

Speaker Cannon

The committee on rules assumed its great importance first under Speaker Reed with the adoption of the new rules of the house, under which all the most important legislation was enacted under special orders adopted by the committee, of course with the speaker's approval. Under Reed the rules committee was kept busy all the time. In the Fifty-first congress Cannon and McKinley were the majority members of it.

When Reed came back to the speakership he had with him Henderson and Dalzell. Under Henderson the other republicans on the committee were Dalzell and Grosvenor, and they are now Cannon's associates, but it is noticeable that these two members who, with Henderson, were regarded as the whole thing are not seen in the speaker's room now nearly as often as some [illegible] members of the house who, under the old regime, were not highly regarded by the powers-in-control.

Speaker Cannon is getting to lean more and more upon Hemenway of Indiana and Tawney of Minnesota, one of whom, now chairman of the appropriation committee, was in the last congress of importance only as Cannon's lieutenant, and the other of whom was regarded as a "kicker" altogether out of favor with the men in control.

Misplacing a Building.

Secretary Wilson, of the department of agriculture, is probably the best secretary of agriculture in the not very long list, but there are a great many people in Washington who think that as an architect and landscape gardener he is a dismal failure.

Looking for a Building Site.

The last congress made an appropriation of about three million dollars for a new building to be used by the agricultural department. It was provided that it should be situated in the Mall near the present department and the selection of the site has been left with the secretary of agriculture, who has caused a sensation by picking out a place which will cut off a large portion of the vista between the Washington monument and the capitol that has been one of the greatest beauties of Washington for a hundred years. If congress could get at the thing it would pass a law, with little or no opposition, which would prevent the location of the new building in the place selected by the secretary and would compel it to be moved back a hundred feet or so, thus saving an architectural blunder which could never be remedied. But Speaker Cannon refuses to let any bill of this kind come up in the house and Representative Powers, who has introduced the bill, finds himself helpless. So do the senators who are deeply interested in the matter.

"Uncle Joe" has an aversion for architects and all their works. He is especially out-of-sorts with the scheme of the so-called park commission, which would fix permanently the architectural development of the city along the lines of L'enfant, the French genius who first laid out the map of the capital. He is filled with indignation whenever he thinks of the work of Architect McKim, which has made the white house a thing of beauty, and he is determined that so long as he has anything to say about it the architects shall not be given any further leeway in the development of the city.

Simmons announces that he will again seek the nomination at the hands of the Republicans as reoresentative of this district, and The Gazette believes that he will recieve enthusiastic support. There is a Russian down in Huston, Huston county, whose heart does not beat in sympthy with the fatherland these days; on the contrary he reads with glee about the Russian reverses and prays softly that Japan may lick the burly Bear to a stand still says the preston Times. And he has good reasons for his hatred toward the country of his birth. Years ago he came to free America and for a long time he has been in engaged in tho scrap iron trade. Like many another imigrant he was to poor to take his family with him, but little by little he hoarded his earnings, looking hopefully toward the day when he conld send for them. He got his daughters over first, but the greedy, thriveing Russian officials demanded $300 a peace or $900 for the three girls. This exhusted his savings and another period of labor and waiting followed. Finelly he secured enough to send for his wife, but again the Russian thieves got in their work and he was only permitted to leave on the payment of $600. Here was a spectial for God and man. Fifteen hundred dollars must be paid as a ransom for wife and children from a so-caled civilized, Christian country! Appalling Experience That Befell a Traveler In Australia.

Pursued by an Immense Army of Big Poisonous Snakes, He Saved His Life by Plunging Into the Sea.

When I first saw Seal island, King George sound, Western Australia, there was a yellow flag fluttering over it, and it was temporarily named Quarantine island, said Ker Campbell of Birmingham, England, to a New York hotel recently. Nathan Fisher stood by the flagstaff. When I left, the flag of ill omen was gone, the island solitary. "There doesn't seem so much as a snake on it," some one remarked, and that recalled to my mind a terrible experience related to me by Fisher himself. Here it is in his own words:

FISHER SANK IN THE QUICKSAND.

"I came here with the crew of a [illegible] whaler. We had not had much luck and hoped we might get a few seals, but luck was against us, and the [illegible] in disgust, but I stayed on. One day along came a gentleman—like it might be yourself, only he belonged to some geographical society—and he asked me if I would be his guide over the country roundabont. He offered good pay, and of course I said yes. One day I left him for a trip alone around the sound.

"I had gained the farthest extremity of the sound, which is like a miniature inland sea. For some distance the shrubs had been dwindling in size, the herbage growing more scantily, the sand patches and coarse green tufts making wilder country of it. Near by was a dreary quicksand, desolate as death itself, of which I had been warned.

"My high spirits were suddenly checked as I came near to this evil looking stretch of semidesert after the beauty and sweetness of the region I had passed through. The silence was awe inspiring. No bird flew over the dread dead expanse of the quicksand, which, inclosed in a low, rocky basin of immense extent, looked livid and sinister in the slanting sun rays of late afternoon. The tops of the two masts of a small ship which had somehow managed to get floated in from the sound were to be seen protruding from the sand, still slowly sinking. It seemed as if death was in the air and brooded over the desolate scene.

"A sudden foolhardy idea seized me. Almost against my own will I found myself steadily tramping off the solid ground of the foreshore, over the rocky boundary and on to the quicksand. 'Just to try what it is like,' I assured myself, with a foolish laugh, a laugh that had no real merriment.

"A fatal fascination seemed to draw me onward. I began to feel my feet sinking in the loose sand, so fine and shifting and dry. Yet I stubbornly went on. I would just touch the sinking ship's masts, I told myself, and then return to say that once I had been on the quicksand.

"Return! I might never have returned! Slowly but surely at each forward step I sank deeper and grew more terrified, yet more obstinate. 'Only just touch the mast, only just touch the mast,' something seemed to say.

"Suddenly a shriek which seemed to thrill along the shores and far over the sea startled me. It was only the evening cry of a king parrot, but it enabled me to throw off the inexplicable spell which had fallen upon me of attempting an impossibility. I turned and hastened back for all I was worth. Haste was necessary, too, for, although I had not taken much notice of it at first, the tide was flowing in and had nearly reached the narrow strip of white sand that shut off the firm coast from the quicksand. And to my horror I saw what had previously been powdery and [illegible] sand beginning to take a damp and deadly [illegible] that in a few minutes might change to soft, wet waves, affording neither foothold nor yet a chance for the most powerful swimmer.

"At last, however, after a desperate struggle, I stood once more on the firm sandy shore of the sound, over which lapping wavelets were flowing. As I glanced back I saw, with a tremor of deadly fear, that the whole surface of the quicksand was wet and glistening. In another moment I should have been hopelessly engulfed.

"I felt so weak and shaken after my escape from the quicksand that I took a few steps inland, stumbling over the tussocks of tough grass and gray, withered salt bush, to find a resting place where I might stay and recover my strength for the long walk home, for I felt in no mood for fishing now. But it was all weird, dreary and disquieting—a bit of desert forming a fitting antechamber to that awful death trap. Rough grass in patches, sand heaps blown hither and thither by hurricanes, thin, straggling bushes, clumps of 'black boy' grass—so called from its black stems and thick, tufted heads of wiry grass—were dotted over its barren expanse.

"Presently I noticed a peculiar sibilant sound which seemed to fill the sea and air. What was it? I stopped and listened. It could not be the sighing of the evening breeze or the swirl of swiftly running waters. It was something different. What was that black shadow rapidly spreading over the gray ground in front of me? Not the shade of night? No. It moved. The sound now became terrible and defined, and it seemed to emanate from that moving shadow in front.

"Like a flash I realized what that moving darkness was. It was the vanguard of a veritable army of snakes, and the mysterious sound I had heard was their angry hissing! I was on the breeding ground of the black snakes, those deadly cobras of Western Australia, whose bite is death! I had heard tales of the place, but had never attached much credence to them.

"And, now, it seemed by thousands, the horrible reptiles were swarming over the ground, all apparently coming in my direction!

"With a shriek of terror I turned and fled, conscious that my life depended upon my speed. Behind me there came in hot pursuit that awful host, led by great brutes at least twelve feet long, whose orange coloring flashed over the ground like waves. They evidently intended to wreak vengeance on the invader of their cherished solitude. How could I have mistaken that sound? The hissing of the enraged reptiles, always ferocious, now filled my ears with a deadly menace.

"Making a wide sweep, I fled on to the shore and flew rather than ran, glancing back only once more to see the snakes still in pursuit, writhing along, now orange, now black, as they looped their brilliant bodies in lightning-like movements, covering the ground at an amazing [illegible]. I shrieked as I ran, for my [illegible] had got entirely beyond my control, and the sight and thought of my terrible pursuers maddened me with terror.

"It was lucky I shouted, for as I turned a point of the shore my wild cries attracted the notice of two natives wading far out in the waves spearing fish. Seeing my peril, at once they dashed inshore and, seizing each an arm, tore with me through the shallows to deep water, where, limp and almost collapsed, I was supported by them as they leisurely swam across to a distant headland, the baffled snakes, unwilling to enter the water, slowly returning to their haunts.

"'You very much big fool,' said one of my helpers as they drew me ashore like a tangle of seaweed, helpless and dripping.

"'Bully big fool,' put in the other calmly. 'Black fellow no go when snake at home; catch him by himself. Snake for supper want.'

"I flung myself down and groaned at the memory of that awful experience. The natives stared awhile at me and then, wading out once more, calmly resumed their interrupted fishing. I love the blacks of Western Australia. They are the best fellows going, and I often wonder, with a shudder, what would have been my fate if they had not come to my aid in the nick of time."

Many Sudden Deaths on Sunday.

"Did you ever notice there are more sudden deaths in Philadelphia on Sunday than any other day in the week?" remarked a policeman. "It is true, and the records prove it. The police book in the electrical bureau in the city hall contains this record. Sometimes the fatalities of this nature are double the number of any week day. How do I account for it? I don't. I simply hazard a guess or two. It may be that folks eat more heartily on Sundey, and this fact no doubt aggravates certain ailments, bringing on acute attacks of heart disease and indigestion. For fifteen years I have noticed the excessive number of deaths on Sunday, yet I have never heard any one give a reason other than I have mentioned."—Philadelphia Press.

The Goal of Unionism.

The individual struggle begun in industrial slavery is now knocking its shackles to pieces and will end with each worker having a hand and voice in the management of his work, in cooperative control of all industry. It is as inevitable as that an acorn will grow into a tree. All things must grow or die; they cannot stay still even if they would.

To say that laboring men should be satisfied with a certain rise in wages or other favorable conditions is like saying that a rosebud should not want to blossom. The trouble with many people is that they cannot change their viewpoint, which must be done always as the world grows.—Robert Bruce Grant in Century.

Rough on the Lawyers.

They have a way of settling lawsuits in India that it would be well to copy here, according to the Springfield Republican: When a dispute arises over the ownership of land two holes are dug near together and the two opposing lawyers nicely planted up to their waists. The first one to become bitten by a bug or becomes so exhausted that he has to be exhumed loses the case for his client. This does away with unnecessary talking and adds an interesting element of chance to the game.

Scott Was Rated as a Dunce.

As a boy Walter Scott gave few indications of his coming greatness and was described by one of his early preceptors as "the boy that has the thickest skull in the school." Afterward at Edinburgh university the future "wizard" was thus epitomized by one of the leading professors: "Dunce he is, and dunce he will remain."

The land office late on Friday last handed dow their decision in the case of Steven Singer and Victor Bourma vs William Grandin in favor of Bourman. Singer, the first settler, left the land in 1902 on recieveing a letter from the commissioner of the general land office notifying him that paries settling on the land before date of openig were trespassers. After singer left the land Bourman moved on the land and continued his residence theron aad the office holds that singer abandond his first settlement the superior right is with Bourman as a prior settler. The local office in decideing this case followed the decision in the case of Currier, wherein he was awarded the land. Which stands today as a monnment to the honer and sinciriousenss of the department to get actul bonfide settlers on the land.

An Italian Brigand's Horse.

Among south Italian brigands even their horses are taught to resist the officers of the law. During the encounter at Rana Bucca, in which the brigand Mirto was killed, the gendarmerie wes amazed by the furious behavior of his horse, which lashed out on all sides, and succeeded in injuring one of the officers. On inquiry afterward among the prisoners taken it wes ascertained that the horse had been trained to behave in this way by being repeatedly flogged until he kicked one of the brigands, dressed as a carabineer, approaching him. The horse at last became such an adept that he might be relied upon to kick and fear furiously at the mere sight of a uniform.—London Globe.

Disappointed.

A small miss who had but recently mastered her catechism confessed her disappointment with it thus: "Now, I obey the fifth commandment and honor my papa and mamma, yet my days are not a bit longer in the land, for I'll put to bed every night at 7 o'clock just the same."

The Little Things That Fret.

"My, but the old man's a most unreasonable growler!"

"You think so?"

"I know it. Why, he's growlin' from mornin' till night, an' all on earth he has to do is to pay all the bills for the family."—Atlanta Constitution.

Suffering

Will Not Help Your Disease, but Will Weaken Your Nerves.

Folks who think it is better to bear pain than soothe it—are wrong.

Old-fashioned doctors used to say it was better, because they had nothing with which to ease pain but dangerous, heart-paralyzing drugs.

But now, that a safe remedy has been found, Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills, it is wrong to suffer, for nothing can be gained but weakened nerves.

A safe rule to remember is: When in pain, take an Anti-Pain Pill.

This will soothe your quivering nerves.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills relieve pain by restoring the natural secretions, in which they differ from opium and similar narcotic drugs, which relieve pain by checking the action of the glands.

They are sure and harmless, and are the latest medical treatment for the cure of Headache, Neuralgia, Backache, Rheumatism, Dizziness, Toothache, Stomachache, Menstrual (Monthly) Pains. Also nerve irritations like Sea-Sickness, Car-sickness, Sleeplessness, Indigestion, etc.

Pleasant to take, quick in results.

"I have used Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills for sick, nervous headache, and have received the best results. I heartily recommend their curative properties, for they are successful."—REV. RAY A. WATROS, D. D., Iowa City, Ia.

General Gordon's Wife.

Through the entire civil war General Gordon's wife accompanied him, never leaving his side save when the exigencies of campaign made her presence impossible. To the faithful devotion of his wife General Gordon owed his life. In the bloody battle of Sharpsburg, Gordon, while in the midst of the carnage, was shot five times. As soon as he fell his wife rushed to his side and carried him to safety, stanching the flow of blood and attending his wounds until medical aid could be procured. She remained with him in the hospital until he had recovered, and when General Gordon went back to join his command Mrs. Fannie Haralson Gordon followed her husband.

The Annual Bath in the Ganges.

The largest regular assemblage of people in the world is said to be the crowd which gathers annually at Benares, in India, to bathe in the Ganges. A large temple, or rather a series of buildings, is on the shore at this point, while steps reach down to the water's edge. The Hindoos crowd upon this bank in enormous numbers, the crowd at times numbering upward of 50,000. As the natives are dressed in the brightest colors, the crowd gives the impression of an enormous bed of flowers.

MISS MARJORY HAMPTON, OF NEW YORK.

Miss Marjory Hampton, 2616 Third Avenue, New York City, writes: *"Peruna is a fine medicine to take any season of the year. Taken in the spring it tones up the system and acts as a tonic, strengthening me more than a vacation. PURE BLOOD.

Blood Impurities of Springtime—Cause, Prevention and Cure.

Dr. Hartman's medical lectures are eagerly scanned by many thousand readers.

One of the most timely and interesting lectures he ever delivered was his recent lecture on the blood impurities of spring. The doctor said in substance that every spring the blood is loaded with the effete accumulations of winter, deranging the digestion, producing sluggishness of the liver, overtaxing the kidneys, interfering with the [illegible] bowels and the proper [illegible] blood.

This condition [illegible] produces what is popularly known as spring fever, spring malaria, nervous exhaustion, tired feeling, blood [illegible] ing and many other names [illegible] peptic and constipated; sometimes [illegible] is weak, nervous and depressed; and again he may have eruptions, swellings and other blood humors. Whichever it is, the cause is the same—effete accumulations in the blood.

Nothing is more certain within the whole range of medical science than that a course of Peruna in early springtime will perfectly and effectually prevent or cure this almost universal affection.

Everybody feels it in some degree.

A great majority are disturbed considerably, while a large per cent. of the human family are made very miserable by this condition every spring.

Peruna will prevent it if taken in time.

Peruna will cure it if taken as directed.

Peruna is the ideal spring medicine of [illegible] medical profession.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of [illegible] Columbus, Ohio.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

COLONEL C. J. MONFORT.

Colonel C. J. Monfort, who had been hovering between life and death for ten days died April 9 at the Windsor hotel, St. Paul. For many years he had operated the hotel, and he was widely known through the northwest, both politically and socially.

Col. Charles J. Monfort has been one of the best known men in St. Paul for more than forty years. He assumed charge of the Windsor hotel twenty-four years ago and since that time his acquaintance widened throughout the state and the Northwest.

Col. Monfort was born in Colchester, Delaware county, N. Y., March 18, 1841. He moved to St. Paul when a young man and was connected with the People's bank, of which his brother, D. A. Montfort, was cashier. During the war he was in the office of Maj. Phianey, paymaster for the department of Dakota. He assisted in preparing Fort Ripley for defense against an attack from Hole-in-the-Day during the Sioux outbreak in 1862.

After the war he was associated with his brother in the grocery business, the firm being known as Munfort Bros. Their first store was at Seventh and Jackson streets, and they afterward moved to 5 East Third street. While the firm continued in the business it was known as the leading fancy retail grocery firm of the city.

Col. Monfort quit the grocery business in 1880 and became connected with the Windsor hotel, buying out the interest of Mr. Ball in the firm of [illegible] which then operated the hotel. The new management [illegible] known as Summers and Monfort. [illegible] Windsor Hotel company was [illegible] in February, 1891, after the withdrawal of Summers from the old firm, and Monfort was made president and manager, a position which he continued to hold. [illegible]

He was appointed on the [illegible] board. He was also made a colonel on the governor's staff, being the first appointed by Gov. Clough and later by Gov. Van Sant. Other than these he has held no public office.

Col. Monfort is a widower and has one daughter, Mrs. J. G. W. Dunn, and two sisters, Mrs. John Summers of St. Paul and Mrs. J. H. Keyes of Oneonta, N. Y.

Attempted Suicide.

Excitement was created at Brainerd when the city was aroused by the ringing of bells and firing of guns. When a large crowd gathered at central hose house it was learned that Mrs. John Brackner had left her home at six o'clock, leaving word that she was going to drown herself.

Posses were formed and men went out to the river banks with lanterns. One party of men had not been gone long before they spied the form of a woman on a floating cake of ice in the middle of the river. They secured a boat and rowed out just in time to rescue the woman who had evidently decided not to jump into the water but was hanging on to the ice.

Mrs. Brackner is the wife of a local blacksmith. She was recently returned to Brainerd from the Fergus Falls insane asylum.

Poisoned.

The elaborate Easter services at the Gethsemane Episcopal church, Minneapolis, came near ending in a tragedy.

Over sixty members of the choir took part in the processional but the recessional was sung by a forlorn hope.

Thirty of the members were poisoned at a breakfast served by the church after the early morning service.

For a time it was feared some fatalities would result, but now it it is believed all those taken are out of danger.

It has been the custom of the church to provide a breakfast for the members of the choir who appear to sing at the 6:30 a. m. service on Easter, and the usual meal was prepared.

News Notes.

The employing printers and the typographical union at Duluth are at loggerheads and a strike may occur.

Fire at 2 o'clock in the morning completely destroyed the interior of the German Methodist church at Winona.

There is $1,301,014.61 in the state treasury, according the monthly report of State Treasurer Julius H. Block.

In a fit of despondency John Noel, a saloonkeeper at 1400 Fourth street NE, Minneapolis, shot and killed himself with a revolver.

The Doctors Failed.

Kilgore, O., April 11.—A rather remarkable case has just come to light in this place. Mr. John T. Riegle had been suffering for some time with an aggravated form of Kidney disease which had caused him a great deal of discomfort.

He tried the treatment of several doctors, but did not get any better. At last he chanced to read an advertisement of Dodd's Kidney Pills, a remedy which has been making many wonderful cures, and he bought some at once and began to use them. He says of the result:

"Dodd's Kidney Pills do just what they are advertised to do. I can praise them for the good they have done for me. They cured me completely after the doctors had failed, and I wish that every poor sufferer could hear of them, for I know they will cure Kidney trouble."

There seems to be no case of Kidney Trouble, Rheumatism or Backache that Dodd's Kidney Pills will not cure perfectly and permanently.

At the Wrong End.

"I have called," said the foreigner, "to ask for your daughter's hand."

"Have you spoken to her yet?" asked the American father.

"No. I thought—"

"Well, you're at the wrong end of the line," interrupted the old gentleman. "She runs her mother, and her mother runs me."—Chicago Post.

I would often wake from a restful sleep in such pain and misery that it would be hours before I could close my eyes again. I dreaded the long nights and weary days. I could do no work. I consulted different physicians hoping to get relief, but, finding that their medicines did not cure me, I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it was highly recommended to me. WOMEN BREAK DOWN.

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS CURE BAD ACHING BACKS QUICKLY

Sometimes women drift into a condition of "half invalid." Continual languor—all tired out, run down, backache, nerves shattered, headache, terrible pain, no appetite, poor digestion. In nine cases out of ten it's because the kidneys fail to do their work of filtering the poisonous system waste from the blood. The kidneys are weak and need the strengthening help of Doan's Kidney Pills. Read how these pills repair a weakened physical condition when this condition is caused by sick kidneys:

Mrs. Sadie Mettles of 394 W. 4th Ave., Columbus, Ohio, says: "Prior to the year 1898 I suffered considerably from backache, pain in the head, languor and depression and weakness of the action of the kidneys. The pain was always worse in the morning and I felt miserable. I was induced to procure a box of Doan's Kidney Pills and I began their use. They proved prompt and effective. They cured me and there has been no return of the trouble since taking them. I owe all the credit to Doan's Kidney Pills."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mrs. Mettles will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists, price 50 cents per box.

Sometimes women drift into a condition of "half invalid." Continual languor—all tired out, run down, backache, nerves shattered, headache, terrible pain, no appetite, poor digestion. In nine cases out of ten it's because the kidneys fail to do their work of filtering the poisonous system waste from the blood. The kidneys are weak and need the strengthening help of Doan's Kidney Pills. Read how these pills repair a weakened physical condition when this condition is caused by sick kidneys:

Mrs. Sadie Mettles of 894 W. 4th Ave., Columbus, Ohio, says: "Prior to the year 1898 I suffered considerably from backache, pain in the head, languor and depression and weakness of the action of the kidneys. The pain was always worse in the morning and I felt miserable. I was induced to procure a box of Doan's Kidney Pills and I began their use. They proved prompt and effective. They cured me and there has been no return of the trouble since taking them. I owe all the credit to Doan's Kidney Pills."

WASHINGTON LETTER

TIMELY GOSSIP FROM THE NATIONAL CAPITOL.

THE POST OFFICE MUDDLE

Men Who Are Making Reputations Out of the Investigation—Developing New Political Leaders—Rapid Legislation.

Washington.—One of the memorable things to be accomplished by the Fifty-eighth congress in a very short session will be the appropriation of money to begin the work of extending the capitol in accordance with the original plans of Architect Walters, to whose genius so much of the beauty and dignity of that splendid structure is due. It is estimated that it will cost a total of $2,500,000 to build out the capitol along the contemplated plans and that it will take several years to complete the restoration.

Will Not Notice the Change.

The scheme is to carry out on the east front of the capitol an addition which will increase the accommodations by nearly one-third, but which, in spite of its ambitious character, will hardly affect the general appearance of the structure so that the average observer would notice the difference. The addition will cover a large part of the plaza where crowds have gathered every four years, time out of mind, to see the newly elected president make his inaugural address. The marble facing will cover at last from view the unsightly stucco work of the older part of the building and will bring the entire front of the great structure into perfect harmony and make it in reality what it has long pretended to be, the most beautiful and impressive public building in the world.

In the course of the improvement the rotunda, now dingy and cheap in its decorations, will be lined with rare marbles, which will bring that also into harmony with the dignity of the purpose of the capitol.

The Post Office Row.

The post office discussions are bringing to the front just now some interesting people. In the house of representatives Mr. McCall, of Massachusetts, has been put at the head of the special committee selected to investigate the so-called Bristow report, to find out whether members of congress are in reality seriously compromised by the report and especially to discover just how the report came to be made up and how it happened that it was ever sent to the house and published to the world.

Reed Complimented McCall.

There seems to be no question that the facts in the compilation were brought together at Mr. Bristow's request in order to justify certain statements he had made with references to congressmen who have brought influence to bear at the department.

As to the publication of the report with the unfortunate advertising of innocent men, it develops that Chairman Overstreet was undoubtedly, and with the best intention in the world, responsible for that part of the programme.

As to the substance of the report, it develops that a great hullabaloo was raised over a very trivial affair and that nobody is seriously smirched. But whatever the finding of the special committee, it is bound to receive credence in the house and through the country on account of the high standing of the man who is at the head of it.

Representative McCall has a reputation all his own in the house, earned by years of faithful service and by independent exercise of an honest judgment. Mr. McCall is one of the men who, though an undoubted partisan, has never been suspected of slavish subserviency to the party machine. From the day he entered congress he has never hesitated to vote against republican measures which did not meet his full approval and while at times he has been bitterly attacked for his lack of regularity he has retained always the profound respect of his associates in the house and, what is perhaps more to the purpose, the firm support of a strong republican district.

Speaker Reed in his later years was a close friend and great admirer of the Massachusetts congressman. When Mr. McCall, alone of all his party associates, voted against the resolution precipitating the war with Spain, Reed, who as speaker had to sit silent and see the resolution go through, drew him aside into the speaker's room at the close of the session and, closing the door behind him, exclaimed with a shadow of regret in his voice: "McCall, how I envy you the luxury of that vote!"

It can be imagined that a consistent following out of such a policy has not tended to make the Massachusetts representative especially popular in his own party however much he may be respected, but the general willingness on both sides of the house to accept his conclusion in the pending investigation shows that even an independent member of congress may have his uses.

Hay, of Virginia.

Another man who has gained reputation out of this post office talk is Representative Hay, of Virginia. Hay is one of the new brand of southern congressmen who looks on the practical side of national politics rather than on the sentimental side, which, for nearly a generation after the war, was favored by statesmen south of the Mason and Dixon's line. Hay is one of the younger democrats in the house but he is recognized as one of the safest leaders and his resolution calling for the post office investigation, which was responsible for all the recent rumpus, has still further enhanced his prestige.

Hay Started the Rumpus.

For three congresses now Hay has been chairman of the democratic caucus, and if anything were to happen to John Sharp Williams the chances are that Hay would succeed Williams as the democratic leader on the floor. He is not a flowery orator and makes no pretence at anything of the kind, but when he talks he carries conviction and there is no man in the house who has greater success in securing the enactment of legislation outside of party lines.

Hay belongs to the practical group of southern statesmen, among whom Gorman, of Maryland, and Martin, of Virginia, are excellent types. If he came from a northern state he would undoubtedly take rank among the leaders of the national democratic organization.

Credit Due Wynne.

Some time, after the politics is all squeezed out of the post office mess, Robert J. Wynne, the first assistant postmaster general, will come in for fair share of the credit which rightly belongs to him for first suspecting the rottenness in the department and insisting upon the investigation that has resulted in its cleansing. If it had not been for Wynne there would have been no postal investigation and if it had not been for his stubborn persistence after the investigation began it would not have gone so far as it did and would have not uncovered the full extent of the rascality of Beavers, Machen and their associates.

Robert J Wynne.

It was Wynne's representations to the president that first drew the president's attention to the condition of affairs in the department, and it was Wynne's revelations to the postmaster general which first brought him to a realization of what was going on among his subordinates.

Mr. Bristow happened to be the fourth assistant postmaster general in charge of the force of post office inspectors, to whom as a matter of administrative detail the work of investigation had to be assigned. But Bristow was put in charge of detective work at Wynne's request and the scope of Bristow's investigation was extended beyond a mere perfunctory examination into specific charges by Wynne's shrewdness and courageous persistence.

It was against Wynne that the attacks of the combined forces of the grafters were first directed and Wynne is still the special object of their resentment and vindictiveness; yet curiously enough one result of the investigation has been to lessen the prestige of the office of first assistant postmaster general and to diminish the responsibility of the man who is responsible for putting the department on a firm business footing for the first time in 30 years. The post office committee of the senate has awakened to what was going on and has amended the post office appropriation bill so as to restore to the first assistant postmaster general some of the duties of which he had been deprived.

SUBDUED A MAD ELEPHANT.

How Gil Robinson, the Trainer, Conquered a Rebellious Beast.

Gil Robinson, the famous circus man, is full of reminiscences of the old circus days when he, with his father, the late John Robinson, was making the family fortune with Robinson's circus. An elephant story in a daily paper brought out some of Gil's recollections of his days as an elephant trainer, especially as related to one huge pachyderm who reveled in the name of Chief.

"Chief," said Mr. Robinson, "was one of our best and at the same time worst elephants. He was a great performer and very kind to children, but he had little use for men. Familiarity with them had bred contempt in his leathery head. One day in an Ohio river town Chief lost his usual good nature toward children, too, and killed a boy who got too near him. We didn't want to kill the elephant, for he was valuable, so we hustled him out of town with the show. But he had to be taught a lesson, and my father put it up to me to teach it to him.

"I had Chief taken to a dock by the river in the next town and a chain fastened around one of his hind legs. Then, with a big derrick, we hoisted him clear off the ground. Next I made all the men get big clubs and start in to beat the everlasting nerve out of the elephant. They beat, plugged, pounded and jabbed, but Chief never let out a whimper. And if you can't make an elephant bellow when you punish him he is still defiant. When he gives in he whimpers.

"Finally I got a bale of hay and, spreading it under Chief's swinging frame, set fire to the loose hay. In a minute he was conquered. He let out a cry of defeat that there was no mistaking it, and they cut him down. I led him back to the tent by the trunk as docile as a kitten. From that day on he was frightened to death of me and it was pitiable to see his fear. I used to laugh when I thought of that mass of flesh and strength being scared of a little being like me, when if he had known it he could have blotted me out with a wiggle of his trunk or one stamp of his enormous foot. But he was just plumb afraid of yours truly.

"One night I was at a prize fight in Cincinnati when a boy came down the aisle and whispered in my ear. 'The big elephant's loose, Mr. Robinson,' was all he said, but I knew what that meant, and I followed him. Chief, it seemed, had got away from the show and was out in one of the suburbs pushing over a little cottage settlement, which he was rapidly exterminating. All he had to do was to lean heavily against a house, and over it would go. Then he would proceed to the next and in that manner had disposed of seven or eight frame dwellings. As I drew near he was wrestling with another, and the terrified family, at a safe distance, was weeping and wailing. Chief seemed to be enjoying the affair hugely, and I could almost see his huge sides shake with laughter as I approached from behind.

THE HAY WAS SET ON FIRE.

"I followed his trail easily and soon came upon him. Chief was the boss of

"I ran up alongside of him and gave him a slap. 'Here, you lopsided, leather headed, moth eaten old rapscallion,' I shouted, only those were not quite the names I called him, 'what the dickens do you mean?'

"Chief turned and saw me. His face fell. He began to tremble, and he let out a yell of fear that shook the neighborhood. It was like a mother catching her youngster in the jam closet.

"I grabbed him by the trunk, gave him a yank or two and lugged him back to his tent, calling him down all the way. And he whimpered and bawled like a baby. Once at home, I had him soundly punished.

"Chief was like that till the day of his death, and I have the satisfaction of remembering that at least one inhabitant of this earth lived and died in the real fear of yours truly."

The Home of Luther.

Few thoroughfares have been preserved in Europe which give an adequate idea of the streets of the middle ages. One of the most interesting of these relics is the home of Martin Luther, in Frankfurt-am-Main. It stands on the corner of a narrow street and rises to a height which seems unusual even in these days of tall buildings. Like most of the architecture of its period, the Luther house is half timbered and richly decorated. It is a very roomy place, though somewhat dark and probably badly ventilated. The Luther house, like many of its time, contained floors increasing in size as they rose, thus giving a curiously picturesque but top heavy appearance to the building.

The Expression "So Long."

With reference to the origin of the familiar expression "So long" a correspondent of the London Academy suggests that it is derived from the Norwegian "Saa Laenge," a common form of farewell, equivalent in meaning to "au revoir" and pronounced like "so lang," with the "g" softened. There was a fair number of Norwegians among the settlers in America, to judge by names, and it is quite likely the phrase was picked up from them. It is in general use among the Dutch in South Africa.

The Home of Luther.

Few thoroughfares have been preserved in Europe which give an adequate idea of the streets of the middle ages. One of the most interesting of these relics is the home of Martin Luther, in Frankfurt-am-Main. It stands on the corner of a narrow street and rises to a height which seems unusual even in these days of tall buildings. Like most of the architecture of its period, the Luther house is half timbered and richly decorated. It is a very roomy place, though somewhat dark and probably badly ventilated. The Luther house, like many of its time, contained floors increasing in size as they rose, thus giving a curiously picturesque but top heavy appearance to the building.

For Several Years Eager Fortune Seekers Worked Over It.

A tale is told of a rich gold mine in Idaho with a ledge of ore which once extended above the surface of the ground in a clear, solid ridge several feet high and entirely distinct from the surrounding formation. This ledge was long and unbroken and lay directly across the course which hundreds of prospectors took every year to reach other gold fields. This obstruction of rock, the great value of which was long unknown, was too high to be surmounted by pack animals, so the prospectors cut a trail directly through it. For several years these eager gold seekers passed backward and forward over this trail in search of gold mines. One night a prospector camping near this ledge of rock picked up a bit of it and from force of habit took it to a creek near by and washed it. Then he examined the stone, and, to his great astonishment, he found "colors" in it—bits of sparkling gold. The prospector does not mistake gold when he sees it. He is not deluded by iron crystals or bits of mica, as the "tenderfoot" frequently is. The gold sparkle is clearer and brighter than that of any other mineral, and it is the same in sunshine and shadow.

The prospector, tremendously excited, broke off more pieces of the ledge and found more of it bearing free gold. Then he located his claim, and that was the beginning of a rich mine. Yet for years the [illegible] of prospectors had passed over this trail through the cut in this ledge, [illegible] its value, [illegible] prominence it [illegible]

A LESSON IN MANNERS.

The Way a Clever American Woman Managed a Duke.

A story which belongs to a time several years ago when an English duke was a much sought after personage in New York society is told by Mr. James L. Ford in "The Brazen Calf."

This duke, contemptuously noting the eagerness with which New Yorkers fawned upon him, had formed the habit of going out to dinner without troubling himself to put on evening dress. A lady had invited him to dinner without knowing of this peculiarity and was awaiting his arrival when her butler opened the door and cast a glance at her over the heads of intervening guests which said plainly that something was wrong,

She hastened into the hall to find the duke standing there clad in the checked sack suit and flaming red tie which had seemed to him "good enough" for a dinner party of American calf worshipers. This woman, however, had presence of mind, and she advanced upon him radiant and smiling.

"No," she said decisively as she took him by the hand; "I won't accept any excuses. You're come round to tell me why it is that you can't dine here to night, and it's ever so much nicer of you to do that than just to send a note. The dinner's a little late, and you've just time to go home and dress and be back here before we begin."

The nobleman opened his mouth to reply, but his hostess shut him off in a second: "No; you needn't make any explanations or excuses. Remember, you've only twenty minutes, so you must hurry."

A moment later the astounded duke found himself hurrying toward his hotel and perhaps wondering what new social force it was that was impelling him in that direction.

A WOMAN'S POINT OF VIEW.

The Things That Most Impressed a Feminine Tourist Abroad.

"What impressed you most?" said the gushing girl to the woman who had just returned from a trip abroad. "You must have seen such wonderful things."

The woman who had traveled thought deeply a few minutes; then she said slowly: "I think it was the lack of napkins in Scotland. Yes, that was it. My dear, there isn't a sign of a napkin on the tables in Scotland. If you ask for one, you may get it, and then again you may not. I was entertained in the homes of some of the finest people in Scotland, and never a napkin did I get.

"The next most impressive thing was the size of the coins in England. I used up a great deal of good, nervous energy trying ways and means to stuff those cart wheels into my little purse. One day, when my pocketbook had become unusually clumsy, I became almost hysterical, and that night I dreamed that I was using belt buckles for the coin of the realm.

"There's one queer thing, though. You know I never could get it through my head how one made double change. You know what I mean—some one gives you too much change, and then you give them some money, and it's all right or something of that sort. Well, I never could understand that process in good United States money, with which I'm more or less familiar, but over there in England I accomplished that feat again and again without a tremor. Don't ask me how I did it. I don't know. It just came to me. Can I do it now in United States money? No, I can't. I left that special ability behind in England."—New York Tribune.

On the Christmas Tree.

The old fashioned stockings and hearts and crosses and animals cut out of tarlatan outlined with worsted and then filled with fat candies and tied on the tree are always popular ornaments. Sugar figures bought in the confectionery store will serve to break the monotony. The baker at Christmas time usually has his windows filled with horses, dogs, cats and men and women made of delectable cake dough and artistically ornamented with colored sugar curlycues. These are toothsome and attractive to the small boy and girl.

Candles in small candle holders are always scattered well over the tree. It is a wise precaution to keep a pan of water in which is a wet sponge in case of accidents. When a spark falls upon a bough, the sponge quickly applied to the spot will check the spread of the fire.—Washington Star.

Disappointed.

A small miss who had but recently mastered her catechism confessed her disappointment with it thus: "Now, I obey the fifth commandment and honor my papa and mamma, yet my days are not a bit longer in the land, for I'm put to bed every night at 7 o'clock just the same."

1901-1904.

NeKoma, Ill., April 18th.—Away back in 1901 Mr. Albert E. Larson of this place was suffering with Kidney disease and backache. The pain he was called upon to endure was very great and rendered his life almost a burden to him. He heard of Dodd's Kidney Pills and began to use them and almost at once he began to get better. He had been unable to work, but Dodd's Kidney Pills soon made him able to go to work again. He used the remedy till he was completely cured. He says he has grown stronger year by year since he got rid of his old trouble.

"Dodd's Kidney Pills certainly gave me a complete and permanent cure, for I have felt stronger since I used them in 1901 than ever before. I can do harder work now in 1904 than I could last year. I cannot praise Dodd's Kidney Pills enough. I would not be without them in the house."

Young women may avoid much sickness and pain, says Miss Alma Pratt, if they will only have faith in the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—I feel it my duty to tell all young women how much Lydia E. Pinkham's wonderful Vegetable Compound has done for me. I was completely run down, unable to attend school, and did not care for any kind of society, but now I feel like a new person, and have gained seven pounds of flesh in three months.

"I recommend it to all young women who suffer from female weakness."—Miss Alma Pratt, Holly, Mich.

FREE MEDICAL ADVICE TO YOUNG GIRLS.

All young girls at this period of life are earnestly invited to write Mrs. Pinkham for advice; she [illegible] in a motherly way hundreds of young women; her advice is freely and cheerfully given, and her address is Lynn, Mass.

Judging from the letters she is receiving from so many young girls Mrs. Pinkham believes that our girls are often pushed altogether too near the limit of their endurance nowadays in our public schools and seminaries.

Nothing is allowed to interfere with studies, the girl must be pushed to the front and graduated with honor; often physical collapse follows, and it takes years to recover the lost vitality,—often it is never recovered.

A Young Chicago Girl Saved from Despair.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—I wish to thank you for the help and benefit I have received through the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills. When I was about seventeen years old I suddenly seemed to lose my usual good health and vitality. Father said I studied too hard, but the doctor thought different and prescribed tonics, which I took by the quart without relief. Reading one day in the paper of Mrs. Pinkham's great cures, and finding the symptoms described answered mine, I decided I would give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. I did not say a word to the doctor; I bought it myself, and took it according to directions regularly for two months, and I found that I gradually improved, and that all pains left me, and I was my old self once more.—Lillie E. Sinclair, 17 E. 22d St., Chicago Ill."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the one sure remedy to be relied upon at this important period in a young girl's life; with it she can go through with courage and safety the work she must accomplish, and fortify her physical well being so that her future life may be insured against sickness and suffering.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

How We Grow.

Minnesota's leading cities have made substantial growth during the past three years, according to statistics just compiled by the census bureau showing the population based on estimates for the different cities during the years since decennial census of 1900.

The total for the six leading cities during 1001 was 470,000 and in 1902, 478,770, and during last year the total was 487,477.

Some of the leading cities made substantial gains during these years and the population statistics now show that St. Paul has advanced from 163,065 in 1000 to 172,039 in 1903. Minneapolis gains from 202,718 to 214,112. The growth of St. Paul has been steady each year, jumping up about 3,000 each since her decennial census in 1900.

Duluth has made a gain of about 5,000 during the three years, and is now given a population of 57, 397. Mankato has increased from 10,599 to 11,127. Stillwater has made only a slight gain. Her total in 1900 being given at 12,318 and in 1903 at 12,636. A gain of nearly a thousand is noted in Winona, the total in 1900 being given at 19,747, and in 1903 the population was put at 20,167.

The growth of all these cities has been steady during each year since 1000.

The most interesting fact in connection with the growth of St. Paul is that it has thus far since 1010 gained practically in the same ratio as during the period from 1890 to 1900, and if the same ratio is continued the population in 1010 should be more than 200,000.

All Kinds of Ore.

Excitement incident to the mineral discoveries at Swanville is at its height. The rush of prospectors to the hills is well under way, and not a train comes into the station without leaving several strangers who have been attracted by the rumors of the presence of precious metals in hills and streams in the neighborhood.

At Irish creek and vicinity the country is being searched for gold and silver, strong evidences of which have been found. One man who has been at work there for several days has found quantities of the finest gold dust and small nuggets in the sand of the bed in the stream, and has had them on exhibition in the village a day or two. It also has been determined that bedrock lies only about twelve feet below the surface of the ground there and this is taken as a good indication.

Killed by Clothesline.

A clothesline is attributed as the primary cause of the death of Joseph Hammerschmidt, who died at his home, 442 Blair street, St. Paul. His parents refused to permit Coroner W. A. Miller to make an post-mortem examination on the ground that the clothesline was the cause of his death, and the coroner acceded to the wish of the relatives.

Mr. Hammerschmidt ran into a clothesline in the yard of his home last Christmas and fell backward, striking on the back of his head. He complained of pains in his head after the accident. He had attended a funeral the day he died. He returned to work in the afternoon and in the evening complained of pains in his head. Dr. Carl Wirth was called and decided that the patient had hemorrhage of the brain. Hammerschmidt died soon afterwards.

Business Boy.

John Hirstrio of Eveleth, who is only ten years old, has created quite a disturbance in Duluth railroad and pulpwood circles. This child in years transacts business with them like a man of years' experience. He is a Finlander, and his father is a pulpwood contractor who operates on the Mesaba range. The little boy comes to Duluth and contracts for cars, sells and receives the proceeds from the pulpwood and performs all the other business details relating to such transaction. He goes to hotel and registers like a veteran. Mr. Hirstrio remains at camp directing the work of cutting the pulpwood and loading it on the cars, and his ten-year-old son does the rest.

Typhoid Fever.

Dr. H. M. Bracken, secretary of the state board of health, has prepared a special report showing that there were 360 deaths from typhoid fever in Minnesota in 1903, an increase from 314 in 1902. The largest number of deaths occurred in Minneapolis, where 101 persons succumbed to the disease, as compared with sixty-four in the previous year.

The table bears out the fact that St. Paul is one of healthiest large cities in the country. There were only eighteen deaths from typhoid fever in the capitol city, a decrease of eight in 1902. Duluth had forty-one deaths in 1903 and thirty-two in 1902.

Sir Samuel skillfully supported swooning Sara. Swimming shorewards Sir Samuel successfully succored Sara. Seeming somewhat shaky, Sir Samuel sampled some spirits—special Scotch. Sara saw Sir Samuel's self-sacrificing spirit; Sir Samuel saw Sara's sweetness. Sir Samuel soon sought Sara. Striding slowly, Sara sighed softly. Sir Samuel seemed speechless.

"Say something, Sir Samuel," said Sara.

"Say Sam, Sara," said Sir Samuel.

Sara, smiling shyly, softly said "Sam."

"Sara—Sally!" stammered Sir Samuel. "Sweet Sara—sweetheart!"

Sara solemnly surrendered.

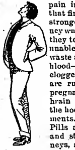
DANGEROUS NEGLECT.



It's the neglect of backache, sideache, pain in the hips or loins that finally prostrates the strongest body. The kidney warnings are serious—they tell you that they are unable to filter the body's waste and poison from the blood—the sewers are clogged and impurities are running wild to impregnate nerves, heart, brain and every organ of the body with disease elements. Doan's Kidney Pills are quick to soothe and strengthen sick kidneys, and help them free the system from poison. Read how valuable they are, even in cases of long-standing:

L. C. Lovell, of 415 North First St., Spokane, Wash., says: "I have had trouble from my kidneys for the past ten years. It was caused by a strain to which I paid little attention. But as I neglected the trouble, it became worse and worse until any strain or a slight cold was sure to be followed by severe pain across my back. Then the action of the kidney secretions became deranged and I was caused much annoyance besides loss of sleep. Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my notice and after taking them a short time their good effect was apparent. All the pain was removed from my back and the kidney secretions became normal. Doan's Kidney Pills do all that is claimed for them."

A FREE TRIAL of this great remedy which cured Mr. Lovell will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists, price 50 cents per box.

MARCH, APRIL, MAY.

Weak Nerves, Poor Digestion, Impure Blood, Depressed Spirits.

The sun has just crossed the equator on its yearly trip north. The real equator is shifted toward the north nearly eighteen miles every day. With the return of the sun comes the bodily ills peculiar to spring. With one person the nerves are weak; another person, digestion poor; with others the blood is out of order; and still others have depressed spirits and tired feeling.

All these things are especially true of those who have been suffering with catarrh in any form or la grippe. A course of Peruna is sure to correct all these conditions. It is an ideal spring medicine. Peruna does not irritate—it invigorates. It does not temporarily stimulate—it strengthens. It equalizes the circulation of the blood, tranquilizes the nervous system and regulates the bodily functions. Peruna, unlike so many spring medicines, is not simply a physic or stimulant or nervine. It is a natural tonic and invigorator.

If you do not receive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

WHEN YOU GO TO THE WORLD'S FAIR

Suggestions That Should Be Helpful to the Stranger in St. Louis—No Trouble When You Get Your Bearings—The Greatest of World's Expositions.

It will be worth all the self-denial that one may practice for several years to see the World's Fair of 1904 at St. Louis. Money saved, earned or borrowed cannot be better spent than in getting acquainted with the world's progress as revealed at this latest and greatest of expositions. All of us cannot travel around the world to take note of what the nations are doing, but the nations from all around the world desire us to know and have sent their best works to St. Louis to be placed on display.

Within the two square miles of the Louisiana Purchase exposition at St. Louis there is more to be seen than ever was brought together in ten times the space before. It is a great collection of expositions massed into one. It is nearly twice as large as the Columbian exposition at Chicago, nearly ten times larger than the Pan-American exposition at Buffalo. Every exhibit palace offers the equivalent of a splendid exposition, each covering many acres of space.

The largest of these is the Palace of Agriculture, with its 23 acres under roof and filled to the doors with the most wonderful agricultural collection ever assembled upon any occasion. The important states and nations of the world are all here alongside great numbers of individual exhibitors. Five great staples have been chosen for extraordinary display. Corn, cotton, sugar, rice and tobacco are here arrayed as they have never been before and undreamed possibilities are revealed to inquiring minds. Such a dairy display was never attempted and such a collection of farm machinery and tools was never placed on exhibition.

The Palace of Transportation is next in size, covering 15 acres. One may only hint at the wonders it contains. The historical exhibit of locomotives is one of the features. It shows the development of 75 years in locomotive construction. Strange indeed is the person who is not yet impressed with these evidences of man's long struggle with the problem of rail transportation, the most civilizing of modern influences, next to the newspaper, which must always stand first. To describe in detail this exhibit would be a long story in itself. The exhibit is made complete by the installation of the largest locomotive ever built and by some magnificent imported locomotives. We cannot leave the Palace of Transportation without a reference to the great automobile show, the motor boats and other water craft, and the great carriage display.

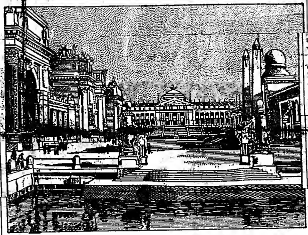
Now let us cross the flower gardens to the Palace of Machinery just south of Transportation. The huge power generators are the first things to arrest the eye—the Allis-Chalmers engine of 5,000-horse power, the Curtis steam turbine of 8,000-horse power, the Parsons steam turbine of 5,000 kilowatts, the four Westinghouse generators of 3,000-horse power each, and each as high as a house. And then other generators great and small of all kinds—the most wonderful display of engines ever assembled. But these are not all. Think of ten acres of glistening machines of every kind and you have some idea of the contents of the Palace of Machinery.

We cross the lagoon to the eastward and come to the beautiful Palace of Electricity, with eight acres of exhibits from many countries which show the marvelous development of electrical science. To the north again over one of the arched bridges we approach the Palace of Varied Industries, viewing its wonderful grace and splendor as we go. Here are 14 acres of exhibits from all over the world. The Palace of Manufactures is the same size and stands on the opposite side of the Plaza of St. Louis. It is equally interesting in the variety and newness of its contents. Here again the nations of the world and the manufacturers from all parts of the United States display their best products.

Opposite the Palace of Manufacture to the southward is the Palace of Education, this being the first time that education has been allotted a great building all its own. A variety of schools in daily session are the feature of this eight-acre display. The two exhibit buildings in the eastern part of the main group are Mines and Metallurgy and Liberal Arts. The Department of Mines and Metallurgy has a 12-acre outdoor display in addition to the nine acres under roof.

The United States Government building is on a broad terrace half way up the hill in the extreme eastern part of the grounds. Uncle Sam never had such a large exhibit building at an exposition before. It is nearly 800 feet long and 250 feet wide. Another building devoted to fisheries built in the style of an old Roman house stands upon lower ground directly southwest from the [illegible] building. The outdoor display of ordnance is not the least interesting of the government exhibits.

The Palace of Art at the World's Fair contains 135 galleries. Each gallery is a large room, lighted from above and filled with the choicest works. All countries of the world in which art has made noteworthy progress are represented. The group of buildings which house this magnificent display represents an expenditure of more than $1,000,000. The group is situated upon high ground south of Festival hall. The Festival hall is the center piece of a rich architectural work crowning the hill which rises above the Grand Basin and upon whose slopes are the Cascades and gardens. Here another million dollars has been expended to produce a decoration that will distinguish this exposition from all others.



PALACE OF LIBERAL ARTS AND MINES, WITH THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT BUILDING IN DISTANCE.

In a short article such as this one can only refer to such great features as the Philippine exhibit, covering 40 acres and containing more than 1,000 natives from those far-off Pacific islands; the United States government Indian exhibit, covering many acres and occupying a large building; the exhibit of the United States bureau of plant industry, consisting of an outdoor map of the United States, covering four acres; the great athletic field where the Olympian games of 1904 will be held; the Aerial concourse where the airship and balloon contests, having prizes aggregating $200,000, will take place; the anthropology exhibit; the 40 or more state buildings; the outdoor exhibits of the departments of agriculture and horticulture, covering many acres; the Palace of Horticulture, 400 by 800 feet, containing the largest exhibits of horticulture ever brought together; the beautiful Temple of Fraternity; the magnificent buildings erected by foreign nations; the great inside inn, where 6,000 guests may find accommodation at rates from $1.50 to $5.00 per day; the extensive live stock pavilion; the great landscape clock made of flowers, 112 feet in diameter, and giving the correct time of day; the intramural railway, which gives a seven-mile ride for a single fare, and many other things of interest to visitors.

Even to the timid traveler St. Louis presents no complications. It is all as plain as a b c when once you get your bearings. The streets all run east and west or north and south with rarely a confusing diagonal. Market street and its western extension, Laclede avenue, are the dividing line which separates the northern and southern sections of the city. All streets north and south from Market begin their numbering at Market, so that No. 2024 South Broadway, for example, would be 20 blocks south from Market street. All east and west streets begin their numbers at the Mississippi river, so that No. 3120 would be 31 blocks west of the river. Sometimes in a long block 200 numbers are allowed.

If we are to wait for peace in the far east until Russia wins a decisive battle from Japan there will no peace.

No political prestige can be gained in this neck of the woods by trying to belittle the present governor of Minnesota. Nor does it help any candidates chances to say that he should be supported for a state office because he is opposed to Gov. Van Sant.

Tom Lawrence ex-he-Sheriff of Polk county seems to have an empty void in his stomach, which can only be filled by one more pull at public "pap". He will be a candidate for the nomination for sheriff before the republican primaries, and will undoubtly try to get indorsed by the Prohabition, Democratic, Socialist's and Peopels party, as he wants the office and is any old thing to get the Coon.

The Warren Registerman was in Crookston last week and sized up the political situation and found that Polk county was practily solid for the Princeton man for governor. He was further assured that Dunn would carry not only Polk but Red Lake, Norman, Beltrami and Clearwater counties. In all the counties mentioned above Collins is regarded as a very poor second in the race, while Eddy is not in the running at all. If the Register man had got outside of Crookston he pobably would have modified his statements somewhat. —Fertile Journal.

He must have stopped at the Crookston Times office and talked politicts for an hour and taken the next train back to Warren.

LAW MAKERS AND DRAINAGE.

An action was commenced by Andrew Johnson, et al, of Greenwood township last week, against the Clearwater Loging Co., for flooding their lands by building dam on the river to hold the water for the purpose of driving their logs to market.

This trouble is of yearly occurrence and the people up this way are geting used to thease chronic lawsuits. It is a difficult problem to solve and decide and do justice to all parties, as the lumberman must dam up the water to get their logs to market and when they put them in it drowns out the farmers crops. There was an attempt made by the farmers to get an appropiation in the last legislature to dig a monster ditch through the towns of Johnson, Winsor, and Greenwood, to drain off part of this surplus water from the farmers lands and thus overcome a part of the difficulty, and be it said to the honor of the gentelman interested in lumbering, they did what they could to help get it. Our representative the right Hon. Gunder Krostue openly opposed it, while the representative from the 61st district L. C. Simons, of Red Lake Falls, would not take any interest in it whatever but was doing what he could to get a sugar beet bounty bill passed in the interest of manufacturers liveing in the city of Minneapolis. Bennett did do as much as to introduce the bill, which was killed by the opposition of the other gentelman, who were in just the position to do it, being members of the drainage commitee. And here we are the lumberman trying to get their logs down and the farmers commencing suit against them for doing it, and the same pimple heads wanting to be realected to the next legislature, who have no more idea about the true interests of their district's than a twelve year old school boy.

HONEYBEE QUEENS.

THE MANNER IN WHICH THEY ARE FED BY THE WORKERS.

There Are Numerous Safeguards In the Hive to Provide Against the Administration of Poison Honey—It Is Different With Wasps.

The safeguards provided against the administration of poison to the despotic oriental rulers are rudimentary compared with those which stand between queens of the honeybee and such a risk. Curiously enough, this is a phase of the internal economy of the beehive which appears to have escaped observation.

In the British isles no poisonous honey is collected. If it exists the bees have learned to avoid it. Probably there is none, as the honey from at least one dangerous plant, the deadly nightshade, is harmless. Ivy honey would be the most suspicious of any gathered on a large scale, and it only exerts, so far as observation goes, a slightly laxative effect on the digestive organs. Although in this country no poisonous honey is known, it is met with in other places, notably in Asiatic Turkey. It was in this region that Xenophon's soldiers were poisoned 2,300 years ago by honey from the Azalia pontica, a plant which still flourishes in Armenia. Some centuries later a Roman army suffered similarly, but less severely, there being no deaths.

The precaution of compelling the cook to eat a portion of every dish, which is the usual safeguard of despotic rulers, or the still more primitive plan of giving the first helping to a little dog, can be eluded by a clever Borgia by having only one-half of a bird or pastry poisoned. In a wasps' nest each forager on returning proceeds directly to the queen and offers refreshment. Consequently the queen is sometimes destroyed by slowly acting poison. Further as regards wasps, it is observed that when any larvæ not recently fed perceive the queen receiving food they become restless. If nearly grown they wag their heads in a suggestive way, which plainly conveys a demand for a share. Each forager after feeding the queen gives the balance of his load direct to the nurses.

In the case of the honeybee one possible reason why no virulently poisonous honey reaches the hive may be that the insect foolish enough to collect any would probably die, as the so called honey sack is really a stomach in which a preliminary digestive process proceeds. This is proved by the polariscope, which shows that, while the nectar of the flowers is pure cane sugar or levulose, the substance in the hive cells is diametrically half dextrose and half cane sugar. Dextrose is invert sugar, a coarse variety of which is the glucose of commerce. Forager bees returning to the beehive place the half digested product known as honey in their storerooms with other honey. This mixing would have the effect of attenuating a poisoned load should such be brought in.

Foraging bees never feed the queen or young larvæ, but they give a mouthful or two to drones in passing. Just before sealing up, the metamorphosis workers and drones are fed with honey mixed with pollen. Not so the young queens, who only get a further supply of the redigested milky substance known as chyle, which is the sustenance of all larvæ indiscriminately during the first three days of their existence. During the chrysalis stage there is no feeding. It is the business of a gang, distinct for the time being, to cater for the queen and young. They bring the food from the stores and submit it to the digestive process referred to, after which it is regurgitated to supply the needs of the queen and young larvæ. The attendants are numerous, and each supplies only a minute quantity. The queen bee is so constituted that her digestive system is capable of assimilating only the prepared food of chyle. She will die in a few hours on a comb containing honey, although kept at the temperature of the hive.

Thus it would appear that the safeguards are:

First.—A bee collecting poisonous honey would probably die before reaching the hive.

Second.—If one succeeded in depositing poisoned honey, the circumstance that it did so would prove the poison to be not virulent, and its mixture with other honey in the storeroom would still further attenuate the poison and render it harmless. This is the stage at which the product becomes human food. It has, as stated above, occurred that poisoned honey has passed both these lines of defense.

Third.—Should the honey be still deleterious the alimentary attendants of the queen would first suffer, and only those bringing wholesome food would reach her, as a struggle for the privilege of feeding her majesty is continually in progress.

Fourth.—Should the stores pass the three safeguards before mentioned there is still another—viz, that each one of the queen's attendants feeds her only for a second at a time, and thus she would never get a sufficient quantity to affect her seriously. The queen is always on the move and the competition to feed her so great that she is continually bringing fresh bees in front of her, from which position more food can be administered. No worker bee would think of jostling; every one gives way to the queen.

Uneasy monarchs and others that may find some suggestions in these arrangements for securing their safety. Probably they will decide to take their chances rather than avoid risk by living on food which has previously been [illegible] by subjects, however loyal.

Butchers and Blue.

The blue smock of the butcher, says an English paper, has often aroused curiosity. The color was originally adopted by the guild of butchers in the middle ages at a time when each trade had its distinguishing color: but, while other guilds dropped their colors, butchers stuck to blue because blood stains are less noticeable upon that color than upon any other. At a very early period blue was the universal wear of serving men. It was then the cheapest of dyes. Sir Walter Scott in his well known poem "Marmion" talks of "an old, blue coated serving man."

Colchester's Oyster Feast.

Famous indeed is the Colchester oyster feast, and to be invited is considered the highest compliment the town can confer, not only from the importance of the function, but because at that meal is an unlimited supply of the finest obtainable natives, of which some sacks are consumed. Even from the times of the Romans these oysters have been celebrated, says the London Chronicle. Exclusive rights to the oyster fisheries were granted to the town under a charter of Richard I., and in the reign of Elizabeth horse loads of oysters were accepted as gifts by the courtiers of the time. Massinger's Justice Greedy commences his day with "a barrel of Colchester oysters," a statement that shows how altered the customs of today.

If we are to wait for peace in the far east until Russia wins a decisive battle from Japan there will no peace.

No political prestige can be gained in this neck of the woods by trying to belittle the present governor of Minnesota. Nor does it help any candidates chances to say that he should be supported for a state office because he is opposed to Gov. Van Sant.

Tom Lawrence ex-he Sheriff of Polk county seems to have an empty void in his stomach, which can only be filled by one more pull at public "pap". He will be a candidate for the nomination for sheriff before the republican primaries, and will undoubtly try to get indorsed by the Prohabition, Democratic, Socialist's and Peopels party, as he wants ths office and is any old thing to get the Coon.

The Warren Registerman was in Crookston last week and sized up the political situation and found that Polk conuty was practily solid for the Princeton man for governor. He was further assured that Dunn would carry not only Polk but Red Lake, Norman, Beltrami and Clearwater counties. In all the counties mentioned above Collins is regarded as a very poor second in the race, while Eddy is not in the running at all. If the Register man had got outside of Crookston he pobably would have modified his statements some what. —Fertile Journal.

He must have stopped at the Crookston Times office and talked politics for an hour and taken the next train back to Warren.

LAW MAKERS AND DRAINAGE.

An action was commenced by Andrew Johnson, et al, of Greenwood township last week, against the Clearwater Loging Co., for flooding their lands by building dam on the river to hold the water for the purpose of driving their logs to market.

This trouble is of yearly occurrence and the people up this way are geting used to thease chronic lawsuits. It is a difficult problem to solve and decide and do justice to all parties, as the lumberman must dam up the water to get their logs to market and when they put them in it drowns out the farmers crops. There was an attempt made by the farmers to get an appropiation in the last legislature to dig a monster ditch through the towns of Johnson, Winsor, and Greenwood, to drain off part of this surplus water from the farmers lands and thus overcome a part of the difficulty, and be it said to the honor of the gentelman interested in lumbering, they did what they could to help get it. Our representative the right Hon. Gunder Krostue openly opposed it, while the representative from the 61st district L. C. Simons, of Red Lake Falls, would not take any interest in it whatever but was doing what he could to get a sugar beet bounty bill passed in the interest of manufacturers liveing in the city of Minneapolis. Bennett did do as much as to introduce the bill, which was killed by the opposition of the other gentelman, who were in just the position to do it, being members of the drainage commitee. And here we are the lumberman trying to get their logs down and the farmers commencing suit against them for doing it, and the same pimp heads wanting to be realected to the next legislature, who have no more idea about the true interests of their district's than a twelve year old school boy.

HONEYBEE QUEENS.

THE MANNER IN WHICH THEY ARE FED BY THE WORKERS.

There Are Numerous Safeguards In the Hive to Provide Against the Administration of Poison Honey—It Is Different With Wasps.

The safeguards provided against the administration of poison to the despotic oriental rulers are rudimentary compared with those which stand between queens of the honeybee and such a risk. Curiously enough, this is a phase of the internal economy of the beehive which appears to have escaped observation.

In the British Isles no poisonous honey is collected. If it exists the bees have learned to avoid it. Probably there is none, as the honey from at least one dangerous plant, the deadly nightshade, is harmless. Ivy honey would be the most suspicious of any gathered on a large scale, and it only exerts, so far as observation goes, a slightly laxative effect on the digestive system. Although in this country no poisonous honey is known, it is met with in other places, notably in Asiatic Turkey. It was in this region that Xenophon's soldiers were poisoned 2,300 years ago by honey from the Azalia pontica, a plant which still flourishes in Armenia. Some centuries later a Roman army suffered similarly, but less severely, there being no deaths.

The precaution of compelling the cook to eat a portion of every dish, which is the usual safeguard of despotic rulers, or the still more primitive plan of giving the first helping to a little dog, can be eluded by a clever Borgia by having only one-half of a bird or pastry poisoned. In a wasps' nest each forager on returning proceeds directly to the queen and offers refreshment. Consequently the queen is sometimes destroyed by slowly acting poison. Further as regards wasps, it is observed that when any larvae not recently fed perceive the queen receiving food they become restless. If nearly grown they wag their heads in a suggestive way, which plainly conveys a demand for a share. Each forager after feeding the queen gives the balance of his load direct to the nurses.

In the case of the honeybee one possible reason why no virulently poisonous honey reaches the hive may be that the insect foolish enough to collect any would probably die, as the so called honey sack is really a stomach in which a preliminary digestive process proceeds. This is proved by the polariscope, which shows that, while the nectar of the flowers is pure cane sugar, or levulose, the substance in the hive cells is [illegible] half dextrose and half cane sugar. Dextrose is invert sugar, a coarse variety of which is the glucose of commerce. Forager bees returning to the beehive place the half digested product known as honey in their storerooms with other honey. This mixing would have the effect of attenuating a poisoned load should such be brought in.

[illegible] feed the queen or young larvae, but they give a mouthful or two to drones in passing. Just before sealing [illegible] workers and drones are fed with honey mixed with pollen, [illegible] the young queens, who only get a further supply of the redigested milky substance known as chyle, which is the sustenance of all larvae indiscriminately during the first three days of their existence. During the chrysalis stage there is no feeding. It is the business of a gang, distinct for the time being, to cater for the queen and young. They bring the food from the stores and submit it to the digestive process referred to, after which it is regurgitated to supply the needs of the queen and young larvae. The attendants are numerous, and each supplies only a minute quantity. The queen bee is so constituted that her digestive system is capable of assimilating only the prepared food of chyle. She will die in a few hours on a comb containing honey although kept at the temperature of the hive.

Thus it would appear that the safeguards are:

First.—A bee collecting poisonous honey would probably die before reaching the hive.

Second.—If one succeeded in depositing poisoned honey, the circumstance that it did so would prove the poison to be not virulent, and its mixture with other honey in the storeroom would still further attenuate the poison and render it harmless. This is the stage at which the product becomes human food. It has, as stated above, occurred that poisoned honey has passed both these lines of defense.

Third.—Should the honey be still deleterious the alimentary attendants of the queen would first suffer, and only those bringing wholesome food would reach her, as a struggle for the privilege of feeding her majesty is continually in progress.

Fourth.—Should the stores pass the three safeguards before mentioned there is still another—viz, that each one of the queen's attendants feeds her only for a second at a time, and thus she would never get a sufficient quantity to affect her seriously. The queen is always on the move and the competition to feed her so great that she is continually bringing fresh bees in front of her, from which position alone food can be administered. No worker bee would think of jostling [illegible] the way to the queen.

Butchers and Blue.

The blue smock of the butcher, says an English paper, has often aroused curiosity. The color was originally adopted by the guild of butchers in the middle ages at a time when each trade had its distinguishing color; but while other guilds dropped their colors, butchers stuck to blue because blood stains are less noticeable upon that color than upon any other. At a very early period blue was the universal wear of serving men. It was then the cheapest of dyes. Sir Walter Scott in his well known poem "Marmion" talks of "an old, blue coated serving man."

Colchester's Oyster Feast.

Famous indeed is the Colchester oyster feast, and to be invited is considered the highest compliment the town can confer, not only from the importance of the function, but because at that meal is an unlimited supply of the finest obtainable "natives," of which some sacks are consumed. Even from the times of the Romans these oysters have been celebrated, says the London Chronicle. [illegible]

A Scathing Retort.

An English lawyer who had been cross examining a witness for some time and who had sorely taxed the patience of the judge, jury and every one in the court was finally asked by the court to conclude his cross examination. Before telling the witness to stand down he accosted him with this parting sarcasm:

"Ah, you're a clever fellow—a very clever fellow. We can all see that."

The witness leaned over from the box and quietly retorted:

"I would return the compliment if I were not on oath."—"Personalia."

Vulgar Admiration.

Mr. Muchcash—What are you doing out there in the night air? Come into the house. Gladys—I was just admiring the moon, papa. Mr. Muchcash—What business have you admiring the moon when there are so many things in the house that I have bought expressly for you to admire? Anybody can admire the moon.

Hurrying Up the Baby.

A correspondent sends us an extract from a poem which recently appeared in a South African paper, thinking we shall approve of its sentiments. We do; we do. The inspired verse is entitled "Making a Man" and begins:

Hurry the baby as fast as you can,
Hurry him, worry him, make him a man.
Off with his baby clothes, get him in pants,
Feed him on brain foods and make him advance;
Hustle him, soon as he's able to walk,
Into a grammar school; cram him with talk;
Fill his poor head full of figures and facts,
Keep on a-jamming them in till it cracks.

A Bargain Hunter.

It was a pleasant looking Irishwoman, says the Philadelphia Ledger, who walked into a store and asked the price of the collars she had seen displayed in the window.

"Two for a quarter," said the clerk.

"How much would that be for one?"

"Thirteen cents."

She pondered; then with her forefinger she seemed to be making invisible calculations on the sleeve of her coat.

"That," she said, "would make the other collar twelve cents, wouldn't it? [illegible]"

Suffering

Will Not Help Your Disease, but Will Weaken Your Nerves.

Folks who think it is better to bear pain than to [illegible] it—are wrong.

Old-time [illegible] doctors used to say it was [illegible] because they had nothing with [illegible] to ease pain but dangerous heart-[illegible] drugs.

But now, that a safe remedy has been found, Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills, it is wrong to suffer, for nothing can be gained but weakened nerves.

A safe rule to remember is: When in pain take an Anti-Pain Pill.

They soothe your quivering nerves.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain-Pills relieve pain by restoring the natural secretions, in which they differ from opium and similar narcotic drugs, which relieve pain by checking the action of the glands.

They are sure and harmless, and are the latest medical treatment for the cure of Headache, Neuralgia, Backache, Rheumatism, Dizziness, Toothache, Stomachache, Menstrual (Monthly) Pains. Also nerve irritations like Sea-Sickness, Car-Sickness, Sleeplessness, Indigestion, etc.

Pleasant to take, quick in results.

"I have used Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills for sick, nervous headache, and have received the best results. I heartily recommend their curative properties, for they are successful."—REV. RAY A. WATROS, D. D., Iowa City, Ia.

WALLED SEOUL.

The Ancient Capital of Korea and Some of Its Peculiarities.

Seoul, the capital of Chosen, is built amid a network of hills eighteen miles from the sea. It is an ancient walled city, fortified in the strongest way by smells that would drive any but an Asiatic army forthwith into the ocean. It is poor in appearance, but rich in fleas. On autumn nights tigers frequently contest the right of way with belated pedestrians, and this is the chief reason why one has the entire street to oneself in a moonlight stroll after 8 o'clock. Metaphorically, one can scarcely see the town for the bald, bulbous and bullet headed Buddhist priests who fatten on the superstition of the populace.

Barring an occasional court function, marked by street processions, Seoul is triumphantly devoid of sights interesting to a traveler. The streets lack entirely those picturesque characteristics of a Chinese or Japanese thoroughfare, and a vista across the Korean house tops is one of appalling monotony. One seeks in vain for attractive souvenirs. In the small shops of Seoul Japanese beer, matches, cigarettes and cheap crockery form the chief stock in trade, while long stemmed Korean pipes and metal banded Korean knives are offered in the most pretentious shops. Here likewise can be had the really unique Korean fans, made of silk or paper, finished in oil and covered with curious native designs. These fans are dipped in water before they are used, and the little breeze produced by them is astonishingly cool.

The wall surrounding Seoul, from which kites are ever flying, is but a pocket edition of the great Chinese wall that leads down to the sea at Shanhaikwan. Piercing this Korean copy are the city gates—picturesque passageways—which are promptly and irrevocably closed with the setting of the sun. The west gate will be entered by the tourist on reaching the capital from Chemulpo, and should he come to the outside of this but a minute after the sun has disappeared behind the horizon and the "big bell" has boomed its mournful warning note he is elected to camp in the open until Phoebus has cycled the world on the equatorial path. If he reaches the gate five minutes before it closes on its groaning hinges he will witness a sight that will almost repay him for the toilsome trip up from the coast.—Outing.

His Sobriety.

A gentleman who had grave doubts as to a servant's sobriety one day accused him of intemperance and as a test chalked a line across the floor and commanded him to walk along it.

The fellow looked at the line for a bit, then at his employer, and said: "No jokes, now, sir. Which line do you want me to walk on?"

One of the English weekly papers tells a good "caddie" story. A distinguished amateur came to the links with the air of one who has only to come and see in order to conquer.

"Haw, caddie," he said.

"Two hundred yards, sir."

How to Keep House.

With all the luxuries and pleasures of this life, its big enjoyments and its smaller comforts, there is an offset or antithesis which we have to contend with in the form of aches and pains. In some way and by some means every one has a touch of them in some form at some time. Trifling as some of them may be, the risk is that they will grow to something greater and rack the system with constant torture. There is nothing, therefore, of this kind that we have a right to trifle with. Taken in time, the worst forms of aches and pains are easily subdued and cured by the free use of St. Jacobs Oil. No well regulated household ought to be without a bottle of this great remedy for pain. It is the specific virtue of penetration in St. Jacobs Oil that carries it right to the pain spot and effects a prompt cure even in the most painful cases of Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago. You want it also in the house at all times for hurts, cuts and wounds, and the house that always has it keeps up a sort of insurance against pain.

Mr. Plane (who is fond of dogs)—"Miss Waite, don't you think you ought to have an intelligent animal about the house that would protect you and—" Miss Waite—"Oh, Mr. Plane! This is so sudden."—Philadelphia Press.

Economy in Threshing.

The fact that there is more grain put into the straw stack than there should be, is something that merits the earnest attention of the up-to-date farmer.

Is it not possible to save the wastage of grain and time which attends the use of old-style machinery? This is something that should command the careful consideration of every farmer.

In line with the thought we call attention to the ad. of Nichols & Shepard Company, Battle Creek, Michigan, found in another column.

It would seem that the time has come when this great channel of wastage on the farm should be eliminated.

Increased Mortality.

More domestic animals died from infectious diseases in the last three months than in any other quarter since the live stock sanitary board was created a year ago, according to the quarterly report of Dr. S. H. Ward, presented at the annual meeting of the board. The unusual cold winter and the attended poor ventilation in barns and stables are attributed to the cause of the increase mortality.

There were 132 horses killed during the quarter on account of glanders, 382 in the twelve months. There were 3,179 suspected, of which 479 were tested.

There was unusually prevalent in the last quarter, the total number of deaths being as follows: Sheep 29, swine 27, cattle 26, dogs 17 and 2 horses

Escaped From Jail.

With a rope that he made from his cell blankets, Harry Smith, 23, held on a charge of grand larceny, escaped from the insane ward of the county jail at Minneapolis.

Smith got out of his cell by crawling through the bucket hole, and got outside the corridor by picking the gate lock. The outside windows have no bars, and Smith tied one end of his blanket-rope to the cot in his cell, and let himself down to a fourth story window. He opened the window crawled over the transom into the hallway of the court house, and then walked down the stairs to the Fourth ave. entrance.

Smith made a similar escape from the Duluth workhouse.

After Blind Pigs.

A citizens' committee of the Midway district took a band in the effort to stamp out the blind pigs in Midway and secured two drey loads of evidence and the arrest of seven persons.

The raid was carefully planned and was made by Sheriff Justus' deputies armed with warrants made out by the county attorney, on the recommendation of Judge Finehout of St. Paul. The citizens took every precaution to prevent the raid from miscarrying. The members secured the evidence on which the warrants were sworn out, without the aid or knowledge even of the police, but in spite of their precautions the tip was given to some of those on the list, although not in time to do them much good.

Again Indicted.

Dr. A. A. Ames, four times mayor of Minneapolis, again has been indicted on the charge of receiving a bribe while he was chief executive of the city.

It is charged in this indictment that A. A. Ames, during December, 1901, and while he was mayor of the city, received, through his agent, Irwin A. Gardner, $20, which was paid to him by Bessie Lee in return for police protection, meaning that she was to be allowed to run her business free of molestation by the police of the city.

Suicide Through Despondency.

Despondent over the fact that he had been discharged after ten years' service in the Northern Pacific foundry at Brainerd, Henry Greener committed suicide at a hotel. He had gone back to work but was told his services were not wanted. He returned to his boarding house; complained that he had lost his job and later retired to his room. An attendant of the hotel went to went to Greener's room in the evening and found the man's body upright in a chair, with a revolver clutched in his left hand. Greener had shot himself in the mouth.

Trespassers Settle.

State Auditor Iverson is taking in money almost daily from timber trespass settlements. Since April 2, when A. C. Bruce paid in $12,722.16 for timber illegally cut from state land, twelve other cases have been settled, and $7,071.60 has been turned into the state treasury.

This makes a total of 103 settlements since Feb. 1, 1903. On these $58,151.24 has been paid. The settlements have all been paid for double or treble the appraised value of the timber, unless it has come into the hands of an innocent purchaser.

Chief Bemidji Dead.

Chief Bemidji, the oldest and the best known Indian chieftains of the northwest, is dead at Cass Lake, at the age of 85. He participated in many famous battles and volumes have been written concerning him. The town of Bemidji was named after him. Nearly the entire population attended the funeral. The burial was made in the Cass Lake cemetary.

News Notes.

St. Paul central high school debaters won the championship of the state high school debating league by defeating a team from the high school of Fergus Falls.

Charles Eisenmenger of St. Paul, was arrested at the instance of State Game Agent Fullerton, charging him with having fifteen perch out of season. Eisenmenger had them on sale in his meat market.

PERT AND PERSONAL.

Edward Gould is a director in 49 corporations.

Three or four members of the federal house of representatives are fond of munching the old-fashioned stick candy so popular among small children. Congressman Grosvenor, of Ohio, keeps a box of these dainties in a corner of his desk, getting his supplies from Col. French, the file clerk.

Recorder Goff, of New York, is telling of a wordy battle between two newsboys to which he was an interested listener in the city hall park the other day. "Ah, g'wan; I ain't in your class at all, at all," said one little fellow, impressively. "I needn't sell papers for a livin'. Why, me fader is a milkman!" "I know he is," retorted the other. "An' the milk he sells is so watery that if you spilled it on a black dog it wouldn't change his color!"

Curious reunions of old-time friends and acquaintances of frequent occurrence at Washington. The latest published instance is that of Senator Patterson, of Colorado, and Representative Humphrey, of Washington state, who were formerly fellow townsmen in Crawfordsville, Ind. Mr. Humphrey was only a small boy, however, when Mr. Patterson, 21 years his senior, departed from that college town to earn fame and fortune in the further west.

Dr. Abbott, of the English department at Columbia college, recently remarked that "Chronological coherence in ideas is much to be desired, but there are times when lack of it becomes too suggestive. For instance," he added, "I once heard a minister make his usual Sunday morning announcement as follows: 'The funeral of the late and much lamented sexton takes place on Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock. Thanksgiving services will be held in this chapel on Thursday morning at 11.'"

A unique reunion of ex-secretaries of war was observed in a corner of the senate chamber in Washington one afternoon recently. Senator Alger, Senator Proctor and Senator Elkins held a long confab, and were in the middle of their talk when Secretary Taft, the huge Ohioan, who now holds down the war secretary's war chair, came in and joined the group. Senator Proctor is tall and rather heavy set among ordinary men, but Secretary Taft, by tiptoeing slightly, can look over the Vermonter's head.

BANKERS' GOSSIP.

An Adamless Eden sort of a bank is projected for New York city. It is to be capitalized and officered by women and will solicit the patronage of women exclusively.

If the deposits now in the savings banks of this country were divided per capita, every man, woman and child would receive $41.21. The total sum is $2,035,204,845.

Some of the Brooklyn savings banks have recently increased their interest rate from 3½ per cent. to four per cent. The increased rate is said to be due to the advance in the interest on real estate mortgages in that borough.

The school savings bank system which has been put in operation in many places in New York state is now declared to be a violation of the banking act. The system was started by J. W. Thiry, who brought the idea from Europe. The plan is to induce children to save their pennies and bring them to their teacher, who places them in a bank. As the plan is generall beneficial to the young, it is probable that laws will be amended to admit of its continuance.

HAS A SAY.

The School Principal Talks About Food.

The Principal of a High School in a flourishing Calif. city says:

"For 23 years I worked in the school with only short summer vacations. I formed the habit of eating rapidly, masticated poorly which coupled with my sedentary work led to indigestion, liver trouble, lame back and rheumatism.

"Upon consulting physicians some doped me with drugs, while others prescribed dieting and sometimes I got temporary relief, other times not. For 12 years I struggled along with this handicap to my work, seldom laid up but often a burden to myself with lameness and rheumatic pains.

"Two years ago I met an old friend, a physician who noticed at once my out-of-health condition and who prescribed for me an exclusive diet of Grape-Nuts, milk and fruit.

"I followed his instructions and in two months I felt like a new man with no more headaches, rheumatism or liver trouble and from that time to this Grape-Nuts has been my main food for morning and evening meals, am stronger and healthier than I have been for years without a trace of the old troubles.

"Judging from my present vigorous physical and mental state I tell my people Methuselah may yet have to take second place among the old men, for I feel like I will live a great many more years.

"To all this remarkable change in health I am indebted to my wise friend and Grape-Nuts and I hope the Postum Co. will continue to manufacture this life and health giving food for several centuries yet, until I move to a world where indigestion is unknown." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Ask any physician what he knows about Grape Nuts. Those who have tried it know things.

Well Timed.

"That was a great sermon you preached this morning," said the old deacon, "and it was well-timed, too."

"Yes," rejoined the parson, with a deep sigh, "I noticed that."

"Noticed what?" asked the puzzled deacon.

"That several of the congregation looked at their watches frequently," answered the good man, with another deep sigh.—Chicago Daily News.

"Sound as a Dollar."

Monticello, Minn., April 25th.—Mr. J. W. Moore of this place stands as a living proof of the fact that Bright's Disease, even in the last stages, may be perfectly and permanently cured.

Mr. Moore says:—"In 1898, three reputable physicians after a careful examination told me that I would die with Bright's Disease inside of a year. My feet and ankles and legs were badly swollen; I could hardly stand on my feet and had given up all hopes of getting cured, when a traveling salesman told me that he himself had been cured of Bright's Disease two years before.

"He said he had taken to his bed and expected to die with it, but that he had been cured by a remedy called Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I commenced taking them at once and I am thankful to say that they saved my life. After a short treatment, I was completely restored to good health and I am as sound as a dollar."

Booming Business.

"That lobbyist seems to have a good deal of money to spend," remarked the first councilman.

"Yes," replied the other, "he's working for an ordinance to allow automobiles unlimited speed."

"Ah! in the interest of the Auto club?"

"No, the undertakers' trust."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Miss M. Cartledge gives some helpful advice to young girls. Her letter is but one of thousands which prove that nothing is so helpful to young girls who are just arriving at the period of womanhood as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound too highly, for it is the only medicine I ever tried which cured me. I suffered much from my first menstrual period, I felt so weak and dizzy at times I could not pursue my studies with the usual interest. My thoughts became sluggish, I had headaches, backaches and sinking spells, also pains in the back and lower limbs. In fact, I was sick all over.

"Finally, after many other remedies had been tried, we were advised to get Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I am pleased to say that after taking it only two weeks, a wonderful change for the better took place, and in a short time I was in perfect health. I felt buoyant, full of life, and found all work a pastime. I am indeed glad to tell my experience with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, for it made a different girl of me. Save Your Thresh Bill

The average old-style small cylinder thresher wastes enough grain and time to pay your thresh bill.

Why not save the grain ordinarily put into the straw-stack? Why not save the time which the ordinary threshing outfit wastes for you?

This can be done by employing the RED RIVER SPECIAL.

It has the Big Cylinder, with lots of concave and open grate surface.

It has the Man Behind the Gun, that does most of the separating right at the cylinder.

Besides these, it has all the separating capacity of other machines.

It runs right along, saving your grain and saving time, regardless of conditions.

There have come improvements in threshing machinery the same as in everything else.

As the modern self-binder is ahead of the old reaper of forty years ago, so is the Big Cylinder and Man Behind the Gun ahead of the small cylinder old-style thresher.

The old-style thresher with its small cylinder and limited separating capacity, has stood for years without much improvement.

The RED RIVER SPECIAL is the crowning improvement in threshing machinery.

It is built for modern, up-to-date work; to thresh well; to thresh fast; to save time and grain and money for the thresherman and farmer. It does it. There are reasons why. Send for our new book on threshing, it gives them and it is free.

Employ the RED RIVER SPECIAL, it is the only machine that has the Man Behind the Gun, and saves enough grain and time to pay your thresh bill.

GIVEN IN THE PRESS DISPATCHES

CONGRESS AT WORK.

Daily Proceedings of the Senate and House Briefly Told.

In the senate on the 25th several senators counseled delay in the consideration of the battleship provided for in the naval appropriation bill until the war in the far east demonstrates the comparative utility of the big sea fighters. The military academy bill, the last of the general appropriation measures, was discussed. The house passed a large number of bills, including the Alaska delegate bill.

In the senate on the 26th the Military academy appropriation bill, the last of the supply measures, was passed. In the house Mr. Dalzell renewed his charge that Bourke Cockran accepted money for making republican speeches in the campaign of 1896. Mr. Cockran indignantly denied the accusation, and presented a resolution to create a commission to investigate the charges. No action was taken on the resolution, a point of order being raised against it, and Speaker Cannon asked for time to consider the point.

In the senate on the 27th final conference reports on the sundry civil, general deficiency, post office and the military academy appropriation bills were agreed to, practically without opposition. In the house Messrs. Littlefield (Me.) and Williams (Miss.) made speeches of a political nature intended for the coming presidential campaign. Speaker Cannon ruled that the Cockran resolution for an investigation of the Dalzell charges that Cockran had campaigned for McKinley for "hire" in 1896 was not a privileged matter.

The second session of the Fifty-eighth congress was declared adjourned by President Pro Tem Frye in the senate and by Speaker Cannon in the house. The president went to the capitol and signed many bills. The closing session of the house was made notable by the demonstration which was evoked by the adoption of a resolution offered by Mr. Williams, the minority leader, testifying to the courtesy and impartial manner in which Speaker Cannon had presided over the house.

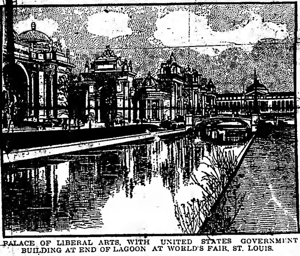
Beauty, Size and Sentiment of the World's Fair

It Is Larger and More Beautiful Than Any Other Exposition Ever Given.

When President Roosevelt touched the electric key at the white house in Washington, which set in motion the machinery of the world's fair at St. Louis, he not only opened to the world the greatest display of the arts of peace the world has ever known, but he gave to the nation a fit climax of a century of growth of that vast territory west of the Mississippi—the Louisiana territory.

When, at the swing of a lever, 90,000 gallons of water per minute was released to flow over the beautiful cascades in front of Festival hall, there was completed the most beautiful exposition picture the world has ever seen, a picture that will live in the memory of every visitor to the great fair. Chicago had its Court of Honor, its stately palaces set against a background of the blue waters of Lake Michigan; Buffalo had its wonderful illumination, its dusk of evening brightening into day again as the countless thousands of twinkling lights brought back the effect of the midday sun, but these pictures, beautiful as they were, have been surpassed by the glory of the cascades, the foaming waterway, rushing downward from the colonnades surrounding Festival hall, to the great lagoons, with their myriad [illegible], intersecting the wonderfully beautiful grounds in all directions.



PALACE OF LIBERAL ARTS, WITH UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT BUILDING AT END OF LAGOON AT WORLD'S FAIR, ST. LOUIS.

But as this newest of expositions surpasses all others in beauty, so, also, does it in size. One thousand two hundred and forty acres, literally covered with the treasures, the productions, the curiosities of the world, tell the story of the fair in a sentence. No one visitor will ever see it all, though he spent the full time the exposition is open at the task. An exposition which cost $50,000,000 before its gates were opened to the public; an exposition to which 52 nations from all corners of the world have sent their best for the people of the world to look upon; an exposition two miles long and one mile wide; an exposition that is twice the size of any other to which the public were invited; an exposition that is larger than the three previous large American expositions combined. Such is the exposition with which St. Louis celebrates the centennial of the Louisiana purchase.

But the men responsible for the exposition do not wish that it should attract by its size alone. They have builded for beauty, as well as for bigness, and who can stand in the center of the great panorama without being aroused to a pitch of enthusiasm by the beauty that surrounds him? It is the beauty, rather than the size of the fair, that first appeals to him.

Another thing that appeals to the American, the man who loves his country, is the sentiment the exposition stands for. It is a sentiment that is fully exemplified in the imposing heroic statues of the states that stand on either side of Festival hall. These statues typify, not the states of the east, but those of the west, the states carved out of the Louisiana territory, the states that stretch from the gulf to the Canadian border, from the Mississippi to Puget sound; states that have within a century of time been builded out of the wilderness. It is for these the exposition has been builded; it is these again that have made the exposition possible. The lesson they teach is written deep in the history of the nation.

To attempt an itemized description of the wonders this exposition has brought to the doors of the people of the central west is impossible in the space of a newspaper article. Twelve thousand car loads of exhibits found space within the great palaces. It is almost impossible to realize what such [illegible] means until one has gone from building to building, from exhibit to exhibit. Nor is the space in the building wasted. Every niche is filled with something of interest, and the demand was for almost double the amount at the disposal of the authorities. Some idea of this may be had from the statement that the breakfast food manufacturers alone asked for more space than would have filled all the Agricultural building, covering 19 acres of ground, and with four miles of aisles.

To pick even the more interesting exhibits is almost an impossibility, though among them might be mentioned the largest pipe organ ever manufactured, with 145 stops and pipes five feet in diameter and 32 feet long; four acres covered with agricultural machinery; the largest natatorium on earth; ten acres of roses; ten acres of live game; the largest engine ever built; a floral clock covering a quarter of an acre of ground, and of which the minute hand weighs over a ton. Such items but give the general idea of the entire fair. It is all big, it is all beautiful, it is all interesting.

The exposition management is not boasting of the "Pike." They wish the visiting public to remember the fair by what might be termed its legitimate portion, its wealth of educational exhibits, and yet, who would say that the shows along the "Pike" are not educational in their way. On it are villages of every sort, and amusement features of every description. Five million square feet of entertainment.

Among the most interesting of the many features of the fair are the various government exhibits housed in the Government building which is 800 feet long by 250 feet wide. Every function of the government is exemplified in this building. Among these exhibits is a complete government mint for the manufacture of coin, but at St. Louis Uncle Sam is making instead of coin gold souvenir medals, but the process is the same as if the product was legal tender. While Uncle Sam has a monopoly on the money-making business he guards the privilege jealously and does not risk the precious dies, which put their imprints upon dimes, dollars and eagles, to leave their place of keeping.

Besides a modern coining press, from which drops a bright medal at every click, is a screw press built in 1795 and used at that time to stamp small coins. There is also a hammer 120 years old and a small pair of balances formerly used in the Philadelphia mint. Comparing these with the improvements made in the last 100 years reveals how much easier it is now for Uncle Sam to replenish his treasury than it was when he was young in the business.

Processes used in the making of paper money are altogether different, for it is here that the printer and not the machinist and founder serves a usefulness. In another section of the big Government building at the world's fair there is a fully-equipped bank note printing plant.

In the Palace of Transportation may be seen a full size section of the great tunnel which runs from Jersey City under the Hudson river, under New York city at Thirty-fourth street, and under the East river to Long Island, a distance of eight miles. It illustrates the tremendous work and millions of dollars expended upon one of the greatest engineering works of modern times. A great laboratory for testing the power, efficiency and economy of locomotives is also in this building. Locomotives will be under full steam and full speed in this laboratory, the greatest show of locomotive testing ever conceived and costing a quarter of a million dollars.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

A Monument to Bemidji.

The people of Bemidji are talking of urging the next legislature to make an appropriation for a monument to be erected to the memory of the late Chief Bemidji. The people of Bemidji think that the state owes it to the late red man to take official notice of his passing, because he has always been a friend to the whites and never failed to be honest and square with them in perilous times. It is claimed that he was very influential in preventing the Chippewas from joining the Sioux in massacring the settlers at the time of the uprising in 1861 while most of the heads of families among the white settlers were away in the Union army. It was Chief Bemidji's dying wish that the whites extend to his grandson Black Toungle, aged ten years, the same kindly attention that they had always shown him.

A Suicide.

After he had been arrested and released on a charge of beating his wife, Peter Engh, a prosperous farmer who resided near St. Hilaire, hung himself to a tree near his house. His body was found by persons passing the highway.

Engh returned home from St. Hilarie, after he had drunk freely, and it is charged, beat his wife, driving her from the house.

Neighbors heard of the trouble and secured a warrant, which it was found later, had been illegally drawn up. Engh was taken to Red Lake Falls where he was released. Sobered by his experience, he returned home, and found his wife critically ill. Neighbors believe that remorse and melancholy, the consequence of his drinking, caused him to end his life.

Mob Graft.

Because W. E. Johnson wanted to get back some of the money he had spent in securing his position as superintendent of the poor department and also to recover money spent to bring Doc. Ames back to Minneapolis, C. H. Brown, Johnson's assistant in the department, [illegible] provisions p[illegible] by the department and was an accomplice of Johnson in the wrongdoing in the department. This is what [illegible] on the witness stand in the case [illegible] Johnson.

Johnson was cleared [illegible] Brown was [illegible] the same as Johnson.

The Mayor Yielded.

A crowd of citizens called on Mayor Hanson of White Bear and compelled him to close the saloons. He at first refused, but an ultimatum was sent to the saloon men and a dark warning to the mayor and council to the effect that unless the saloons were closed within an hour warrants would be issued for the liquor dealers' arrest and that proceedings might be taken against the officials. The saloons were closed within an hour.

Knife Drops on Man's Head.

A remarkable accident happened to T. W. McCarthy, a railroad brakeman. Mrs. Burke who lives in rooms overlooking the avenue in Duluth, had kept a window open during the day with a butcher knife. When she went to shut the window, and in taking the knife out dropped it and it fell outside. The knife dropped point downward and struck McCarthy in the top of the head, penetrating the skull. He was unconscious three hours, and physicians doubt of his recovery.

To Plant Whitefish.

A shipment of 3,000,000 whitefish fry to be planted in Lake Superior at Marquette went from Duluth in one of the cars of the United States fish commission. The fish were taken from the United States fish hatchery there, and there are 12,000,000 more whitefish fry together with 12,000,000 lake trout and 150,000 of brook, rainbow and steelhead trout. The fry will be planted within the next few weeks.

To Show Adulterations.

Minnesota's dairy and food department has prepared an exhibit for the St. Louis exposition showing the character of coloring matter used in many catsups, canned goods, flavoring extracts, fruit juices and liquors. Pieces of cloth soaked in the various articles have taken on a permanent color. After being washed in ammonia and alcohol, removing all vegetable color, they still show brilliant lines derived from the mineral or coal tar coloring matter.

News Notes.

The state dairy and food commission received word from Minneapolis that a retail dealer was fined $25 and costs for selling adulterated vinegar.

This is good weather for the gubernatorial race as it is warm. We mean the weather.

Summer tourist's shoud not fail to visit the city of Duluth, as it's parks, waterfalls, and seenery is worth going miles to see, as ye editor can say from personal observation, last week.

The Crookston Times is haveing lots of fun playing long-hand in the Polk county newspaper scrap for governor. They should save a little of their wind for the battle at the breastworks, where they are liable to arrive exhausted if they keep up the present pace.

If all the expenses, of Dunn's campaign are for postage on his phamplets sent out by mail, we would sugest that he cut off the expences of sending any more out this way, as they are being used by the children to play schooll with. Better use the postage money to hire smooth orators to convince the common people in this county, that some of yorr supporters are woking for their health.

The Red Lake Falls Gazette is of the opinion that we should jump onto our own representative instead of theirs and we might carry that $10,000 ditch appropriation home in our grip next tim. We have no ilwill toward Mr. Simons, but we consider it is our duty to let our large number of subscriber, liveing in his know how he represented them in the [illegible] legislature and then if they reelect him it is no funeral of ours as this paper and its editor will exist without any assistance from him.

Nelson's Mishap.

This is an entry from the journal of the surgeon of the British warship Theseus (the dates are from July and August, 1797): "July 24 and 25—Admiral Nelson. Compound fracture of the right arm by a musket ball passing through a little above the elbow, an artery divided, the arm was immediately amputated and the following given him: R Opi gr ij, ft. Pil, statim, &, etc. 28 July—Rested pretty well and quite easy. Tea, soup and sago. Lemonade and Tamarind Drink. 31 July—One of the ligatures came away; looks well. 1 August—Continued getting well very fast, stump looked well, no bad symptoms, sore reduced to the size of a shilling."

Smuggler's Book.

One of the devices of the smuggler is to bring in rings, watches and other compact articles of value concealed in books. A thick, innocent looking volume is selected for the purpose, and a hole is hollowed out in the center large enough to receive the smuggled goods. The book is then closed and tied up. Its weight offers no clew to the presence of the valuables, even if the inspector should take it in his hand, and a book is of course likely to pass muster even with the most careful customs agents.

Rode to a Sure Death.

Jacques de Chastel, bishop of Soissons, had accompanied Louis IX. (St. Louis) on the African crusade and, finding that nothing had been accomplished and that the army was about to return in disgrace to France, refused to go, took leave of his friends partook of the sacrament, mounted his horse fully equipped for battle and, in sight of the whole army, charged alone into the Saracen camp, where he was at once cut to pieces.

A Discord.

He—Ho! Absurd things those "Battledore Ballads." Eh! What?—She—I'm sorry you think so—my sister wrote them! He—Er—of course, I don't mean the words—they're rippin'. I mean the music—poor stuff—spoils words—composer ought to be kicked—who wrote it? She—I did! (Awkward silence.)—Punch.

Sister's Queer Actions.

Little Johnny—I guess sister doesn't care much for that young man that's after her now. Mother—I should hope not. Little Johnny—Of course she doesn't, 'cause she burns every one of his letters just as soon as she reads 'em.

Nothing Serious.

The Heiress—And I've been introduced to quite a number of the European nobility. Her Friend—Thinking of marrying any of them? The Heiress—Oh, no. I don't intend to buy a title. I'm merely shopping.—Puck.

When you bury animosity do not set up a headstone over its grave.—Dickens.

Nihilists At Work

Disasters to the Czar's Ships Laid to Terrible Organization.

Russia's Dreaded Secret Foe a Powerful Ally of Japan. Strike Terrific Unseen Blows.

According to a nihilist, now living in this country, an exile from his native land, Russia's secret enemies are at work. Some of the most crushing blows at her naval and military strength since the present war began have not been delivered by the Japanese. The mysterious series of "accidents" by which she has lost battleships, cruisers, soldiers and ammunition in the hour of need and which have no parallel in any previous war reveal the hand of the nihilist. They show the presence of a new party to the war, an undreamed of danger to the czar, an unexpected ally of the Japanese, the work of the most terrible secret organization in the world.

THE DESTRUCTION OF A BATTLESHIP.

The hour for which the nihilist has waited has come, and he is striking terrific blows.

Nihilism permeates the Russian army and navy. It is not confined to the private in the ranks nor to the man before the mast, but embraces officers of the highest grade as well. It is terrible because it is fanatical and intelligent. The nihilist is bound by a fearful oath to throw away his life for the cause when the opportunity offers. He sacrifices himself like a fanatic. But this devotion is not misdirected through ignorance. The nihilist is educated, which is the reason he is formidable. He is one man against the mighty czar, but he sees the spot where the latter is weak and strikes at it unerringly at the psychological moment.

Where would there be a more striking illustration of the weakness of a government against a single individual of this kind than the sinking of a battleship on her way out to meet the enemy, as happened at Port Arthur? How could there be a more crushing blow at a government than the placing of a bomb by a member of the crew somewhere down below the water line at such a moment?

A single instance of this would show only the work of a single man. But when the same thing happens again and again in widely separated places the operation of a gigantic and terrible conspiracy is revealed.

The official explanation is "torpedoes." That is what the Russian government says about the loss of the cruisers in the strait of Tsugaro, about the three splendid battleships sent to the bottom at Port Arthur, about the sinking of the Yenisei in Talienwan bay, about the most recent and terrible of all, the destruction of the Petropavlovsk and the killing of Admiral Makaroff.

It is always torpedoes. Generally these wonderful torpedoes that are getting in their fine work at a range of from three to ten miles are Japanese, but they are sometimes Russian. That is what they said in St. Petersburg about the cruiser Yenisei—that she "ran into one of her own mines." Skilled naval officers like the Russians are so liable to do this! But the explanation is that there was no Japanese warship about at the time to whose torpedoes the disaster could be ascribed, even at a distance of ten miles, like those marvelous torpedo throwers at Port Arthur.

Now, when you consider that torpedoes are an old, long tried method of naval warfare and that there is hardly a single instance in history of a warship being sunk by one of them you will begin to realize that there must be some other explanation of the mysterious series of disasters to the Russian navy. The public everywhere, knowing nothing by actual practice and observation of torpedoes, regard them with dread. Naval officers, who know all about torpedoes, regard them with more or less contempt.

The Russian government, however, will stick to the torpedo story. It would never do for it to confess that the ships were blown up by some of its own men from the inside, as is now believed.

In every big city in the world there are men who know the real facts. They are nihilists, socialists, exiles, Russians of thought and resolution. They know that in every Russian warship is a nihilist waiting his chance; that in every regiment, either among officers or men, is an imbittered enemy of the existing government, watching, planning, waiting. They know that the nihilist knows that the Transsiberian railway is vital to the army in the east and just where a bomb may most easily shatter it.

The Russian commissary department is in charge, among others, of nihilists, and the food is found poisoned, as happened the other day in Manchuria. Nihilist soldiers get a chance at the Russian secret magazines, and they blow up mysteriously, like the one at Golden hill, Port Arthur. Again, the breech locks of the ten inch and twelve inch rifles, as in the Port Arthur fortifications, are found injured, firing pins gone and the guns disabled at a critical moment. Who did it? No one knows officially.

But the Russian exiles know. It was the nihilist at work.

Mystery of the Popular Novel.

"We are apt to think," says the New York Evening Post, "that the selling of poor novels by the hundred thousand is a modern phenomenon in the book trade; but, in fact, it is not entirely new. In one of the group of Hawthorne's letters he says: 'What is the mystery of these innumerable editions of "The Lamplighter" and other books neither better nor worse?—worse they could not be, and better they need not be when they sell by the hundred thousand.' The question is a little pathetic when we remember that Hawthorne a little before this time had spoken of himself as the least read author in America. It shows, too, that the mystery of the popular novel was as great then as it is today. One could understand why a thrilling tale of cheaply concocted adventure might captivate the multitude, but the curious point is that some of the high sellers are simply dull and respectable. These things, too, lie on the knees of the gods."

A Stitch In the Side.

A "stitch in the side" is the popular and expressive term for a sharp stab felt in the side, an acute spasm producing pain, like the thrust of a needle, which is felt especially in the intercostal muscles. Probably its simplest form is due to muscular cramp connected with respiration and frequently brought on by violent exercise after a full meal, in which there is a greater accumulation of carbonic acid than can be readily assimilated or carried off. Such slight stitch is often removed by stooping; hence the old time popular remedy was to make the sign of the cross upon the foot.

Such a stitch is also associated with pleurisy, and then it is caused by a stretching of the not uncommon adhesions between two pleuritic surfaces. At other times the source is neuralgia. In any case to persist in muscular exertion when the stitch [illegible] is to make a great risk.

Drug Store Lights.

Apothecaries were once in the habit of using a red light as a sign of their trade. It so happened one night that a druggist found himself without the necessary red light, so as a substitute he placed a bottle of red liquid in the window, with a candle behind it. He was so well pleased with the effect that he placed another bottle of red liquid in another window.

This sign made such a brave showing that an envious rival cast about for means of improving the sign. He hit upon the scheme of placing a bottle of yellow liquid by the side of the red one and then surpassed his previous efforts and carried all before him by placing a green bottle by the side of the yellow one. The three made a sign which caught the approval of the town, and all the druggists quickly followed in the footsteps of their more original rivals.

The bottles were later replaced by the handsome colored vases, which are now such a familiar sign all over the world.

Too Long For His Bunk.

During the American civil war there was an assistant surgeon in the navy six feet four inches high, who was serving on board the Penobscot, which was only five feet eight inches between decks. The doctor's bunk was scant six feet [illegible] comfortable [illegible] bad weather on the blockade, when the spray was breaking over the ship the doctor was deprived even of the comfort of uncoiling on deck. After considering the matter thoroughly and remembering that long letters to the department were not always read and not always considered, he wrote as follows:

Hon. Gideon Wells, Secretary of the Navy:

Sir—Length of surgeon, 6 feet 4; height of wardroom, 5 feet 8. Respectfully,

E. C. VER MULEN,
Assistant Surgeon.

The department promptly dispatched him "until such time as more suitable ship could be found for his assignment."—Chicago News.

A Stickler For Etiquette.

Dr. Thompson, master of Trinity college, Cambridge, was an exceedingly cold and austere man, never taking much notice of the undergraduates under his care. On one occasion a Trinity man happened to be out walking and was caught in a storm. He ran across a field and took shelter beneath a large tree. When he arrived there, he found, to his horror, that Dr. Thompson was beneath it, seeking protection from the rain. For some time both stood silent, watching the clouds, till at last the undergraduate, growing desperate, ventured to remark that he thought it was clearing up a little. "Sir," said the doctor haughtily, frowning upon the wretched youth, "all communications to the master of Trinity must be made through the tutors."

The Hospitable Yuruk.

Among the qualities possessed by the Yuruk hospitality is no doubt prominent. Deprived by the very influence of his adventurous life of all the fierce instincts which characterize the Turcomans, restricted because of his occupations to the woods, the plains or the mountains; constantly exposed to the inclemency of the seasons, to dangers and enemies of all kinds, the Yuruk has conceived a generous and noble idea of hospitality, and he practices it with disinterestedness and pleasure. His tent, whether in his presence or absence, is always opened to the traveler, and food and drink in abundance are given him. The tents of the Yuruks are square and made of a sort of black woolen cloth.

An Island of Black Cats.

One of the queerest corners of the earth is Chatham island, off the coast of Ecuador. This island lies 600 miles west of Guayaquil, and the equator runs directly through it. It abounds in cats, every one of which is black. These animals live in the crevices of the lava foundation near the coast and subsist by catching fish and crabs instead of rats and mice. Other animals found on this island are horses, cattle, dogs, goats and chickens, all of which are perfectly wild.

Setting Her Right.

Noah Webster, the learned compiler of the well known dictionary, was an unconventional man who loved his unconventional friends, but his wife was a stickler for propriety. Once, says the Idler, the good lady left home on what was supposed to be a prolonged visit, but some interference caused her to return unexpectedly, and she found her husband in his shirt sleeves, holding carnival over strong waters in company with a number of friends also in shirt sleeves. The shocked lady gazed at this disreputable gathering for a moment in silence. Then she said, "Well, I am surprised!" "No, my dear," said the lexicographer mildly, "I am surprised. You are astonished."

Suffering

Will Not Help Your Disease, but Will Weaken Your Nerves.

Folks who think it is better to bear pain, than soothe it—are wrong.

Old-fashioned doctors used to say it was better, because they had nothing with which to ease pain but dangerous, heart-paralyzing drugs.

But now, that a safe remedy has been found, Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills, it is wrong to suffer, for nothing can be gained but weakened nerves.

A safe rule to remember is: When in pain, take an Anti-Pain Pill.

This will soothe your quivering nerves.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills relieve pain by restoring the natural secretions, in which they differ from opium and similar narcotic drugs, which relieve pain by checking the action of the glands.

They are sure and harmless, and are the latest medical treatment for the cure of Headache, Neuralgia, Backache, Rheumatism, Dizziness, Toothache, Stomachache, Menstrual (Monthly) Pains. Also nerve irritations like Sea-Sickness, Car-Sickness, Sleeplessness, Indigestion, etc.

Pleasant to take, quick in results.

"I have used Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills for sick, nervous headache, and have received the best results. I heartily recommend their curative properties, for they are successful."—REV. RAY A. WATROS, D. D., Iowa City, Ia.

The Widow In India.

No institution of India has been so exaggerated as that of the widow. She really occupies a place analogous to our antique old maid, now so fast disappearing in the girl bachelor. The aged widow who has remained true to her principles is regarded as a holy being who has withstood a thousand temptations and persecutions and commands the respect of a saint from all persons. She is the mother of all the children in the neighborhood, the helpmate of all the neighbors. At evening they flock around to hear her repeat the ancient legends, the stories of Sita and Saivtri, Draupdia, or sing the songs of Mira Bai. She is in great demand when cooking is needed for a sacred feast. She teaches the little ones their first hymns and prayers. She nurses the sick, comforts the dying. She believes herself to be bound to her husband for everlasting time through all births and deaths. The momentary separation here is but one shade of her marriage, an unknowable mystery of destiny. It breaks no tie.—Everybody's Magazine.

Helping a Composer of Music.

Halevy was somewhat of a pedant in writing music. He worked very slowly and deliberately and made hundreds of changes before he was satisfied. When ideas would not come at his bidding he employed a very singular means to help his genius along. A kettle filled with water was put over a fire, and the monotonous singing of the boiling water acted as a wonderful stimulant on his imagination. While composing, his brother, Leon Halevy, was always with him, doctoring the verses of the text and adding and scratching syllables wherever it was necessary. For this reason he was called "text surgeon" among his friends. Leon Halevy was by no means a prepossessing man, and the poet Heine is responsible for the following description of him: "He looks as if his brother had composed him."

Blunders by Novelists.

Novelists, even of eminence, are prone to make blunders. Sir Walter Besant, in "For Faith and Freedom," wrote after the Eykins had settled in Providence, "Barnaby soon grew tired of this quiet life and went on board a steamer bound for England, promising that we should hear from him." This was in 1686 or 1687, and the first steamer from America to this country did not reach Liverpool till July, 1819. Wilkie Collins also made numerous amazing blunders. In "The Duel in Herne Wood" he makes the story open with the receipt of a telegram, and the period is 1817, when twenty years had to elapse before the first telegraphic wire was laid. Three of the characters also talk of "taking the express train to London" in defiance of the fact that the first railway to London was not opened till 1838.

"I Think I Know."

Salesville, Ohio, May 2nd.—There is a Civil War veteran in this place who is very positive in his way and when he makes a statement everyone knows he means it and that it is true. His name is Mr. J. Stephens, and he has written for publication the following letter:

"I have been a sufferer with Kidney Disease since the Civil War. Sometimes my back would hurt me so that I could not dress myself for weeks. I took a few boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills and have found great relief. They have done me a great deal of good.

"The general health is much better since using Dodd's Kidney Pills. I can recommend this remedy to be the best thing for the Kidneys that is on the market. I have taken a heap of medicine for my back and kidneys and I THINK I KNOW WHAT HELPS ME.

"I am 63 years old and was through the Civil War as a soldier."

Mr. Stephens KNOWS that Dodd's Kidney Pills helped him. They will cure any case of Backache.

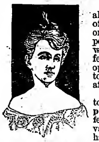
The letters of Miss Merkley, whose picture is printed above, and Miss Claussen, prove beyond question that thousands of cases of inflammation of the ovaries and womb are annually cured by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—Gradual loss of strength and nerve force told me something was radically wrong with me. I had severe shooting pains throught the pelvic organs, cramps and extreme irritation compelled me to seek medical advice. The doctor said that I had ovarian trouble and ulceration, and advised an operation. I strongly objected to this and decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I soon found that my judgment was correct, and that all the good things said about this medicine were true, and day by day I felt less pain and increased appetite. The ulceration soon healed, and the other complications disappeared and in eleven weeks I was once more strong and vigorous and perfectly well.

"My heartiest thanks are sent to you for the great good you have done me."—Sincerely yours, Miss Margaret Merkley, 275 Third St. Milwaukee, Wis.

Miss Claussen Saved from a Surgical Operation.



"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—It seems to me that all the endorsements that I have read of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound do not express one-half of the virtue the great medicine really possesses. I know that it saved my life and I want to give the credit where it belongs. I suffered with ovarian trouble for five years, had three operations and spent hundreds of dollars on doctors and medicines but this did not cure me after all.

"However, what doctors and medicines failed to do, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did. Twenty bottles restored me to perfect health and I feel sure that had I known of its value before, and let the doctors alone, I would have been spared all the pain and expense that fruitless operations cost me. If the women who are suffering, and the doctors do not help them, will try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, they will not be disappointed with the results."—Miss Clara M. Claussen, 1307 Penn St., Kansas City, Mo.

CULTURE OF HORSERADISH.

How to Obtain the Best Results with a Crop That Always Is a Ready Seller.

Horseradish is grown from sets or cuttings planted in the spring in rows two and a half to three feet apart. The gardeners here usually plant between rows of early beets and cabbage. I should prefer planting by itself if possible, as better care can be given earlier in the season. The soil should be just what you would select for good parsnips or carrots; a deep mellow soil fairly well enriched with good stable manure plowed in. The sets are the side roots of the plant, usually from the size of a lead pencil up to nearly as large again. These are cut in lengths of about five to six inches, and as the root is of nearly if not quite uniform size the smaller or lower end is sharpened by a slanting cut. This end is put down in planting. A small iron bar is generally used making the hole, about one and a half inches deeper than the cuttings, the crown of which should be one and a half to two inches below the surface. Cultivate and hoe often as soon as the rows can be seen through. A good fertilizer of eight to ten per cent. of potash, seven to eight available phosphoric acid and four per cent. of ammonia scattered along the rows and hoed in at second hoeing will greatly improve the crop. The roots are dug the first season late in the fall, and pitted for winter, and early spring [illegible] side roots should be r[illegible] in lengths of five to six inches for planting; this can be done in the fall before the roots are buried for winter. The cuttings can be tied in bundles and buried until spring, as frost will not injure them; they may be planted as early in spring as the ground can be worked. The [illegible] washed. The cut [illegible] taken from the ground [illegible] show how the side roots appear. These side roots are often one to one and a half foot in length, and I think sometimes more. If the main roots are well grown and trimmed they appear something like a barrel of small parsnips in market.—E. E. Burwell, in Rural New Yorker.

COMFORT FOR THE FAMILY.

Every Farmer Should Have a Garden in Which to Raise Vegetables and Fruits.

It has been asserted that the farmer is the most backward fellow in the world, so far as looking after his own comfort is concerned, and that may be stretched to include the comfort of his family. There is no question that the farmer and his family should be the best fed people in the world, but are they? Some are and some are not. Some have gardens, orchards, flocks of poultry and everything that can add to the comfort of the farm home. Most do not. Yet at the back door of every farmhouse is a nice piece of land that, with a little care, would yield many kinds of comfort to his family through every month of the year. The farmer that does not care to go into fruit raising unless he can make it a commercial operation is losing sight of one of the chief joys of raising fruit—that of having an abundant supply for his own table. What a pleasure it is to see the children and the women of the household reveling in their ripe fruit, both at picking time and at eating time!

But the things that would make a commercial orchard and a commercial berry patch unprofitable will not militate with the establishing of such for the supply of the family. Often the commercial fruit enterprise is a question of markets, but with the home orchard there is no question of a market. The fruit patch, whether it includes vines or trees or both, is a source of health to the whole family, and a delight to the younger members of the family that they will remember in their latest days.—Farmers' Review.

Evergreens as Windbreaks.

There is no other wind-break equal to an evergreen. Everyone will admit that, but the number of evergreens planted in shelter belts is exceedingly small. The popular idea that an evergreen is a very hard tree to make live is an erroneous idea, as a number of our stock farmers who have tried it, and know what they are talking about, will testify. The horses, the cows, the hogs, the sheep, and even the chickens, cry out for a wind-break, and there is none other so good as a belt of evergreens.—Woman's Farm Journal.

ONE DOLLAR WHEAT.

Western Canada's Wheat Fields Produce It—Magnificent Yields—Free Grants of Land to Settlers.

The returns of the Interior Department show that the movement of American farmers northward to Canada is each month affecting larger areas of the United States. Time was, says the Winnipeg Free Press, when the Dakotas, Minnesota and Iowa furnished the Dominion with the main bulk of its American contingent. Last year, however, forty-four states and districts were represented in the official statement as to the former residence of Americans who had homesteads in Canada. The Dakotas still head the list, with 4,006 entries, Minnesota being a close second with 3,887, but with the exception of Alabama and Mississippi and Delaware every state in the Union supplied settlers who, in order to secure farms in the fertile prairie country of Canada, became citizens of, and took the oath of allegiance to, the Dominion. Last year no less than 11,841 Americans entered for homestead lands in Canada.

From the Gulf to the Boundary, and from ocean to ocean, the trek to the Dominion goes on. Not only the wheatgrowers of the central Mississippi valley, but the ranchers of Texas and New Mexico, and the cultivators of the comparatively virgin soil of Oklahoma, are pouring towards the productive vacant lands of the Canadian North-West. It is no tentative, half-hearted departure for an alien country that is manifested in this exodus; it has become almost a rush to secure possession of land which it is feared, by those imperfectly acquainted with the vast area of Canada's vacant lands, may all be acquired before they arrive. There is no element of speculation or experiment in the migration. The settlers have full information respecting the soil, wealth, the farming methods, the laws, taxation and system of government of the country to which they are moving, and they realize that the opportunities offered in Canada are in every respect better and greater than those they have enjoyed in the land they are leaving.

Canada can well afford to welcome cordially every American farmer coming to the Dominion. There is no question but that these immigrants make the most desirable settlers obtainable for the development of the prairie portion of the Dominion. Full information can be had from any authorized Canadian Government Agent whose address will be found elsewhere.

A similar gift was made by this same church last autumn, when the janitor also completed a half century of service.

Until Too Stiff to Bend Over.

"When I drank coffee I often had sick headaches, nervousness and biliousness much of the time but about 2 years ago I went to visit a friend and got in the habit of drinking Postum.

"I have never touched coffee since and the result has been that I have been entirely cured of all my stomach and nervous trouble.

"My mother was just the same way, we all drink Postum now and have never had any coffee in the house for 2 years and we are all well.

"A neighbor of mine, a great coffee drinker, was troubled with pains in her side for years and was an invalid. She was not able to do her work and could not even mend clothes or do anything at all where she would have to bend forward. If she tried to do a little hard work she would get such pains that she would have to lie down for the rest of the day.

"I persuaded her at last to stop drinking coffee and try Postum Food Coffee and she did so and she has used Postum ever since; the result has been that she can now do her work, can sit for a whole day and mend and can sew on the machine and she never feels the least bit of pain in her side in fact she has got well and it shows coffee was the cause of the whole trouble.

"I could also tell you about several other neighbors who have been cured by quitting coffee and using Postum in its place." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"PE-RU-NA, A VALUABLE PREPARATION," WRITES DR. KEMBALL.

RACHAEL KEMBALL, M.D.
334 Virginia St. Buffalo, N.Y.

Most of the Ailments Peculiar to the Female Sex are Due to Catarrh of the Pelvic Organs.

Rachael J. Kemball, M. D., 334 Virginia St., Buffalo, N. Y., is a graduate of the University of Buffalo, class 1884, and has been in the practice of medicine in that city since then. She writes as follows:

"My conviction, supported by experience, is that Peruna is a valuable preparation for all catarrhal affections. I have taken one bottle of Peruna myself and just feel fine. I shall continue to take it."—Rachael J. Kemball, M. D.

Peruna has cured thousands of cases of female weakness. As a rule, however, before Peruna is resorted to several other remedies have been tried in vain. A great many of the patients have taken local treatment, submitted themselves to surgical operations, and taken all sorts of doctor's stuff, without any result.

The reason of so many failures is the fact that diseases peculiar to the female sex are not commonly recognized as being caused by [illegible]. These organs are [illegible] mucous membrane [illegible] is subject to catarrh. Catarrh of one organ is exactly the same as catarrh of any other organ. What cures catarrh [illegible] also cure catarrh of the pelvic organs. Peruna cures these cases simply because it cures the catarrh. [illegible] of the women afflicted with pelvic diseases have no idea that their trouble is due to catarrh. The majority of the people think that catarrh is a disease confined to the head alone.

This is not true. Catarrh is liable to attack any organ of the body; throat, bronchial tubes, lungs, stomach, kidneys and especially the pelvic organs.

Many a woman has made this discovery after a long siege of useless treatment. She has made the discovery that her disease is catarrh, and that Peruna can be [illegible].

If you do not derive [illegible] satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, [illegible] vice gratis.

WASHINGTON LETTER

GOSSIP OF THE CONGRESS WHICH HAS JUST CLOSED.

NOT RICH IN REPUTATIONS

But Few Men Have Developed in the Estimation of the Public—New Office Building for Senators.

Washington.—The adjournment of congress leaves Washington once more in the deserted and deadly condition which always characterizes the town when abandoned to its own devices. The hotels, which for six months have been packed to the roof, will soon resemble the barn-like inns of a summer resort during the dead days of winter. There is no town on the continent which can empty itself more speedily than Washington of the transient visitors who give life to it while congress is here.

Speaker Cannon.

The session of congress which has just come to an end has not been rich in the making of reputations. If any one man has grown greatly in the estimation of house and senate it is Speaker Cannon, who, in a single session, has enrolled among the little group of really great speakers who have presided over the deliberations of the house. There are not many of them. Clay, Colfax, Blaine, Carlisle and Reed are the names which occur easily to anybody with a historical bent of mind, and it is a high tribute to Cannon that at the close of an unusually short and uneventful session, there should be many who are disposed to group him with the historic lights.

Both republicans and democrats unite in singing Cannon's praises. He is as highly regarded on the democratic side of the house as among his own party associates. Even the most hopeless partisans are [illegible] to admit that they have no complaint to make against the speaker on account of his conduct in the chair. So free from partisanship has he been that the house has been treated several times to a spectacle hitherto unprecedented since the creation of the committee on rules. That committee more than once has made reports providing special orders for legislation in which the republicans and democrats on the committee united in unanimous action. If this had happened in the administrations of Reed, or Crisp, or Henderson, it would have been thought that the heavens were about to fall. Under the benign regime of Speaker Cannon it passes almost without comment. It seems to be the most natural thing in the world; and yet with all his benevolence the speaker on occasion is as firm and unbending as any other man who ever occupied the chair.

The Democratic Leader.

Another man who has gained a reputation is John Sharp Williams, the new democratic leader of the house.

Congressman Williams.

Williams was comparatively unknown outside the house membership before the mantel of leadership fell on his shoulders at the beginning of this congress. He had been a member of the house for several terms and had made some little stir by occasional clever speeches in which he treated the republican majority without gloves. But that he had the qualities of real leadership was hardly suspected except by some of his intimates until the time came when it was necessary to pick out somebody to assume the responsibility laid down by Richardson, of Tennessee.

Williams rose to his opportunity in a way to delight his fellow democrats in the house. He has shown tact and brilliancy has kept his lance poised for any possible vulnerable spots in the republican armor, and at the same time has maintained personal relations with the republican leaders which give him influence on the majority side of the house.

Williams is a rather curious product of democratic generation. He was born in Memphis, Tenn., and his father was a confederate colonel, killed at Shiloh. Then young Williams, with his mother, moved to his mother's old family homestead in Yazoo country, Mississippi. He still maintains himself there during the recesses of congress as a lawyer and a cotton planter. He is one of the most highly educated men in either branch of congress. As he himself expresses it, he "received a fair education" at private schools, the Kentucky Military Institute, near Frankfort, Ky., the university of the south, the University of Virginia and the University of Heidelberg, in Germany.

New Offices for Senators.

The senate has made up its mind that it shall not be outdone by the house in the matter of office accommodations for its members. An appropriation has been made for a new building to be erected just across the way from the senate end of the capitol, which is to be used as an office building for senators, and which will cost, when completed, fully $3,000,000. It will be in keeping with the architecture of the capitol, and, with the new house office building, and the congressional library, will complete a group of monumental structures on Capitol hill which will not be exceeded in beauty and dignity by any other group of buildings in the world.

As the People Imagined It.

The two new buildings will transform what has hitherto been regarded as an unsightly section of the city into a spot which will be worth traveling thousands of miles to see. Each of the new structures will occupy an entire square, now filled with old houses and defaced by glaring billboards. Under the new arrangement each senator and representative will be accommodated with a fine suite of rooms, handsomely furnished and supplied with every comfort that any working statesman could desire.

It is not so many years since a great outcry went up over the country because the senators had bought an old hotel, known as the Maltby house, where those who could not be supplied with rooms in the capitol kept their secretaries and their records. Columns were written about the rugs, and sofas, and private baths with which these rooms were furnished, and many people throughout the country imagined that the senate was lavishing the money of the taxpayers in oriental luxury.

But times have changed. The Maltby building is out of date. Those senators who are condemned to occupy rooms there regard it as a hardship, and there are mutterings already about the dilapidated condition of the place. But it is seen now that a senator, or a representative, for that matter, is entitled to at least as much consideration in the choice of his working establishment as a lawyer burdened with half the business. As it is, many representatives are compelled to lease rooms outside the capitol.

With the increase in population of the country, the statesman in Washington finds his work and responsibility thrice or four times as great as in the days of the seventies.

Ire of the Clerks.

Representative Gillett, of Massachusetts, who got all Washington about his ears when he caused an increase of the hours of labor to the government clerks, has made more trouble for himself. He is chairman of the house committee on reform in the civil service committee, which ordinarily has very little to do, and he has devoted himself this winter to making a record for a hitherto innocuous body.

Aroused the Ire of the Clerks.

He has reported a bill by which it is proposed that after the 30th day of June, 1907, every office in the classified service held by a person who is then over 70 years of age shall become vacant, and that after the 30th day of June, 1907, every office in the classified service shall become vacant when the person holding it becomes 70 years old.

As if to add insult to injury, Gillett has also reported it as the opinion of the committee that such retired clerks should not be pensioned.

It is not likely that congress will consent to any such arrangement, but that does not modify the anger of that large and influential class in Washington, who would be affected directly were the proposed law to go into effect.

To show the injustice of it, some of them have prepared a list of members of the house and senate who will be over 70 years of age on June 30, 1907. That list includes the name of Speaker Cannon, whom nobody would accuse of being superannuated. In it, also, are the names of the following United States senators: Morgan and Pettus, of Alabama; Teller, of Colorado; Platt and Hawley, of Connecticut; Cullom, of Illinois; Allison, of Iowa; McEnery, of Louisiana; Hale and Frye, of Maine; Hoar, of Massachusetts; Burrows and Alger, of Michigan; Cockrell, of Missouri; Gibson, of Montana; Millard, of Nebraska; Gallinger, of New Hampshire; Platt and Depew, of New York; Mitchell, of Oregon; Quay, of Pennsylvania; Bate, of Tennessee; Proctor, of Vermont, and Foster, of Washington—24 in all, nearly one-third of the senate.

GOSSIP OF THE CONGRESS WHICH HAS JUST CLOSED.

NOT RICH IN REPUTATIONS

But Few Men Have Developed in the Estimation of the Public—New Office Building for Senators.

Washington.—The adjournment of congress leaves Washington once more in the deserted and deadly condition which always characterizes the town when abandoned to its own devices. The hotels, which for six months have been packed to the roof, will soon resemble the barn-like inns of a summer resort during the dead days of winter.

Speaker Cannon.

There is no town on the continent which can empty itself more speedily than Washington of the transient visitors who give life to it while congress is here.

The session of congress which has just come to an end has not been rich in the making of reputations. If any one man has grown greatly in the estimation of house and senate it is Speaker Cannon, who, in a single session, has enrolled among the little group of really great speakers who have presided over the deliberations of the house. There are not many of them. Clay, Colfax, Blaine, Carlisle and Reed are the names which occur easily to anybody with a historical bent of mind, and it is a high tribute to Cannon that at the close of an unusually short and uneventful session, there should be many who are disposed to group him with the historic lights.

Both republicans and democrats unite in singing Cannon's praises. He is as highly regarded on the democratic side of the house as among his own party associates. [illegible] the most hopeless partisans are [illegible] that they have no complaint to make against the speaker on account of his conduct in the chair. So free from partisanship has he been that the house has been treated several times to a spectacle hitherto unprecedented since the creation of the committee on rules. That committee more than once has made reports providing special orders for legislation in which the republicans and democrats on the committee united in unanimous action. If this had happened in the administrations of Reed, or Crisp, or Henderson, it would have been thought that the heavens were about to fall. Under the benign regime of Speaker Cannon it passes almost without comment. It seems to be the most natural thing in the world; and yet with all his benevolence the speaker on occasion is as firm and unbending as any other man who ever occupied the chair.

The Democratic Leader.

Another man who has gained a reputation is John Sharp Williams, the new democratic leader of the house.

Congressman Williams.

Williams was comparatively unknown outside the house membership before the mantel of leadership fell on his shoulders at the beginning of this congress. He had been a member of the house for several terms and had made some little stir by occasional clever speeches in which he treated the republican majority without gloves. But that he had the qualities of real leadership was hardly suspected except by some of his intimates until the time came when it was necessary to pick out somebody to assume the responsibility laid down by Richardson, of Tennessee.

Williams rose to his opportunity in a way to delight his fellow democrats in the house. He has shown tact and brilliancy, has kept his lance poised for any possible vulnerable spots in the republican armor, and at the same time has maintained personal relations with the republican leaders which give him influence on the majority side of the house.

Williams is a rather curious product of democratic generation. He was born in Memphis, Tenn., and his father was a confederate colonel, killed at Shiloh. Then young Williams, with his mother, moved to his mother's old family homestead in Yazoo country, Mississippi. He still maintains himself there during the recesses of congress as a lawyer and a cotton planter. He is one of the most highly educated men in either branch of congress. As he himself expresses it, he "received a fair education" at private schools, the Kentucky Military institute, near Frankfort, Ky., the university of [illegible], the University of Virginia and the university of Heidelberg. In Ger-

New Offices for Senators.

The senate has made up its mind that it shall not be outdone by the house in the matter of office accommodations for its members. An appropriation has been made for a new building to be erected just across the way from the senate end of the capitol, which is to be used as an office building for senators, and which will cost, when completed, fully $3,000,000. It will be in keeping with the architecture of the capitol, and, with the new house office building, and the congressional library, will complete a group of monumental structures on Capitol hill which will not be exceeded in beauty and dignity by any other group of buildings in the world.

As the People Imagined It.

The two new buildings will transform what has hitherto been regarded as an unsightly section of the city into a spot which will be worth traveling thousands of miles to see. Each of the new structures will occupy an entire square, now filled with old houses and defaced by glaring billboards. Under the new arrangement each senator and representative will be accommodated with a fine suite of rooms, handsomely furnished and supplied with every comfort that any working statesman could desire.

It is not so many years since a great outcry went up over the country because the senators had bought an old hotel, known as the Maltby house, where those who could not be supplied with rooms in the capitol kept their secretaries and their records. Columns were written about the rugs, and sofas, and private baths with which these rooms were furnished, and many people throughout the country imagined that the senate was lavishing the money of the taxpayers in oriental luxury.

But times have changed. The Maltby building is out of date. Those senators who are condemned to occupy rooms there regard it as a hardship, and there are mutterings already about the dilapidated condition of the place. But it is seen now that a senator, or a representative, for that matter, is entitled to at least as much consideration in the choice of his working establishment as a lawyer burdened with half the business. As it is, many representatives are compelled to lease rooms outside the capitol.

With the increase in population of the country, the statesman in Washington finds his work and responsibility thrice or four times as great as in the days of the seventies.

Ire of the Clerks.

Representative Gillett, of Massachusetts, who got all Washington about his ears when he caused an increase of the hours of labor to the government clerks, has made more trouble for himself. He is chairman of the house committee on reform in the civil service committee, which ordinarily has very little to do, and he has devoted himself this winter to making a record for a hitherto innocuous body.

Aroused the Ire of the Clerks.

He has reported a bill by which it is proposed that after the 30th day of June, 1907, every office in the classified service held by a person who is then over 70 years of age shall become vacant, and that after the 30th day of June, 1907, every office in the classified service shall become vacant when the person holding it becomes 70 years old.

As if to add insult to injury, Gillett has also reported it as the opinion of the committee that such retired clerks should not be pensioned.

It is not likely that congress will consent to any such arrangement, but that does not modify the anger of that large and influential class in Washington, who would be affected directly were the proposed law to go into effect.

To show the injustice of it, some of them have prepared a list of members of the house and senate who will be over 70 years of age on June 30, 1907. That list includes the name of Speaker Cannon, whom nobody would accuse of being superannuated. In it, also, are the names of the following United States senators: Morgan and Pettus, of Alabama; Teller, of Colorado; Platt and Hawley, of Connecticut; Cullom, of Illinois; Allison, of Iowa; McEnery, of Louisiana; Hale and Frye, of Maine; Hoar, of Massachusetts; Burrows and Alger, of Michigan; Cockrell, of Missouri; Gibson, of Montana; Millard, of Nebraska; Gallinger, of New Hampshire; Platt and Depew, of New York; Mitchell, of Oregon; Quay, of Pennsylvania; Bate, of Tennessee; Proctor, of Vermont, and Foster, of Washington—24 in all, nearly one-third of the senate.

The Republican State convention has been called to meet at St. Paul June 30th. Duluth made a good fight to secure it but it is a difficult matter to crowed a hog when he has got both feet and his snout in the trough.

The country editor is not supposed to have anything to say about who his party nominates to office. He must stand back and let the politicians do that work but after the nominations, the politicins come to the editor and say. The accidental meeting of R. C. Dunn and James J. Hill president of the Great Northern Ry. at Fourth and Minnesota streets St. Paul, and haveing a sensational interview entended to inure judge Collins, is liable to be a boomerang in the northern part of the state that will strike to kill. The farmers of the northern part of the state have confidence in Gov. Van Sant and admire and respect him for the fight he made on the merger issue, while they are suspicious of Mr. Dunn, as they fear any change in the state administration at this time. What may be considered a "roarback" sprung by Mr. Hill Dunn & Co., to tickle the sensative palate of the ward politicians of St. Paul and Minneapolis, does not strengthen a candidates chances to secure the nommination for our next governor of Minnesota to advirtise the fact that he is on such familiar terms with Mr. Hill, as to be called "Bob" We have not taken an active interest in the guberntoral campaign, but expect to support the ticket as nomminated by the Republican party, and if we were the manager of Dunn's campaign, (with the present temper of the people) we would not try to strengthen his chances for nommination, or election by publishing his inteviews with Mr. Hill.

Credit With Pawnbrokers.

That men can and do establish a line of credit with pawnbrokers is a proposition beyond belief to the man who has been offered only $20 on a watch that cost $75. The fact remains, however, that all pawnbrokers have favored patrons on their books who can always get the amount of money they want upon almost any old thing that takes the shape of jewelry or other "hockable" personal property. A local sport tried to raise $50 on his split second stop watch the other day and was offered $30 less than the value of the case melted. A friend who has an established credit took the same watch to the same pawnbroker and got $75 on it without a question being asked. It was the man, not the watch, that made the loan possible.—Philadelphia Record.

SPOILED PLOT OF TAGALOGS.

How an American Saved the Docks at Manila From Destruction.

Among the recent arrivals on the Pacific coast from the Philippine islands is a certain lieutenant of infantry whose exploits in late years have won for him the cognomen of the American Strickland. There are some who hold that Kipling's Strickland was an apprentice at the trade in which Rafferty excels.

Rafferty is not the lieutenant's name, and it would not be wise or fair to him or to the government to hint at the real one, for the war department has started a particular crusade against publicity, especially in the matter of spies, of whom this lieutenant is considered the most wonderful.

Rafferty first came under the notice of high official circles shortly after the beginning of the Filipino trouble, when one day he forced his way into the presence of Provost Marshal Tillson at Manila and quietly uttered a sentence that turned the provost's face to the color of ashes. "Who are you?" he demanded.

"James Rafferty, sir; first sergeant, Company K, —th United States infantry, now stationed at Baler."

That night an attempt was frustrated to blow up the wharf with dynamite. Rafferty told the story of the plot to the provost marshal himself. The sergeant arrived from Baler on the previous day, it appeared, with several prisoners, and found, after he had turned the Moros over to the proper authorities, that he would have to wait several days before he could get a steamer returning up the coast. Having time to kill in Manila, the sergeant frequented the gambling hells so common outside the walls of the city proper. In one of those dens he overheard a conversation between two well dressed Filipinos.

"I tell you," said one of the Filipinos, "the Americans will not fire upon a woman. I have seen it for myself. The guard patrols all night around the wharfs where the stores are kept. It will be a severe blow if the stores are destroyed. Only a woman can gain entrance. I have watched the soldiers talk to them, for the nights are long, and the Americans are far from home. She will not be suspected. She is beautiful and can speak with the guard while the other enters."

Who the women were was never discovered. In fact, nothing happened that night, for, acting upon Rafferty's information, the guards were double banked around the wharfs. Another spy, however, was sent to investigate Rafferty's story, which was shortly afterward confirmed.

Perhaps the most sensational adventure in which the American Strickland took a hand was the capture of Pio del Pilar, one of the executive geniuses of Aguinaldo's staff. There were three geniuses—Gregorio and Pio del Pilar and Luna whom Aguinaldo is said to have stabbed in a fit of jealous rage.

RAFFERTY LEVELED HIS PISTOL.

Gregorio del Pilar was shot in battle, and a reward was offered for the capture of Pio, dead or alive.

At the same time a certain Filipino aristocrat of the name of Lara had a beautiful friend living in a lonely house at Santa Anna, some distance up the Pasig river. Pio del Pilar was also in love with this woman.

One night in Manila an attempt was made upon the life of Lara, and rumors gained circulation to the effect that the attempted assassination was instigated by Pio del Pilar himself.

Late that same night a Franciscan monk boarded a steam launch which was moored in the Pasig river, and, shoving a revolver in the face of the engineer, the holy father ordered him to steam up toward Santa Anna.

Some time after that the monk entered the quarters of the officer commanding the American troops at Santa Anna and after a brief interview took his departure. Later on in the night a guard of soldiers was quietly placed around a lonely house just outside the town. Presently the monk appeared and by virtue of his office was admitted to the presence of Pio del Pilar.

"Come out," said Rafferty, and Pio came at pistol point.

A COOL OFFICER.

He Faced an Angry London Mob and Got Fair Play.

During the reform riots in Hyde park, London, in 1866 the mob on a well remembered night began tearing down the fences of Hyde park for fires and barricades. Colonel Thomas Wentworth Higginson tells in the Atlantic Monthly of an English officer who was dining with a friend, all unconscious of the impending danger. Presently he received a summons from the war department, telling him that his regiment was ordered out to deal with the mob.

He hastened back to his own house, but when he called for his horse he found that his servant had received permission to go out for the evening and had the key of the stable in his pocket. The officer hastily donned his uniform and then had to proceed on foot to the guards' armory, which lay on the other side of Hyde park. Walking hastily in that direction, he came out unexpectedly at the very headquarters of the mob, where they were already piling up the fences.

His uniform was recognized, and angry shouts arose. It must have seemed for the moment to the mob that the Lord had delivered their worst enemy into their hands.

There was but one thing to be done. He made his way straight toward the center of action and called to a man who was mounted on the pile and was evidently the leader of the tumult:

"I say, my good man, my regiment has been called out by her majesty's orders. Will you give me a hand over this pile?"

The man hesitated a minute and then said, with decision: "Boys, the gentleman is right. He is doing his duty, and we have no quarrel with him. Lend a hand, and help him over."

This was promptly done, with entire respect, and the officer in brilliant uniform went hastily on his way amid three cheers from the mob. Then the mob returned to its work, to complete it if possible before he whom they aided should come back at the head of his regiment and perhaps order them to be shot down.

Bait.

Izaak Walton is the patron saint of all good fishermen. Here is his advice as to bait: "Let your bait be as big a red worm as you can find, without a knot. Get a pint or a quart of them in an evening in garden walks or chalky commons after a shower of rain, and put them with clean moss well washed and picked and the water squeezed out of the moss as dry as you can into an earthen pot or pipkin set dry, and change the moss fresh every three or four days for three weeks or a month together. Then your bait will be at the best, for it will be clear and lively."

Strange Provision of Guardianship.

The following is a literal transcript of the second clause of a will filed and probated in a Wisconsin county a few years since: "I hereby commit the guardianship of all my children until they shall respectively attain the age of twenty-one years unto my said wife during her life and from and after her decease unto my much esteemed friend, ——, his executors and assigns."—Green Bag.

Agreed.

"I'd hate to feel," she said, "that I was the wife of a man who had sought me simply for my beauty."

"Yes," her friend replied. "I don't blame you. Being married to a blind man would be awfully disagreeable, I should think."—Chicago Record-Herald.

POKER CHIPS.

There are more than four "knaves" to the pack in some games.

In big hands, as with big guns, you want to look out for the recoil.

The moral motto, "Deal as you would be dealt by," is classed as the "joker" in a poker pack.

It is awfully bad form, you know, to let the loss of a few chips make you look as cross as if you thought you were getting the double one.

It may be good advice to "bet your hand for all it's worth," but it is a mighty dangerous thing to bet it for all or more than you are worth.

Novice asks which is the right way to cut the cards. Our experience teaches us, my boy, that the right way and at the same time the only safe one is to cut them precisely as does a gilded hog a shabby acquaintance.—New York Herald.

A Japanese Legend.

The renown of the Japanese for courage was as remarkable in Marco Polo's day as it is in the present. He narrates the story of an invasion of the country by the forces of the khan of Tartary. A Japanese army of 30,000 men was besieged in a tower. Refusing to surrender, they fought until all but eight of them were killed. On these eight—travelers' wonders must creep in—it was found impossible to inflict any wound. "Now, this was by virtue of certain stones which they had in their arms, inserted between the skin and the flesh. And the charm and virtue of these stones were such that those who wore them could never perish by steel." They were therefore beaten to death with clubs.

Making It Clear.

On board an ocean steamship a gentleman wished to help a lady who was of an inquiring mind to comprehend the principle of the steam engine. This is how he cleared away all difficulties:

"Why, you see, ma'am," quoth he, "it's just one thing goes up and then another thing comes down, and then they let the smoke out, which makes the wheels go round. That's what they call the hydraulic principle. It's quite simple when you know it."

"Law me! I never understood it before. But, then, I never had it properly explained," replied the fair listener. —Tit-Bits.

Realism Explained.

"That was a splendid back fall you made in your death scene last night," remarked a young member of the company to the eminent tragedian.

The latter looked at the flatterer with a suspicious glare.

"Yes," he said, "and I'd like to lay my hands on the blithering idiot who soaped the stage floor."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Cautious Youth.

"Bobby, your father wants to see you."

The boy looked dubious.

"Do I want to see him?" he asked.

"How should I know?"

"You ought to be able to tell by the look in his eye."—Chicago Post.

Suffering
Will Not Help Your Disease, but Will Weaken Your Nerves.
Folks who think it is better to bear pain than soothe it—are wrong.
Old-fashioned doctors used to say it was better, because they had nothing with which to ease pain but dangerous, heart-paralyzing drugs.
But now, that a safe remedy has been found, Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills, it is wrong to suffer, for nothing can be gained but weakened nerves.
A safe rule to remember is: When in pain, take an Anti-Pain Pill.
This will soothe your quivering nerves.
Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills relieve pain by restoring the natural secretions, in which they differ from opium and similar narcotic drugs, which relieve pain by checking the action of the glands.

Unique Votive Offerings.

In many churches of Provence and Italy, especially those near the sea, paintings placed on the walls in accordance with vows made by pilgrims in moments of danger are often remarkable for their frames. Among the curiosities may be enumerated laths formed of splinters from ships that have been wrecked; also frames made of pieces of heavy cables, occasionally painted bright hues, but sometimes left in their primitive gray color or splashed with tar. Nailed to the laths surrounding a painting representing sailors fighting with fierce savages may be seen African or Polynesian spears and darts or swords made of hard wood, evidently mementos of terrible struggles. Sailors or landsmen who have made vows in times of peril at sea and who have no trophies to display will surround their paintings with broad bands of wood heavily incrusted with shells and seaweed, not infrequently of rare and extremely beautiful kinds.

A prominent club woman, Mrs. Danforth, of St. Joseph, Mich., tells how she was cured of falling of the womb and its accompanying pains and misery by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Life looks dark indeed when a woman feels that her strength is fading away and she has no hopes of ever being restored. Such was my feeling a few months ago when I was advised that my poor health was caused by prolapsus or falling of the womb. The words sounded like a knell to me, I felt that my sun had set; but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound came to me as an elixir of life; it restored the lost forces and built me up until my good health returned to me. For four months I took the medicine daily, and each dose added health and strength. I am so thankful for the help I obtained through its use."—MRS. Prayer Answered.

A preacher who went to a Kentucky parish where the parishioners bred horses was asked to invite the prayers of the congregation for Lucy Grey. He did so. They prayed three Sundays for Lucy Grey. On the fourth he was told he need not do it any more. "Why," said the preacher, "is she dead?" "No," answered the man, "she won the Derby."—Washington Post.

Still Another Case.

Kirkland, Ill., May 0.—Mr. Richard R. Greenhow, of this place, is another who has been cured of Rheumatism by Dodd's Kidney Pills. He says:

"I had the Rheumatism in my left leg so bad that I could not walk over ten or fifteen rods at a time, and that by the use of two canes, and I would have to sit or lie down on the ground. The sweat would run down my face with so much pain. I could not sleep at night for the pain. I was in a terrible condition.

"I tried different doctors' medicines but got worse, till I saw an advertisement of Dodd's Kidney Pills and bought some. After I had used a few, the pain began to leave me, so I kept right on taking them and gradually getting better till I had used in all fourteen boxes and my Rheumatism was all gone, not a pain or ache left.

"I can truly say I haven't felt better in twenty-five years than I do to-day. Dodd's Kidney Pills have made a new man of me."

Unlucky.

THE DREAMER.

BY JOHN WICKLIFFE GRAY.

The wind was groaning incessantly. Now and then it grew to a piercing shriek, as it whirled snow under the eaves and in the corners of the big bay window. It laid an icy grasp on the frames and shook them angrily, enviously, because it could not enter and destroy the scene of comfort within.

She was a jewel of a landlady who would keep the fire burning for him so long, Herbert mused. "To keep the chill out," Mrs. Williams had told him once, and his words of thanks did not fully convey his gratitude for her mothering him.

He lighted his redolent briarwood pipe, pulled the big leathern chair before the fender, leaned back in its depths and the luxurious folds of his lounging robe. His feet perched on the fender, for the fifth time since the office closed that afternoon, he pulled out a dainty little blue linen envelope.

He read his own name and address two or three times before he took out the sheets within.

"Round and firm, and—just like Mildred," he mused.

He spread out the sheets on his knee and read:

"Dear Herbert—We are having a glorious time trying to forget the snow and ice up north. The weather is perfect, except for an occasional misty day, and outdoor amusements are the rule with everybody.

"I am glad to know that business will soon permit you to take a vacation. Are you thinking of coming south? I know you must be, though, for there's hardly anywhere else to go, now that everything up there is ice- and snow-bound.

"What do you think of joining our party here at Palm Beach? We will remain here another week, when we have planned an altogether original tour of either Jamaica or San Domingo on bicycles. All of us brought our wheels from home, and these suggested the trip. We have discarded the automobile idea because two or three machines would be required for the nine of us, two in the crowd are indifferent chauffeurs, and because we are not certain about the roads down there. Bicycles will go anywhere and we have determined to use them, see the country thoroughly and get a healthy tropical tan.

"Wire me if you can come. And if you can, be sure to bring your bicycle. It will be indispensable to a thoroughly good time.

"Mary begs to be remembered to you. As ever, Mildred Halcomb."

Then:

"P. S.—Don't forget the bicycle."

The warm firelight was having its effect after coming in from the cold outer air. He was drowsy. An involuntary yawn showed two fine rows of teeth as he placed the letter on the table.

He and Mildred had been chums since childhood. They always corresponded when one or the other was away. And in the past few months he had come to realize that he could not live without her. There had been no vows, but since as children they had roamed the parks together on their bright, new bicycles, they had been conscious of a mutual exhilaration and joyousness in one another's presence. Yes, bicycles, and the intimate companionship they bring, seemed strangely interwoven in their lives.

"We'll go wheeling, wheeling, wheeling
Down the distance-dwindling pike,
Hearts a-feeling, feeling, feeling,
All the joy that's in a bike."

He had heard the doggerel parody of a popular song somewhere, and the lines continued to repeat themselves in drowsy fashion:

"We'll go wheeling, wheeling, wheel—"

His pipe fell from nerveless fingers. One foot slipped from the fender.

He and Mildred were resting on the sod beneath a towering palm tree. Not far off several people of their party were laughing and talking together. He saw the surf come rolling in not 20 yards away, dwindling from mighty waves to a smooth, even flow as they reached the higher beach. Beside them were their bicycles. Cries of strange birds were heard, and a bright plumaged fellow flew over their heads and fluttered away inland.

How beautiful Mildred was! She was looking straight into his eyes. And in the big gray orbs he saw her soul shining there. It was shining for him, all for him! He knew it, and that was enough.

"You are mine," he was saying. "All these years I have loved you, and waited for you. And now we must part no more. Your life shall be my life, and mine shall be yours."

Out of the distance he heard the chime of bells. One—two—three—four—five—six—And still it rang.

The sleeper awoke with a start. The clock claimed his attention first, for it was striking 12. He rose quickly, and as he did so a telegraph blank on the table caught his eye.

"Better write it now and send the first thing in the morning," he thought.

Rapidly his pencil traced the words:

"Miss Mildred Halcomb, Hotel ——, Palm Beach, Fla.—Be there Thursday with bicycle. Herbert."

Pigskin Grafted on Woman.

By using the skin of a pig two months old the life of Mary Grant, a colored woman of Richmond, Va., has been saved. Some weeks ago the woman was fearfully burned about the body by the explosion of a lamp. Much of her skin was destroyed, and could not be replaced by nature. Efforts were made to get her relatives to supply the necessary cuticle for grafting, but they objected. The physician in charge then procured a young white pig, which was chloroformed, and enough of the necessary hide removed and grafted on the woman.

AN ILLINOIS FARMER IN WESTERN CANADA.

A recent issue of the Shelbyville, Illinois, Democrat contains a long and interesting letter from Mr. Elias Kost, formerly a prosperous farmer of that state, who recently emigrated to Western Canada, taking up a claim for himself and for each of his three sons.

From Mr. Kost's letter, which was written Feb. 3, 1904, we publish the following, believing it will prove of great interest to those who have contemplated settling in the Canadian Northwest:

"I had in August, 1902, secured a claim for myself, and filed on three quarter sections for my sons. My claim is one-half mile south of the Edmonton and Lake St. Anne trail.

"Coming so late in the season we had little opportunity to break and to prepare ground for a first year's crop, still we raised over 100 bushels of very fine potatoes, and sowed a few acres of barley, but the season was too far advanced for the barley. However, we secured good feed from it, and on rented ground 18 miles east of us, raised a fine crop of oats, so that we will have plenty of feed for horses. We cut about 60 tons of hay and thus will have an abundance. We have, all told, about 240 acres of hay meadow, which would yield the past year over three tons to the acre, and in an ordinary season the meadow would furnish 600 tons of hay. The grass is very nutritious, and cattle on the ranges become very fat without being fed a pound of grain.

"On the upland the grass grows from eight to ten inches tall. This is called range grass, and is suitable for stock at any time, even in the winter when the ground is not covered too deep with snow. Horses subsist on it alone, at all times, provided they are native stock. The grass in the hay meadows here is called red-top, and grows from five to six feet in length, and when cut at the proper time yields an abundant crop of nutritious hay.

"Our cattle have not cost us a cent since we came on our homestead, only the small outlay for salt and labor in putting up hay and shelter. All cattle have been doing well this winter, and feeding up to the first of January was unnecessary, as there was good range up to that time.

"All the snows up to that date were followed by winds from the northwest that melts it very rapidly; these winds are called Chinook winds, and are always warm. In one night a Chinook wind may take away three or four inches of snow.

"We have built on our claim a comfortable house of hewn logs, 20x26 feet, one and one-half stories in height, with a good cellar. During the latter part of June we rafted logs down the Sturgeon to a sawmill, about eight miles away, and thus secured 5,000 feet of good lumber which was needed for the house. Later in the season a shingle mill located six miles away. To this we hauled logs and had shingles cut for the roof.

"We had an abundance of wild fruit the past season, consisting of gooseberries, strawberries, raspberries, eyeberries, blueberries, cherries and saskatoons. The latter are a fine looking berry, red, and quite pleasant to the taste, but not much to be desired in cookery. The strawberries are the same as those that grow wild in Illinois. Raspberries are red in color, large and equal to any of the tame varieties, and so are the gooseberries. The cranberries consist of the high and trailing varieties. The latter are most sought and contiguous to the swamps. The ground is literally covered with them as with a red carpet, but the best and most sought is the blueberry, so called by the Indians. This is the famous 'huckleberry' (whortleberry) of the Blue Ridge Mountains in Pennsylvania, and cannot be excelled for excellence by any fruit cultivated. It is found here both on the prairie and in the timber in immense quantities.

"Game is very plentiful so far as prairie chickens, pheasants, ducks of all kinds, and geese are concerned. We have taken nearly 500 chickens and pheasants, also a great many ducks.

"An occasional deer is seen, but are not plentiful, only one having been taken during the season in this settlement.

"Fish are very plentiful at all seasons of the year. Fish wagons and sleds are passing almost daily along the trail with heavy loads of fish, destined for St. Albert and Edmonton. From the latter point they are shipped south on the Calgary and Edmonton railroad to points along the line, and also to Assiniboia, on the Canadian Pacific railroad."

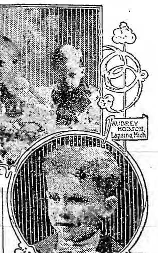
"I Have Every Reason to Praise Pe-ru-na," WRITES MRS. KANE, OF CHICAGO.

GRACE, EDWARD, MYRTLE, GEORGE AND REEVES KANE.
172 Sebor St., CHICAGO, ILL.



AUBREY HOBSON, Lansing, Mich.

Mrs. K. Kane, 172 Sebor Street, Chicago, Ill., writes:

"Peruna has been used so long in our family that I do not know how I could get along without it. I have given it to all of my children at different times when they suffered with croup, colds and the many ailments that children are subject to, and am pleased to say that it has kept them in splendid health. I have also used it for a catarrhal difficulty of long standing and it cured me in a short time, so I have every reason to praise Peruna."—Mrs. K. Kane.

Pe-ru-na Protects the Entire Household Against Catarrhal Diseases.

One of the greatest foes with which every family has to contend is our changeable climate. To protect the family from colds and coughs is always a serious problem, and often impossible.

Sooner or later it is the inevitable fate of every one to catch cold. Care in avoiding exposure and the use of proper clothing will protect from the frequency and perhaps the severity of colds, but with the greatest of precautions they will come. This is a settled fact of human experience. Everybody must expect to be caught somewhere or somehow.

Perhaps it will be wet feet, or a draught, or damp clothes, or it may be one of a thousand other little mishaps, but no one is shrewd enough to always avoid the inevitable catching cold.

There is no fact of medical science better known than that Peruna cures catarrh wherever located. Thousands of families in all parts of the United States are protected from colds and catarrh by Peruna. Once in the family Peruna always stays. No home can spare Peruna after the first trial of it.

Mrs. A. Hobson, 225 Washington St., Lansing, Mich., writes:

"Peruna has been such a blessing to my only child, as well as myself, that I feel induced to give my testimonial. He has always suffered from catarrh of the head and throat, and I had to use extra precautions so as not to have him exposed to damp or cold weather. Last year he was taken with la grippe, and as it was a severe case, caused me much anxiety. No medicine helped him till he took Peruna. I noticed an improvement at once and in three weeks he was a different child; the grippe had been completely cured and I noticed that the catarrh was made better. He kept taking it two weeks longer, when he was entirely well. I now use it off and on for colds, cramps, indigestion or general indisposition, and find it superior to any doctors or medicine I ever tried. It keeps me, as well as my child, in perfect health, and I gladly recommend it to mothers."—Mrs. A. Hobson.

We have on file many thousand testimonials like the ones given above. We can only give our readers a slight glimpse of the vast array of unsolicited endorsements we are receiving every month. No other physician in the world has received such a volume of enthusiastic and grateful letters of thanks as Dr. Hartman for Peruna.

WORKING ALONG STRATEGIC LINES.

Running Russian—"Ho for Moscow. I'm Luring On the Jap!"

VESSELS STRIKE RUSSIAN MINES

One of the Czar's Own Ships Destroyed—Twenty Men Are Lost—Japanese Lose a Torpedo Boat.

St. Petersburg, May 12.—Another Russian vessel has been destroyed by Russian mines. The general naval staff has issued a list of 20 names of officers and men who were killed on [illegible] cles that the Amur was laying mines in the roadstead at Port Arthur on that day. She struck a mine and sank.

Japanese Boat Destroyed.

Tokio, May 14.—The Japanese torpedo boat No. 48 was destroyed while removing mines from Kerr bay, north of Talienwan (Port Dalny) Thursday. Seven men were killed and seven were wounded. This is the first warship Japan has lost in the war.

The torpedo boat was lost during a series of bombardments and surveying operations at Talienwan, Deep and Kerr bays, by Admiral Kataoka, commander of the Third squadron. Torpedo boats Nos. 48 and 49 discovered a large mechanical mine in Kerr bay. Their various attempts to blow it up failed, and it suddenly exploded of itself, cutting No. 48 in two. The torpedo boat sank in seven minutes. The squadron hurried boats to the rescue and picked up the wounded. Three other mines were discovered and exploded.

Dalny Destroyed.

St. Petersburg, May 13.—Viceroy Alexieff has telegraphed to the czar announcing that the Russians have blown up the docks and piers at Port Dalny, Liaotung peninsula, presumably to render more difficult a Japanese landing at that point.

Later telegrams received here indicate that the whole of Port Dalny has been destroyed by the Russians.

All Communication Cut Off.

St. Petersburg, May 14.—Both telegraph and railroad communication with Port Arthur have been cut off.

No further particulars are to be had regarding the blowing up of Port Dalny, which is considered to have been necessary, in view of the Japanese complete command of the sea, to prevent the employment of a ready-made base of operations against Port Arthur.

Details of Attack.

Tokio, May 13.—Later details of the Russian attack on Anju last Tuesday state that the fighting lasted all day. Japanese reenforcements arrived from Pingyang at one o'clock in the afternoon. The Russians retired Wednesday morning at the approach of further Japanese reenforcements from Kosen. The Japanese are pursuing the Russians in the direction of Kaichong. The Japanese casualties at Anju were four killed and six wounded. The Russian casualties were about 50. A Russian prisoner said that the Cossack raiders number 500.

Train Reaches Port Arthur.

St. Petersburg, May 12.—Gen. Kuropatkin has telegraphed to the emperor that a train loaded with war material from Liaoyang has arrived at Port Arthur. The text of Gen. Kuropatkin's dispatch follows:

"Reconnaissances between Salitszaipudza and Fengwangcheng failed to discover Japanese troops. A Japanese column of considerable strength advanced from Fengwangcheng May 8 in the direction of Haicheng. Puleacheng station is occupied by our frontier guards and the damage to the railway by the Japanese as far as Sanchilipu has been repaired. All the work was carried out under the supervision of Lieut. Col. Spiridonoff, of the Fourth railway battalion. This gallant officer undertook to get through to Port Arthur a trainful of ammunition which had arrived at Liaoyang after the landing of the Japanese at Pitsewo.

Ready to Blow Up Train.

"Every preparation was made to blow up the train in case of necessity, in order to prevent its falling into the hands of the Japanese. The task was carried out, and the self-sacrifice of the men of the Fourth railway battalion was crowned with complete success. Shortly after four o'clock in the afternoon the train arrived at Jinshau station (40 miles from Port Arthur), where it was handed over to Gen. Jokoff, who immediately dispatched it under proper protection to Port Arthur. Lieut. Col. Spiridonoff returned on a locomotive.

"After landing at Pitsewo the Japanese began marching toward Kinchau. On the night of May 10 their forward guard consisting of about two regiments of infantry passed the night on the heights above Sanchilipu (on the railroad about 60 miles from Port Arthur).

"About 30 Japanese vessels are lying north of Cape Terminal (on the east coast of the Liaotung peninsula below Pitsewo)."

All Quiet at Vladivostok.

Vladivostok, May 12.—All is quiet here. The enemy has not been sighted. The commander of the defenses has left Vladivostok, after carefully reviewing the troops and inspecting the fortifications.

Important Events Pending.

St. Petersburg, May 12.—Impending events of great importance to the military situation in Manchuria are foreshadowed in official dispatches given out late last night by the war commission. On May 8 the Japanese forces cautiously moved from Fengwangcheng towards Haicheng, which is 32 miles east by north of Newchwang, and it is the opinion of the general staff that they should certainly reach their destination within two days. If the Japanese occupy Haicheng, with Port Arthur effectually cut off, Newchwang, which the Russians have already dismantled, would pass into their hands. The entire Liaotung peninsula, in fact, says Port Arthur and perhaps Kaiping, would be commanded by them.

VESSELS STRIKE RUSSIAN MINES

One of the Czar's Own Ships Destroyed—Twenty Men Are Lost—Japanese Lose a Torpedo Boat.

St. Petersburg, May 12.—Another Russian vessel has been destroyed by Russian mines. The general naval staff has issued a list of 20 names of [illegible] who were killed on [illegible] was laying mines [illegible] at Port Arthur on that day. She struck a mine and sank.

Japanese Boat Destroyed.

Tokio, May 14.—The Japanese torpedo boat No. 48 was destroyed while removing mines from Kerr bay, north of Tallenwan (Port Dalny) Thursday. Seven men were killed and seven were wounded. This is the first warship Japan has lost in the war.

The torpedo boat was lost during a series of bombardments and surveying operations at Tallenwan, Deep and Kerr bays, by Admiral Kataoka, commander of the Third squadron. Torpedo boats Nos. 48 and 49 discovered a large mechanical mine in Kerr bay. Their various attempts to blow it up failed, and it suddenly exploded of itself, cutting No. 48 in two. The torpedo boat sank in seven minutes. The squadron hurried boats to the rescue and picked up the wounded. Three other mines were discovered and exploded.

Dalny Destroyed.

St. Petersburg, May 13.—Viceroy Alexieff has telegraphed to the czar announcing that the Russians have blown up the docks and piers at Port Dalny, Liaotung peninsula, presumably to render more difficult a Japanese landing at that point.

Later telegrams received here indicate that the whole of Port Dalny has been destroyed by the Russians.

All Communication Cut Off.

St. Petersburg, May 14.—Both telegraph and railroad communication with Port Arthur have been cut off.

No further particulars are to be had regarding the blowing up of Port Dalny, which is considered to have been necessary, in view of the Japanese complete command of the sea, to prevent the employment of a ready-made base of operations against Port Arthur.

Details of Attack.

Tokio, May 13.—Later details of the Russian attack on Anju last Tuesday state that the fighting lasted all day. Japanese reenforcements arrived from Pingyang at one o'clock in the afternoon. The Russians retired Wednesday morning at the approach of further Japanese reenforcements from Kosen. The Japanese are pursuing the Russians in the direction of Kaichong. The Japanese casualties at Anju were four killed and six wounded. The Russian casualties were about 50. A Russian prisoner said that the Cossack raiders number 500.

Train Reaches Port Arthur.

St. Petersburg, May 12.—Gen. Kuropatkin has telegraphed to the emperor that a train loaded with war material from Liaoyang has arrived at Port Arthur. The text of Gen. Kuropatkin's dispatch follows:

"Reconnaissances between Salitszalpudze and Fengwangcheng failed to discover Japanese troops. A Japanese column of considerable strength advanced from Fengwangcheng May 8 in the direction of Haicheng. Puiencheng station is occupied by our frontier guards and the damage to the railway by the Japanese as far as Sanchilipu has been repaired. All the work was carried out under the supervision of Lieut. Col. Spiridonoff, of the Fourth railway battalion. This gallant officer undertook to get through to Port Arthur a trainful of ammunition which had arrived at Liaoyang after the landing of the Japanese at Pitsewo.

Ready to Blow Up Train.

"Every preparation was made to blow up the train in case of necessity, in order to prevent its falling into the hands of the Japanese. The task was carried out, and the self-sacrifice of the men of the Fourth railway battalion was crowned with complete success. Shortly after four o'clock in the afternoon the train arrived at Jinahau station (40 miles from Port Arthur), where it was handed over to Gen. Jokoff, who immediately dispatched it under proper protection to Port Arthur. Lieut. Col. Spiridonoff returned on a locomotive.

"After landing at Pitsewo the Japanese began marching toward Kinchau. On the night of May 10 their forward guard consisting of about two regiments of infantry passed the night on the heights above Sanchilipu (on the railroad about 60 miles from Port Arthur).

"About 30 Japanese vessels are lying north of Cape Terminal (on the east coast of the Liaotung peninsula below Pitsewo)."

All Quiet at Vladivostok.

Vladivostok, May 12.—All is quiet here. The enemy has not been sighted. The commander of the defenses has left Vladivostok, after carefully reviewing the troops and inspecting the fortifications.

Important Events Pending.

St. Petersburg, May 12.—Impending events of great importance to the military situation in Manchuria are foreshadowed in official dispatches given out late last night by the war commission. On May 8 the Japanese forces cautiously moved from Fengwangcheng towards Haicheng, which is 33 miles east by north of Newchwang, and it is the opinion of the general staff that they should certainly reach their destination within two days. If the Japanese occupy Haicheng, with Port Arthur effectually cut off, Newchwang, which the Russians have already dismantled, would pass into their hands. The entire Liaotung peninsula [illegible]

THAT STORM OF INDIGNATION.

The storm of indignation, as the Crokston Times calls it, that was raised in that city by the sale of the reservation lands at Thief River Falls, instead of at Crookston will not reach outside their own selfishness and what might be termed hogishness in wanting the sale held so far from the land, to advance the hotels and saloon business in the city of Crookston. There will be a large number of people come from other states with the expectation of buying land and becoming residents of Minnesota, and they will want to look at it before they buy, and the idea of [illegible] the sale 60 miles from [illegible] looks ridiculous to anyone outside of Crookston.

The personal attack being made on congressman Steenerson by The Crookston Times, for what they term his neglect in not securing the sale for Crookston, will have about as much affect on the big congressman from the ninth district of Minnesota, as a flea bite on an elephant, and espagily when made by a newspaper that admits, that they do not take any broader view of the question than to say, "They are for the interest of Crookston first last and all the time". Crookston is all right in their way, but they don't weigh enough to dictate to the department of the Interior where to do their land office business, as can be seen by the following.

Dear Sir:—I am in reciept of a communication from a committee of which you are chairman, appointed by the Commercial Union of the city of Crookston for the purpose of setting forth the reason why the sale of that portion of the Red Lake reservation which has been restored to the public domain, should be held at Crookston.

In reply I beg leave to advise you that before the reciept of said communication the Secratary of the Interior had issued instructions for the sale of said lands at Thief River Falls to commence June 20, 1904.

Very Truly Yours.

UNCLE SAM'S WONDERS

All Executive Departments Send Treasures to the World's Fair.

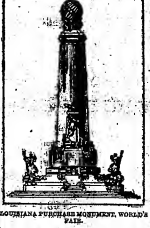
Display Installed in the Largest Governmental Exposition Building Ever Constructed — Precious Documents — Relics of Famous Statesmen and Soldiers. Working Postal Exhibit.

The United States Government building at the World's Fair occupies an elevated site just south of the main picture of the Exposition. The great central dome of the Government building is visible from the very center of the Fair, looking across the picturesque sunken garden that lies between the Palaces of Mines and Metallurgy and Liberal Arts.

The hill slope in front of the Government building is terraced with broad stairways almost completely covering the slope. The building is 800 feet long by 250 feet wide and is the largest structure ever provided at an exposition by the federal government. It is distinguished from all the other large buildings at the Exposition by the steel truss construction, the entire roof being supported by steel arches, forming a splendid domed ceiling.

In this building are installed the exhibits of all the executive departments of the government. The building is a vast storehouse of an endless variety of treasures dear to the heart of every true American. Precious documents are to be seen here, and the autographs of our great men of the past are on display. Relics of famous statesmen and soldiers, carefully preserved through generations, are exhibited. Each governmental department has installed an exhibit showing its official character and mode of operation.

Entering the Government building from the eastern end, the visitor sees at his left a railroad postoffice car. This is not a mere coach standing idle, but is one of the most improved mail cars, in which men attached to the United States railway mail service are actively engaged in "throwing" the mails. Here you will see the postal clerks at work, just as they work while speeding along a railroad track.



LOUISIANA PURCHASE MONUMENT, WORLD'S FAIR.

A curious collection of old time relics from the postoffice museum at Washington illustrates as no verbal description can do the crude beginnings of the postal system. One of these relics is an old fashioned stagecoach that once carried United States mails through a portion of the Louisiana purchase territory. President Roosevelt, who once inspected it, examined with a rough rider's interest the bullet holes which stage robbers and mountain brigands shot through its stiff leathern curtains. Generals Sherman and Sheridan and President Garfield rode in this old coach during the strenuous days of frontier life. Among the collection of documents showing the primitive postal methods in vogue in the early days is to be seen the old book of accounts kept by the first postmaster general, Benjamin Franklin, all written by hand. There is a rare collection of stamps, including ancient Filipino, Porto Rican and Cuban stamps. The postoffice department's exhibit occupies 12,469 square feet.

Across the aisle, at the right, is the exhibit of the new Department of Commerce and Labor, occupying 1,966 square feet. This exhibit shows what the new executive department stands for and what it is accomplishing. Mr. Carroll D. Wright, United States Commissioner of Labor, had charge of the preparation of the exhibit. Charts arranged by him, showing the rapid growth of the nation in agriculture, arts, manufacture, population, etc., are of special interest to sociologists and all students of the labor problem. The Census Bureau exhibit is made in this section. It shows the tabulating machines used in compiling the census reports. The Lighthouse Board, also operating under this department, shows the great revolving lenses in lighthouses, with other interesting appliances.

The space in the projecting northwest corner of the building is devoted to the library of Congress. The edifice which houses this library at Washington is held by many architects to be the most beautiful building in the world. Its interior decorations, by mer Ellsworth Garnsey, furnish one of the chief delights of a visit to the national capital. A large model of this splendid building is a feature of the exhibit. The decorative features of the interior are reproduced in their original colors.

The next exhibit on the right hand side of the central aisle is that of the Interior Department, occupying 11,792 square feet. In this large space the visitor finds so many things of compelling interest that he is loath to leave. The Patent Office exhibit belongs to this section. There are models of many machines that have borne an important part in the development of the nation's industries. The earliest form of every device of human invention, so far as possible, is shown here. For instance, you may see the actual sewing machine that was the first contrivance of its kind every constructed; it was patented in 1846 by Elias Howe. The first typewriter, patented by C. Thurber in 1842; the model of the first cast iron plow, patented by Charles Newbold in 1797; the first screw propeller, invented by Robert Hook in 1680; and many other "first" things are to be seen. The model of Abraham Lincoln's celebrated device for lifting steamboats off shoals is shown here. The first harvesting machine, made in the year 150 B. C., is one of the most ancient exhibits at the Exposition. There is also a model of the first steam engine, made in Egypt in the same year.

Every foot of the 200,000 feet of floor space in Uncle Sam's World's Fair building is occupied by exhibits of surpassing interest, and every phase of the people's welfare is shown.

Jim Hill has declared himself politicaly, and that declaration is against Judge Collins becoming the candidate of the republican party for the next governor of Minnesota.

W. E. Rowe is being groomed by the democratic party for the nomination for congressman from this district as the opponent of Halvor Steenerson. They must be of the opinion that he is geting fat enough to slaughter.

Hon. Ira B. Mills, would certainly be satisfactory to the farmers of the norther part of the state, for railroad and warehouse commissioner, and if the politicins will allow him to be nominated June 30th, they will find we told them the trouth on next November.

THAT STORM OF INDIGNATION.

The storm of indignation, as the Crokston Times calls it, that was raised in that city by the sale of the reservation lands at Thief River Falls, instead of at Crookston will not reach outside their own selfishness and what might be termed hogishness in wanting the sale held so far from the land, to advance the hotels and saloon business in the city of Crookston. There will be a large number of people come from other states with the expectation of buying land and becoming residents of Minnesota, and they will want to look at it before they buy, and the idea of the sale 60 miles from [illegible] looks ridiculous to any[illegible]side of Crookston.

The personal attact being made on congressman Steenerson by The Crookston Times, for what they term his neglect in not securing the sale for Crookston, will have about as much affect on the big congressman from the ninth district of Minnesota as a flea bite on an elephant, and espeially when made by a newspaper that admits, that they do not take any broader view of the question than to say, "They are for the interest of Crookston first last and all the time". Crookston is all right in their way, but they don't weigh enough to dictate to the department of the Interior where to do their land office business, as can be seen by the following.

Department of the Interior,
General Land Office.
Washington May 12, 1904.
Geo. S. Gliesterman, Mayor.
Crookston Minn.

Dear Sir:—I am in reciept of a communication from a committee of which you are chairman, appointed by the Commercial Union of the city of Crookston for the purpose of setting forth the reason why the sale of that portion of the Red Lake reservation which has been restored to the public domain, should be held at Crookston.

In reply I beg leave to advise you that before the reciept of said communication the Secretary of the Interior had issued instructions for the sale of said lands at Thief River Falls to commence June 20, 1904.

Very Truly Yours,
W. A. Richards,
Commissioner.

UNCLE SAM'S WONDERS

All Executive Departments Send Treasures to the World's Fair.

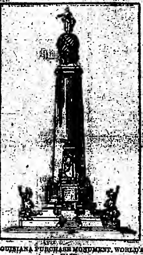
Display Installed in the Largest Governmental Exposition Building Ever Constructed — Precious Documents — Relics of Famous Statesmen and Soldiers. Working Postal Exhibit.

The United States Government building at the World's Fair occupies an elevated site just south of the main picture of the Exposition. The great central dome of the Government building is visible from the very center of the Fair, looking across the picturesque sunken garden that lies between the Palaces of Mines and Metallurgy and Liberal Arts.

The hill slope in front of the Government building is terraced with broad stairways almost completely covering the slope. The building is 800 feet long by 250 feet wide and is the largest structure ever provided at an exposition by the federal government. It is distinguished from all the other large buildings at the Exposition by the steel truss construction, the entire roof being supported by steel arches, forming a splendid domed ceiling.

In this building are installed the exhibits of all the executive departments of the government. The building is a vast storehouse of an endless variety of treasures dear to the heart of every true American. Precious documents are to be seen here, and the autographs of our great men of the past are on display. Relics of famous statesmen and soldiers, carefully preserved through generations, are exhibited. Each governmental department has installed an exhibit showing its official character and mode of operation.

Entering the Government building from the eastern end, the visitor sees at his left a railroad postoffice car. This is not a mere coach standing idle, but is one of the most improved mail cars, in which men attached to the United States railway mail service are actively engaged in "throwing" the mails. Here you will see the postal clerks at work, just as they work while speeding along a railroad track.



LOUISIANA PURCHASE MONUMENT, WORLD'S FAIR.

A curious collection of old time relics from the postoffice museum at Washington illustrates as no verbal description can do the crude beginnings of the postal system. One of these relics is an old fashioned stagecoach that once carried United States mails through a portion of the Louisiana purchase territory. President Roosevelt, who once inspected it, examined with a rough rider's interest the bullet holes which stage robbers and mountain brigands shot through its stiff leathern curtains. Generals Sherman and Sheridan and President Garfield rode in this old coach during the strenuous days of frontier life. Among the collection of documents showing the primitive postal methods in vogue in the early days is to be seen the old book of accounts kept by the first postmaster general, Benjamin Franklin, all written by hand. There is a rare collection of stamps, including ancient Filipino, Porto Rican and Cuban stamps. The postoffice department's exhibit occupies 12,469 square feet.

Across the aisle, at the right, is the exhibit of the new Department of Commerce and Labor, occupying 1,966 square feet. This exhibit shows what the new executive department stands for and what it is accomplishing. Mr. Carroll D. Wright, United States Commissioner of Labor, had charge of the preparation of the exhibit. Charts arranged by him, showing the rapid growth of the nation in agriculture, arts, manufacture, population, etc., are of special interest to sociologists and all students of the labor problem. The Census Bureau exhibit is made in this section. It shows the tabulating machines used in compiling the census reports. The Lighthouse Board, also operating under this department, shows the great revolving lenses in lighthouses, with other interesting appliances.

The space in the projecting northwest corner of the building is devoted to the Library of Congress. The [illegible] which houses this library at Washington is held by many architects [illegible] the most [illegible] building in the world. Its interior decorations by [illegible] Ellsworth Gurney [illegible] national capitol. A large model of this splendid building is a feature of the exhibit. The decorative features of the interior are reproduced in their original colors.

The next exhibit on the right hand side of the central aisle is that of the Interior Department, occupying 11,792 square feet. In this large space the visitor finds so many things of compelling interest that he is loath to leave. The Patent Office exhibit belongs to this section. There are models of many machines that have borne an important part in the development of the nation's industries. The earliest form of every device of human invention, so far as possible, is shown here. For instance, you may see the actual sewing machine that was the first contrivance of its kind every constructed. It was potented in 1846 by Elias Howe. The first typewriter, patented by C. Thurber in 1842; the model of the first cast iron plow, patented by Charles Newbold in 1797; the first screw propeller, invented by Robert Hook in 1680; and many other "first" things are to be seen. The model of Abraham Lincoln's celebrated device for lifting steamboats off shoals is shown here. The first harvesting machine, made in the year 150 B. C., is one of the most ancient exhibits at the Exposition. There is also a model of the first steam engine, made in Egypt in the same year.

Every foot of the 200,000 feet of floor space in Uncle Sam's World's Fair building is occupied by exhibits of surpassing interest, and every phase of the people's welfare is shown.

Maple Sugar.

It is said that the first sugar ever made in Vermont was made in Bennington in March, 1763, near the log cabin of Captain Samuel Robinson, the first settler of the town, who came from Hardwick, Mass. The sap was caught in short logs hollowed that held about a gallon. Many pounds of sugar were made and a liquor cask full of sirup.

LIFE BATTLE WITH A BIRD.

Boy Nearly Killed in a Desperate Encounter With a Big Eagle.

Anthony Schwane, a fifteen-year-old boy, recently had an encounter with a large bald eagle that he will not soon forget. The eagle had attacked the boy's mother, who was returning from Chicago to her home in Hyde Park, and he went to her rescue.

The fight was a fierce one and was only ended when the boy fired into the winged assailant a charge of heavy shot from a double barreled gun.

About 5 o'clock one afternoon Mrs. Schwane was walking along North Forty-first avenue toward her home. She noticed a large bird circling above her, but did not anticipate an attack from it. When she was a few doors from her home the bird, which had drawn nearer to her in a flight of narrowing circles, suddenly swooped down upon her, making vicious efforts to fasten its talons in her clothing.

Mrs. Schwane screamed and raised her umbrella to protect herself against the bird. Evidently the eagle became more infuriated at the defense offered by the woman, and in an instant it pounced upon the umbrella and dragged it from Mrs. Schwane's hands.

Deprived of this means of defending herself, Mrs. Schwane sought refuge in flight.

The short distance intervening between the point of the eagle's attack and her home she covered in a terror stricken state.

Meanwhile her son, young Anthony, had observed the eagle's attack on his mother [illegible] The close proximity of the bird made a shot exceedingly dangerous to the safety of his mother, and he endeavored to drive the bird away by using the gun as a club.

The new antagonist engaged the attention of the eagle, and at this juncture Mrs. Schwane made her escape by flight. The battle the son waged was growing fiercer, and the eagle sustained some severe blows delivered by the boy. Partially stunned by one of these blows, the bird retired from the attack and rose in flight.

THE BOY USED HIS GUN AS A CLUB.

This was the opportunity Anthony was looking for. He leveled the gun at the enemy and fired. The shot was well directed, and the eagle fell, mortally wounded. A neighbor who had witnessed the fight hurried to the scene and dispatched the bird with a blow from a club.

Young Schwane was greatly exhausted by his encounter, but sustained no serious injuries. When the eagle was examined it was found to be one of large size, measuring six feet six inches from tip to tip.

Queen Bess' Wardrobe.

Royal annals have never recorded a more varied and extensive wardrobe than that which belonged to the "virgin queen." Even at the age of sixty-eight, when she might be supposed to have outlived her youthful vanity, she possessed 99 complete official costumes, 102 French gowns, 100 robes with trains and 67 without, 126 antique dresses, 136 bodices, 125 tunics, not to mention such trifles as 96 mantles, 85 dressing gowns and 27 fans.

It is possible that she had an ugly foot, for she possessed only nine pairs of shoes, which, considering her extravagances in other articles of apparel, must have some meaning. At her death 3,000 articles were found duly catalogued in her wardrobe which had adorned her proud person.

The Effect of Punctuation.

The following lines, found in an old book, improbable as they may seem on first reading, lose all their improbability by inserting semicolons after the words in italics:

I saw a cloud begirt with ivy round
I saw a sturdy oak creep on the ground
I saw an ant swallow up a whale
I saw the boiling sea brimful of ale
I saw a vial glass fifteen yards deep
I saw a well full of man's tears that weep
I saw a man's eyes all in a flame of fire
I saw a house high as the moon or higher
I saw the radiant sun even at midnight
I saw a man who saw this wondrous sight.

Hamlet at Singapore.

I saw "Hamlet" played and adapted for Malays at Singapore. It was sung instead of spoken, and mostly to English tunes. Hamlet addressed the ghost to the tune of "Her Golden Hair," and killed Polonius to "Listen to the Band." Polonius addressed his son to "That's English, You Know," and, with the king and queen, sang "Mary Was a Housemaid" in other words. The ghost scene included three ghosts, two clowns and a bottle of whisky.

Not Fatal.

No Matter What Doctors Say—We Know That Heart Trouble in Many Cases Can Be Cured.

There are seven main features of heart disease, viz: (1) Weakness or Debility; (2) Rheumatism or Neuralgia; (3) Valvular Disorder; (4) Dilation; (5) Enlargement; (6) Fatty Degeneration; (7) Dropsy.

Documentary evidence will prove thousands of so-called "incurables" have been absolutely cured by Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure.

Patients often have no idea their disease is heart trouble, but ascribe it to Indigestion, Liver Complaint, etc.

Here are some of the symptoms: Shortness of breath after exercise. Smothering Spells. Pain in Chest, left Shoulder and arm. Discomfort in Lying on one side. Fainting Spells. Nervous Cough. Swelling of Feet and Ankles. Paleness of Face and Lips. Palpitation. Nightmare. Irregular Pulse.

"I have great faith in Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and speak of its merits whenever opportunity presents. I can now go up and down stairs with ease, where three weeks ago I could hardly walk one block." One year later.—"I am still in good health; the Heart Cure did so much for me, that I find it a far greater medicine than you claimed it to be."—S. D. YOUNG, D. The Name of London.

The old name for the city of London was Lynden or Llynden, meaning "the city by the lake." An old tradition gives us to understand that London was founded by Brute, a descendant of Æneas, and that it was first called New Troy or Troynovant. In the time of Lud it was surrounded by a wall and was then known as Lud's Town, or Caer-Lud. This latter is probably the correct version of the origin of the name of London if for no other reason because it is such an easy matter to detect a similarity between the expressions London and Lud's Town. It is claimed by some writers that there was a city on the present site of London in the year 1107 B. C., and it is known that the Romans founded a city [illegible] and called it Londinium in the Unique Votive Offerings.

In many churches of Provence and Italy, especially those near the sea, paintings placed on the walls in accordance with vows made by pilgrims in moments of danger are often remarkable for their frames. Among the curiosities may be enumerated laths formed of splinters from ships that have been wrecked; also frames made of pieces of heavy cables, occasionally painted bright hues, but sometimes left in their primitive gray color or splashed with tar. Nailed to the laths surrounding a painting representing sailors fighting with fierce savages may be seen African or Polynesian spears and darts or swords made of hard wood, evidently mementos of terrible struggles. Sailors or landsmen who have made vows during times of peril at sea and who have no trophies to display will surround their paintings with broad bands of wood heavily incrusted with shells and seaweed, not infrequently of rare and extremely beautiful kinds.

Coral.

The red coral which is used in jewelry and which is known as precious coral is mostly obtained in the Mediterranean, the Barbary coast furnishing the dark red, the vicinity of Sardinia furnishing the yellow, or salmon colored, variety and the coast of Italy the rose pink. Railroads and Hacks.

We don't know what there is about a station that calls for a hack. Every day women who carry market baskets from downtown home and are proud of it send for a hack to take them to the station, though they take nothing with them but a little handbag.—Atchison Globe.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have never before given my endorsement for any medicine, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has added so much to my life and happiness that I feel like making an exception in this case. For two years every month I would have two days of severe pain, and could find no relief, but one day when visiting a friend I ran across Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound,—she had used it with the best results and advised me to try it. I found that it worked wonders with me; I now experience no pain, and only had to use a few bottles to bring about this wonderful change. I use it occasionally now when I am exceptionally tired or worn out."—MISS ALICE M. MINNESOTA NEWS.

Gentlemanly Burglar.

Another of those gentle and accommodating burglars entered the residence of Mrs. S. J. Reed, Minneapolis, ransacked all the rooms on the first floor while the family slept, and then began a search of the sleeping rooms, when he was asked to desist.

Mrs. Reed was awakened by some one coming quietly up the stairs, but hadn't time to investigate before a dark lantern was flashed in her face.

"Go away from here," said Mrs. Reed, "or my sons will shoot you."

"All right," said the burglar, and he walked quietly down the stairs and out of the front door.

The man had turned everything topsy turvy, but found only a few trinkets. He overlooked $50 in a cabinet. Mrs. Reed saw the man's face plainly and was able to give a good description of the man to the police.

Scoring Postponed.

W. W. P. McConnell, state dairy and food commissioner, has decided to postpone the May butter scoring contest and the first cheese-scoring test of the proposed six-months' contest, until the first week in June. It was originally intended to begin the cheese-scoring contest at the May butter-scoring, but many cheese factories were late in starting, and Mr. McConnell decided to give the cheesemakers more time.

The dairy and food commission will issue a circular explaining the cheese scoring contest. Prizes will be offered at each monthly test, $5 in cash for the cheesemaker making the highest score; $3 for the second best score, and $2 for the third best score. Costly silver cups will be awarded at the end of the six-months' contest to the three cheese-makers making the highest scores.

Attempted Suicide.

Soaked in blood which flowed from several jagged wounds in his throat, Hans Olson of St. Paul was found by a small newsboy, lying unconscious behind one of the large billboards on Wabasha street, just across from the new capitol.

In a determined effort to end his life, the man had gashed his throat in three or four places with a piece of broken glass which he had picked up on the street.

Some of the smaller arteries had been severed, the jugular vein laid bare, and the flow of blood from the wounds was so profuse that Olson must have died in a very short time had he not been given prompt attention.

Attractive Exhibits.

An attractive exhibit of buffalo bone and stone instruments manufactured by the Mandan Indians and found near the mouth of the Heart river in North Dakota will be installed in the Museum of the Minnesota Historical society in the new capitol. The instruments were exhibited by J. V. Brower of St. Paul at the meeting of the executive council at the capitol. In addition there will be an exhibit of 30,000 curios collected by Dr. Edward C. Mitchell in all parts of the world.

Indian Payments.

Maj. Scott, acting Indian agent, made a payment of $20,000 to the Red Lake reservation.

The amount secured from these logging corporations reached about $33,000. The whole of it was obtained for the Reds, but the major decided that, as there was no pressing need of the money on the part of the Indians, $20,000 would be sufficient for the present. The remainder will be turned over at the time of the annuity payments in November.

Hurt by Dynamite.

A gang of men were blasting rock on West Seventh street, St. Paul, when they exploded an old charge of dynamite left in place by a former crew. Three men were hurt. Belmissano Tasquale, left arm from wrist to elbow; flesh torn to the bone; Charles Voncbini, eye knocked out and badly burned about the arms and face; Wm. Solbig, arms and face burned.

AS GOOD AS THE BEST.

The Dining Hour of the Best People Was His Eating Time as Well.

Gen. Reyes, the president of Colombia, attended a dinner party in New York before he sailed on the Kaiser Wilhelm for Paris recently, says the New York Tribune.

"They tell me," Gen. Reyes said at this dinner, "that the United States has its share of nouveaux riches—of new-rich persons. This may be so, but I am sure that the new-rich are to be found everywhere. I like them. They make, though, strange mistakes.

"There is a new-rich—a millionaire—in Panama. This gentleman engaged a butler the other day.

"'What time, sir,' said the new butler, 'would you wish to dine as a rule?'

"'What time do the best people dine?' said the new-rich.

"'At different times, sir,' the butler answered.

"'Very well,' said the new-rich. 'Then I, too, will dine at different times.'"

Gained Twenty Pounds.

Harford Mills, N. Y., May 16.—This neighborhood is aroused as never before by some wonderful cures by Dodd's Kidney Pills. These began with the case of Mrs. J. D. Wallace, who had been in very poor health for a long time and who had got so bad at last that she couldn't walk from her home to the village and back, a distance of about eighty rods, without being tired out and in pain all over.

She had only used a few of Dodd's Kidney Pills, when she noticed a change for the better and in a very short time she was able to walk any reasonable distance and do any kind of woman's work without feeling any bad effects.

She has gained twenty pounds in weight in three months and is now as well a woman as could be found. She declares the Dodd's Kidney Pills deserve all the credit for her wonderful restoration.

SOCIETY WRECKED HER LIFE.

In Society.

A woman in society is obliged to keep late hours. She must attend receptions and balls. She seldom allows herself a quiet evening at home. Her whole time is taken up in keeping engagements or entertaining in her own home.

Her system becomes completely run down as a consequence. She soon finds herself in a condition known as systemic catarrh. This has also been called catarrhal nervousness.

If every society woman could know the value of Peruna at such a time, if they could realize the invigorating, strengthening effect that Peruna would have, how much misery could be avoided.

Letters from society women all over the United States testify to the fact that Peruna is the tonic for a run down, depleted nervous system.

Gentlemen:—"A few years ago I had to give up social life entirely, as my health was completely broken down. The doctor advised a complete rest for a year. As this was out of the question for a time, I began to look for some other means of restoring my health.

"I had often heard of Peruna as an excellent tonic, so I bought a bottle to see what it would do for me, and it certainly took hold of my system and rejuvenated me, and in less than two months I was in perfect health, and now when I feel worn out or tired a dose or two of Peruna is all that I need."—Mrs. J. E. Finn.

Mrs. J. W. Reynolds, Elkton, Ohio, writes:

"I owe my health and life to Peruna. We rarely call in a physician, in fact it has been years since I have taken any other medicine than yours. I am afraid of drugs, and although I have been sick many times I have taken only your medicines. They are wonderful indeed. We have a very large house and entertain a great deal, and I do all my own work, thanks to Peruna."—Mrs. J. W. Reynolds.

THE MAN BEHIND THE GUN

Is our name for the patent Separating Grate and Check Plate in the famous RED RIVER SPECIAL THRESHER.

It has the Big Cylinder, with lots of concave and open grate surface.

It has the Man Behind the Gun, that does most of the separating right at the cylinder.

Besides these, it has all the separating capacity of other machines.

The average old-style small cylinder thresher wastes enough grain and time to pay your thresh bill.

Why not save the grain ordinarily put into the straw stack? Why not save the time which the ordinary threshing outfit wastes for you?

This can be done by employing the RED RIVER SPECIAL.

It runs right along, saving your grain and saving time, regardless of conditions.

As the modern self-binder is ahead of the old reaper of forty years ago, so is the Big Cylinder and Man Behind the Gun ahead of the small cylinder old-style thresher.

The old-style thresher with its small cylinder and limited separating capacity, has stood for years without much improvement.

The RED RIVER SPECIAL is the crowning improvement in threshing machinery.

It is built for modern, up-to-date work; to thresh well; to thresh fast; to save time and grain and money for the thresherman and farmer. It does it. There are reasons why. Send for our new book on threshing, it gives them, and it is free.

The RED RIVER SPECIAL is the only machine that has the Man Behind the Gun, and it will save enough extra grain and time to pay your thresh bill.

The Spirit of Decoration Day

THE WELDED BULLET

A Story for Decoration Day

By MRS. F. M. HOWARD.

THE beautiful Southern cemetery was gay with flowers and flegs that bright Memorial day. Not even a lowering cloud had [illegible] and the sun shone cheerily, and the soft hreezes fanned the cheeks of two ladies sitting together on one of the many rustic seats. The procession had gone and flowers were everywhere, and especielly on the graves which were marked hy the little flegs.

There were many of them, for the small town had heen near the storm center of those storm-tossed days, and many e brave Johnnie and more than one Union soldier had taken their long sleep within its horders. A tall monument near the rustic seat marked the spot where two graves were equally end lavishly covered with flowers, yet underneeth the sod were two uniforms, one of the gray end the other the blue, and tears had fallen equally over each.

"It is a sad story," remarked Mrs. Kenneth, whose sweet face showed lines drawn hy great suffering and care. "I cannot expect you to realize all it meant to us; seeing our cities besieged, our homes threatened and despoiled. It was no wonder, I think, thet the southern women were unreasonable—that hatred and passion were nursed into tho very veins of their infant habes. I was only a little girl then, hut the memory will never die out; though calmness and hetter judgment have taken out the hitterness and passion."

"IT IS A SAD STORY."

"War at its heet is horror. We too suffered," Mrs. Warner said, gently.

"Grandmother had two sons," resumed Mrs. Kenneth, "and tall, beautiful lads they were. I can feel yet the thrill of my childish worship of my uncles, William and Harry. William was tha oldest, and two years hefore the war broke out he had a very advantageous offer to go into business in New York. We had never held slaves, not so much from principle as a distaste for tho system, so when the wer broke out the race question had comparatively little to do in molding our feelings. It was a fight against invasion, and Harry threw himself into it with all the ardor of [illegible] Grandmother wrote at once to William, begging him to come home, hut, to her horror and grief, he wrote her saying that he had already enlisted and was the captain of a northern company.

"The news cut her deeply, and from that day she seemed to have a premonition that some day the brothers would meet in hettle. Tha thought was horror, and I can remember yet the stony look of despair which would come over her poor face when an engagement was in progress into which Harry was likely to he called.

"It came at last. After the battle of Gettysburg they were sent home—both fatelly shot, and the hodies had been found together, the report said.'

"And your grandmother?" asked Mrs. Warner, in a tone of horror.

"Went quite mad et the sight. She had dreamed of it—had tried to fortify herself, and become used to ths awful thought of the possihility, hut the reality drove reason completely from its throne.

"Without any real evidence that such was the case, she took it for granted that they had met and killed each other, and for years sha nursed the idea in her poor, crazed hrain until it seemed as if we should go insane with her."

"And did she never recover?"

"Not entirely. The sequel is the strangest of all. Several years after peece was declared we were entertaining a friend, a newspaper man, who had made a success in his profession. He had on his watch chain a peculiar looking charm and I, with the curiosity of youth, noticed it.

"'The charm has a singular history,' he aaid, detaching it from his chain and handing it to me. It was two hullets, welded together as they met in the air, hot from the muskets' mouth and hound with a golden hand and ring.

"'Will you tell it, please?' I asked as I examined it with interest before passing it on to my mother.

"'I was a reporter then,' said Mr. Rolf, 'and had heen detailed to describe the field of Gettysburg for my paper.' At the name of Gettysburg, which we never mentioned in her presence, grandmother's sunken eyes hegan to kindle, and her frame to quiver with eager, strained interest. 'The horrors of it hed sickened me until I was about to turn awey from it all, faint end weary of my task, when a singular sight arrested me. Out a little from the rest were two hodies, one wearing the gray, the other the blue, an officer, and what was strangest of all they were locked in each other's arms, their lips almost touching, as if in the very moment of death they had kissed each other a last fond farewell.'

"Grandmother tottered over to him, tremhling in every limb. She had heard and comprehended it all, and she grasped his arm, her poor face working convulsively. 'Who was it?' she demanded. 'Tell me quick. Who was it?'

"'Really, Mrs. Gordon,' he replied, confused hy her ahrupt demand; then a sudden light hroke over his countenence. 'I helieve, upon my soul, the name wes Gordon. I wes so interested in what was evidently a bit of family history that I searched for the evidence of their identity, which I readily found on letters in the pockets.

"'I rememher writing up the incident for the northern paper I was engaged on, hut of course you never saw thet. Yes, I am almost positive the name was Gordon, hut I can make sure hy referring to the article in my scraphooks et home. Any relative of yours, ma'am?' for grandmother was still looking at him in en agony of effort to comprehend all he was saying.

"'Tell it to her again,' said mother in a low voice. 'They were her sons; I knew they could never harm one another, my dear, dear brothers,' and mother's voice hroke in a low sob.

"He told the story over in clear, gentle tones, dilating upon the tenderness of that last embrace. Grandmother's face grew white and at the lest word she feinted, something which had never occurred during ell the dreadful days of her insanity. She was like a little child when she came out of thet long, deathlike swoon. Her mind seemed to have gone beck to the days when her sons were boys at home togetber, and sho talked of them more naturally than she had since thet dreadful day when they were hrought home, and the nightmare of dreed end terror which had hovered over her so long seemed to be dispelled elmost entirely."

"What a mercy," Mrs. Warner exclaimed, fervently. "But what of the hullet charm? Your friend said it was connected with tho story."

"Yes, quite remarkably so. Here it is on my watch guard at this moment, a souvenir so precious that nothing could replace it.

'WHO WAS IT?' SHE DEMANDED.

"Mr. Rolf told us that he had picked it up but a little way from where my uncles were lying, and grandmother seized upon the fact as a proof that if her boys, in the excitement of the bettle, had really shot at each other, God's own hand had caught the missiles and welded them together, as the hearts of her sons were united in their life and in death. Mr. Rolf never took back the charm but gave it to grandmother, and she cherished it es her most valued possession as long as she lived."

"I do not wonder that you cherish it." Mrs. Warner turned over the curious relic reverently. The gold was worn and the ring almost hlack with age, but the leaden hullets, flattened hy the force with which they hed come together, were perfect as ever and worn very smooth with constant wear. "You said your grandmother never fully recovered."

"No, not fully, hut her later years were comforted. If she grew weary and excited, the touch of the welded hullets in her hand would quiet her, and she would sit for hours with it, whispering softly: 'God is good. He is very good,' in a gentle, uncomplaining tone which would hring tears to our eyes. I cared for her in her last illness and she gave me the charm as the choicest legacy she had to hestow. I think she was quite sane for the few minutes hefore her death. The vacant, trouhled look was all gone from her eyes, and they were perfectly radiant with joy at the last as she reached upward with her thin, wasted hands, crying: 'My boys, my boys,' in thrilling tones of joy."

The sun was dropping westward as the ladies rose to go. Mrs. Kenneth had replaced the charm upon her chain and Mrs. Warner wiped away the tears of sympathy which had gathered in her eyes, and as they left the grounds she looked heck. The monument stood hathed in the glowing sunshine, a shining finger pointing upward out of the grave of the dark and terrible past.

tion of the Earth Upon Bodies.

Years ago, when the bodies were re-ved from the Cimetiere des Inno-nts at Paris, the common pits in ich great numbers of the bodies had en interred together were found to tain masses of a grayish white py substance. The matter was not y well understood at that time, but is now known that the remains of dead are under certain conditions nsformed into such a material, ei-r wholly or in part, which has been med "adipocere." It is a true am-oniacal soap, being a combination of ty acids with ammonia. Bodies that are exposed to the action water percolating through the soil e most apt to undergo this species of nsformation. The Syrian Bulbul.

The Syrian bulbul (nightingale) has he loveliest voice of all God's crea-tures and the saddest song ever heard. Shady coverts fringing the Jordan still helter the bird that "sings darkling." A vast Buddhist temple stands in the center of the city, and it s encircled by a street lined with hops and roadside venders. A Man Of Nerve

How Marshal Tom Smith Suppressed the Bad Men of the Ranges.

A Page From History of the Early Days of Abilene, Kan.—Bare Knuckles Versus Guns.

Mr. T. C. Henry, who was the mayor of Abilene, Kan., when that frontier town was perhaps the most disorderly in America, while in Chicago recently told the story of Tom Smith, the great-est town marshal in the history of the west.

Mr. Henry, who now lives in Mexi-co, went to Abilene when that frontier town only had about 200 residents, but it was the best ammunition market in the United States. The majority of the people of Abilene were of the nameless sort that came from every-where and went—usually out to the little burying ground on the prairie.

SMITH KNOCKED THE RUFFIAN DOWN.

As mayor it became Mr. Henry's duty to appoint a marshal who could walk into a saloon and make the toughs pony up their six shooters and bowies and if necessary take the short-est trail back for the Indian Territory or Texas. One after another marshal was tried. One after another gave up the task. But at last Mr. Henry heard of and sent for Thomas J. Smith, who was at that time in Colorado. The events leading up to and following Mr. Henry's induction into office in Abilene is best told by himself:

"The resident population of Abilene was between 200 and 300, but during the shipping season usually 10,000 or more cattlemen and business men were attracted there. Naturally with these there came a very wild element. The cowboys from Texas, being con-gregated there, invited all sorts of semioutlawed institutions—gambling saloons, dance halls and the like—to be located there. The town was perhaps the most disorderly in the history of America.

"Smith, I had learned, had led the Bear river riots in Wyoming in 1868. I did not understand at that time why he should be leading rioters, and I have never fully cleared up that, but I shall soon.

"Soon after I had engaged Smith he arrived at Abilene and without an hour's delay assumed the duties of his office. He started down the street and by a series of daring, nervy, tactical acts soon showed the riotous element that he meant business. Within forty-eight hours he established the suprem-acy of the law.

"Smith, unlike Wild Bill, who was the next marshal of Abilene, did not depend upon his expert handling of firearms for his courage. Wild Bill was not afraid of any man, for he knew he could shoot quicker and straighter than any man with whom he might have trouble; but Smith dur-ing the time he was marshal never fired a shot at a lawbreaker except upon one occasion. His mere manner was enough to quell the worst man that ever visited Abilene. He was only about twenty-nine years old, but he was an athlete through and through. His voice was soft and low toned, and he never uttered an idle word.

"When Smith as the new marshal walked down the street that first time he came finally to the front of a saloon and dance hall where a number of cowboys were fairly tearing up the town. Smith walked up to the leader of the crowd, the biggest, burliest and most notorious of all the Abilene toughs, a man who would shoot at the drop of a hat. This cowboy had driv-en the other marshals off the streets, and Smith knew it. But Smith walked up to the noisy and cursing fellow and said:

"'Give me your gun, sir.'

"The cowboy looked at Smith for a second.

"'Who are you?' he asked of Smith.

"Smith's steel gray eyes looked steadily into those of the cowboy, who turned aside and saw a score of his friends standing about. Confident of help if he needed it, he stepped to-ward Smith. The cowboy got within arm's length of the young marshal and then quickly drew a pistol. Before he could elevate it Smith struck him squarely in the face with his great fist, and the riotous Texan rolled over and over in the dust. Both the cow-boy and the cowboy's friends were completely astonished. The worst man in Kansas had been floored by a stran-ger who called himself the new mar-shal.

"The cowboy started to get up. He saw that Smith had no pistol, and he arose cursing as furiously as he knew how, and he undoubtedly knew how. But before he could reach for his gun, which had been knocked from his hand, Smith grabbed it and then turn-ed in and gave that cowboy the worst whipping any man ever got in the state of Kansas. When he had done this he turned the cowboy around and commanded him to leave Abilene and never to allow himself to be seen there again.

"This action had a splendid effect upon the other cowboys. Smith turn-ed to them, and before he could make the request they surrendered their arms to him.

"From that day forward not one of those cowboys ever gave the citizens of Abilene any trouble. Thus began the reign of law in what had been the most lawless place in the country. Aft-er that the cowboys' proudest boast was that they were the friends of and were favorably regarded by Thomas J. Smith.

"But there was another element in Abilene with which Smith had to deal. The proprietors of the gambling joints and saloons knew he would sorely af-fect their business. Because of this belief several men conspired to kill the young marshal. They planned to get him into a house, to turn out the lights and shoot him. They did get him into the house, and the lights were turned out, but no sooner had the shooting begun than Smith, too, opened fire. The battle ended in about a minute, after thirty shots had been fired. Smith got away unhurt.

"That was the only occasion upon which Smith ever lost his temper, and he surely did at that time. He came to my office the next day and swore he would kill at sight the man who he knew was the leader in the conspiracy. But as it turned out that man was not again seen in Abilene. Smith was a veritable devil when aroused, but it re-quired a great deal to arouse him. He was a perfect master of himself. He could control himself wherever he might be or in whatever danger. He had been the marshal at Echo Canyon, Kit Carson and a few camps of that kind, and he was thoroughly trained.

"Smith was not in Abilene long be-fore he was killed, but he was there long enough to transform the place from the wildest and most wicked in the United States to one where a man could live and feel that his life and his property were secure.

"In the fall of 1870 Smith and a deputy went out into the country to arrest a couple of settlers who had shot a neighboring ranchman. The two set-tlers showed fight as Smith and the deputy approached the ranch, and the latter showed the white feather and ran away, leaving Smith alone to deal with the settlers. During the fight Smith was shot dead.

THE MARSHAL WAS SHOT DEAD.

"Wild Bill, the famous scout, suc-ceeded Smith as the marshal of Abi-lene, but Wild Bill never had the things to deal with that Smith had to confront, although Abilene was the rendezvous of some very bad gangs while Wild Bill was marshal.

"Smith was killed before I learned much of his earlier history; therefore I do not know exactly who the fellow really was. There are two stories re-garding him. One is that he was born in Dover, Del., and the other that he was born in New York city and was a member of the police force there and had been compelled to leave on ac-count of some little difficulty. At any rate he was a perfect gentleman in every sense of the word. Refinement was written all over him. He was one of the most charming and yet one of the most unusual characters I have ever met, and I have met hundreds of the men of the plains. Thomas J. Smith was buried at Abilene."

CHROMATIC AFFLICTION.

Facial Indications in the Case of a Bibulous Patient Suggested the Rainbow.

A Virginia reader sends a story told by the late Alban S. Payne as an actual occurrence, says the Philadelphia Times. It concerned a hard-riding, hard-drinking young Englishman, who settled near Linden, that state, in the expressed hope that the rustic surroundings would prove an aid in ridding him of his abnormal thirst. But he clung to his old habits, and soon became a connoisseur in moonshine distillations, rather preferring them, after a time, to those bearing the government stamp. His face was a mingled purple and sunset red, the joint product of whisky and an open-air life; and he had nothing of charm apart from his faultless manners to offer the pretty mountain girl who consented to become his wife. One afternoon he was carried home, pretty well mussed up as the result of a fall. The gravel of the roadside, the green of the grass and the smear from some cuts added to the colorfulness of his countenance; and the young wife, when Dr. Payne arrived, rushed out on the porch, screaming:

"Oh, doctor! doctor! go in to him—quick! He has all the diseases of the rainbow!"

Lionel Ardon.

One of the new novels of exceptional merit, builded along historical lines, is "Lionel Ardon," by Malcolm Dearborn. Like many of the novels of the time it takes its name from that of the hero. The scene is England and the time that of Henry VIII., and through to Queen Elizabeth. The hero, Lionel, is the son of Lord Ardon, who is killed in a duel with Lord Raven, and his death is quickly avenged by the young son. The story follows the entrance of the hero into English court life, and contains some brilliant descriptions of the gayeties and festivities of those times. One of the principal characters is Lady Jane Grey, who is, in fact, the real heroine. This is the only novel that has ever brought to the sympathy and admiration of story readers that woman of purity and exquisite womanliness. Published by G. W. Dillingham Company, New York. Price, $1.50.

In the Proper Order.

"But can you cook?" asked the prosaic young man.

"Let us take these questions up in their proper order," returned the wise girl. "The matter of cooking is not the first to be considered."

"Then what is the first?" he demanded.

"Can you provide the things to be cooked?"

On the Verge of Bright's Disease.—A Quick Cure that Lasted.

CASE NO. 30,611.—C. E. Boies, dealer in grain and feed, 505 South Water Street, Akron, O., made the following statement in 1896, he said: "Ever since the Civil War I have had attacks of kidney and bladder troubles, decidedly worse during the last two or three years. Although I consulted physicians, some of whom told me I was verging on Bright's disease, and I was continually using standard remedies, the excruciating aching just across the kidneys, which radiated to the shoulder blades, still existed. As might be expected when my kidneys were in a disturbed condition, there was a distressing and inconvenient difficulty with the action of the kidney secretions. A box of Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Lamparter & Co.'s drug store, brought such a decided change within a week that I continued the treatment. The last attack, and it was particularly aggravated, disappeared."

Three Years After.

Mr. Boies says in 1899: "In the spring of 1896 I made a public statement of my experience with Doan's Kidney Pills. This remedy cured me of a terrible aching in the kidneys, in the small of my back, in the muscles of the shoulder blades, and in the limbs. During the years that have gone by I can conscientiously say there have been no recurrences of my old trouble. My confidence in Doan's Kidney Pills is stronger than ever, not only from my personal experience but from the experience of many others in Akron which have come to my notice."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mr. Boies will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists, price 50 cents per box.

A PUBLIC CHRISTENING.

The Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad will Let the Public Choose a Name for Its Elegant New Chicago Train.

In reply to Shakspeare's famous query, "What's in a name" the Minneapolis & St. Louis road has decided that there's a good deal in just the right title, especially when it comes to trains. On Nov. 2 the M. & St. L. is to inaugurate its new service through Minnesota, Iowa and Illinois to Chicago and inasmuch as the new train is for the benefit of the public, A. B. Cutts, general passenger agent of the M. & St. L. has decided to let the public do the christening.

For the best name submitted for the new train, a prize of one bright $20 gold piece will be paid.

In addition, if the best name is submitted by a public school pupil, there will be a $5 gold piece for the prize winner beside the $20 coin. Mr. Cutts makes this special inducement to the children because he believes the youngsters are full of bright ideas which should be encouraged.

The past decade has seen giant strides made in the art of car building. Luxuries which only a few years ago were supposed to be reserved for millionaires have been provided to obviate the discomforts of travel and to attract tourists to some particular route. With the palatial train, came the custom of names which suggested in some way the character of the equipment, or were appropriate to the road. Thus the B. & O. road has the Royal Blue; the Lehigh Valley, the Black Diamond Express; the New York Central, the Empire State Express, which found its way onto the Pan American postage stamps; the Canadian Pacific, the Imperial Limited and so on through the catalogue of expresses, limiteds and flyers.

The new train of the M. & St. L. is the latest work of the Pullman company to be introduced by any Twin City-Chicago line, and that means it embodies all the best and latest ideas with regard to luxury, comfort and elegance. In addition to the sleepers and coaches it has a library and buffet car which is a veritable club house on wheels. Going into Chicago a diner will be attached for breakfast and dinner will be served in the evening under a similar arrangement. The interior finish of the train is uniform, being mahogany, and the exterior is done in the handsome, dark olive green which is so artistically employed by the Pullman company.

The name for this train must be pat and euphonious; it must stick in the mind of the traveler who hears it and it must trip gracefully from the tongue. It may be based upon the character of the train, the name of the road or of the terminal cities or it may be just a name that sounds so well that people will like to say it. These are the only specifications for this matter of making a name can not be hedged about by hard and fast rules. However, Mr. Cutts has absolute confidence that the public will make him spend his $20 or $25, as the case may be, to good advantage. All suggestions should be sent to A. B. Cutts, at the Guaranty building, Minneapolis, before Oct. 31.

WOMAN'S NURSE CORPS.

Surgeon General Rixey Favors Its Establishment for the United States Navy.

The first annual report of Surgeon General Rixey shows that the health of the navy and marine corps was good throughout the last fiscal year, the percentage of sick and the death rate being lower than for several years. The most important recommendation of the report perhaps is that congress provide for the establishment of a woman's nurse corps for the navy to consist of one superintendent, eight head nurses, 16 first-class and 24 second-class nurses, these numbers to be increased at the discretion of the secretary. The surgeon general says:

"That women are the superiors of men for the work of nursing there can be no question, and the objection that they are not compatible with military conditions can scarcely apply to institutions of the character of our large naval hospitals."

The surgeon general also makes a strong plea for the appointment of dentists for the navy, pointing out that many otherwise good recruits for the service are lost for lack of dental care.

American Club in London Puts a Ban on Extravagance by Its Members.

The Express prints an account of the rules of the Atlantic club, one of the London ventures for Anglo-American social reunion, which, the paper says, will be opened in January. One rule is that members are not allowed to lose more than $5,000 a week at cards. Both winners and losers must place their card account in the cashier's box before leaving the room. Ready money payments for card transactions will not be allowed. Monday is settling day. No member will be allowed to play after his account has reached $5,000 until it is settled.

ROYAL LITERATURE.

King Edward's second daughter, Princess Charles of Denmark, is making a success in literature from a royalist standpoint. She has written a book, but it has not been printed. It is circulated in manuscript among the crowned heads of Europe. Not to be outdone by her royal literary aunt, Queen Helena of Italy has written a poem, which is to appear shortly in the German review, Berliner Leben. It is entitled, "The Other Crown," and gives the reverse of the medal of royalty as usually seen by popular eyes.

FALLIBILITIES OF SCIENCE.

Lord Kelvin Was Puzzled Over the "Impossible Angle of a Ladder Which Couldn't Fall.

At a certain favorite resort in London a conversation among a number of financiers turned upon cable shares and wireless telegraphy. One confirmed cable worshipper quoted Lord Kelvin's opinion that the companies had no need to be alarmed at the progress of Marconi, relates a London paper. "Oh," exclaimed another, "Lord Kelvin be hanged! It is not the first time he has made a mistake. Why, I remember years ago, when he was plain Billy Thomson, he was out in the country for a ride with his brother. You know he was always like the old fish hag that O'Connell tackled. He slept on a parallelogram, shaved with a spheroid, watched the process of an ellipse and generally took his mathematics to bed with him. Anyhow he never passed anything without making a calculation about it. This time it was a ladder standing against a wall at an angle which according to all known laws ought to be impossible, especially as it stood on smooth concrete at the bottom. He called his brother's attention. They both got down, took measurements, made endless calculations, and considered various theories to account for the absence of slip. At last they fixed on some far-fetched explanation just as the farmer hove in sight. Then they casually called his attention to the strange circumstance. 'Oh, ay,' says the old man, 'the ladder? Yes, I put it there for my hens, and it's pretty tight with the holdfast at the top!'"

Not So Very Crazy.

An Emporia, (Kan.) sportsman was out gunning a few days ago, the Gazette says, and happened to go by the poor farm. One of the crazy men they keep out there saw him and began asking him questions. "What have you killed?" asked the crazy fellow. The Emporia man said he had a meadow lark and two doves. "What did you pay for that gun?" "Sixty dollars." "How much is the dog worth?" "Twenty-five dollars." "An $85 hunting outfit to kill 25 cents' worth of game! They keep me locked up in here because they say I'm crazy, and they let you run loose. It isn't fair," said the crazy man.

St. Jacobs Oil.

In cases where bronchitis has become chronic from want of proper treatment in the earlier stages, there is nothing so good as Dr. August Koenig's Hamburg Breast Tea, in conjunction with which is strongly advised the use of St. Jacobs Oil as an outward application, along the front of the throat, from close up under the chin to well down to the top of the chest; the one remedy assists the other, and, as intended, they work in complete unison. The wonderful penetrating power of St. Jacobs Oil enables it to reach the adhesion of foreign matter which lines the bronchial tubes and which makes breathing more and more difficult. As these adhesions become inflamed and enlarged, St. Jacobs Oil causes such adhesions to break away, making expectoration easier and more free. Dr. August Koenig's Hamburg Breast Tea, drank slowly and very hot, soothes and heals the parts, is comforting and quieting, stops the cough and relieves the breathing. This manner of treatment (and there is no other two remedies that will work together so successfully) reaches the difficulty from the outside and the inside at the same time. St. Jacobs Oil reaches the roots of the adhesion, and assists Dr. August Koenig's Hamburg Breast Tea in clearing them; then both remedies act in unison in healing and curing. The above remarks apply with equal force in cases of asthma, croup, whooping cough, enlarged tonsils, and all bronchial affections. Every family should have St. Jacobs Oil and Dr. August Koenig's Hamburg Breast Tea always in the house in order that they may be promptly used in the first stages. Often the maladies develope with wonderful rapidity, and complications take place with equal suddenness.

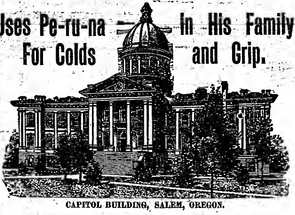
GOVERNOR OF OREGON

Uses Pe-ru-na For Colds — in His Family and Grip.



CAPITOL BUILDING, SALEM, OREGON.

A Letter From the Executive Office of Oregon.

Pe-ru-na is known from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Letters of congratulation and commendation testifying to the merits of Pe-ru-na as a catarrh remedy are pouring in from every State in the Union. Dr. Hartman is receiving hundreds of such letters daily. All classes write these letters, from the highest to the lowest.

The outdoor laborer, the indoor artisan, the clerk, the editor, the statesman, the preacher—all agree that Pe-ru-na is the catarrh remedy of the age. The stage and rostrum, recognizing catarrh as their greatest enemy, are especially enthusiastic in their praise and testimony.

Any man who wishes perfect health must be entirely free from catarrh. Catarrh is well-nigh universal; almost omnipresent. Pe-ru-na is the only absolute safeguard known. A cold is the beginning of catarrh. To prevent colds, to cure colds, is to cheat catarrh out of its victims. Pe-ru-na not only cures catarrh, but prevents. Every household should be supplied with this great remedy for coughs, colds and so forth.

The Governor of Oregon is an ardent admirer of Pe-ru-na. He keeps it continually in the house. In a recent letter to Dr. Hartman he says:

STATE OF OREGON,
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
SALEM, May 9, 1898.

The Pe-ru-na Medicine Co., Columbus, O.:

Dear Sirs—I have had occasion to use your Pe-ru-na medicine in my family for colds, and it proved to be an excellent remedy. I have not had occasion to use it for other ailments.

Yours very truly, W. M. Lord.

It will be noticed that the Governor says he has not had occasion to use Pe-ru-na for other ailments. The reason for this is, most other ailments begin with a cold. Using Pe-ru-na to promptly cure colds, he protects his family against other ailments. This is exactly what every other family in the United States should do. Keep Pe-ru-na in the house. Use it for coughs, colds, la grippe, and other climatic affections of winter, and there will be no other ailments in the house. Such families should provide themselves with a copy of Dr. Hartman's free book, entitled "Winter Catarrh." Address Dr. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio.

W. L. Douglas retains all Common Stock.

The Preferred Stock of the W. L. Douglas Shoe Company pays better than Savings Banks or Government Bonds. Every dollar of stock offered the public has behind it more than a dollar's worth of actual assets. W. L. Douglas continues to own one-half of the business, and is to remain the active head of the concern.

This business is not an undeveloped prospect. It is a demonstrated dividend payer. This is the largest business in the world producing Men's Goodyear Welt (Hand Sewed Process) shoes, and has always been immensely profitable. There has not been a year in the past twelve when the business has not earned in actual cash much more than the amount necessary to pay 7 per cent annual dividend on the preferred stock of $1,000,000.

The annual business now is $5,500,000. It is increasing very rapidly, and will equal $7,000,000 for the year 1903. The factory is now turning out 7500 pairs of shoes per day, and an addition to the plant is being built which will increase the capacity to 10,000 pairs per day.

The reason I am offering the Preferred Stock for sale is to perpetuate the business.

If you wish to invest in the best shoe business in the world, which is permanent, and receive 7 per cent on your money, you can purchase one share or more in this great business. Send money by cashier's check or certified check, made payable to W. L. Douglas. If there is no bank in your town, send money by express or post office money orders.

Prospectus giving full information about this great and profitable business sent upon application. Address W. L. DOUGLAS, Brockton, Mass.

BLASTS FROM RAM'S HORN.

The light that blesses the wise man burns the foolish moth.

To refuse a right responsibility may be to reject a great reward.

When you have made a child glad you may have made a man good.

He who drinks much thinks little, and he who thinks much drinks little.

When you have the devil under your heel don't be scared by his bellowing.

It's a poor plan to promise to pray for your pastor and then to pinch him on his pay.

It is better to grow into a place of power than to be blown into one of popularity.

The great man is he who realizes the limits of his abilities and the possibility of his capacities.

True riches must be measured by what is given to others instead of by what is ground from them.

The power of perfecting the present is worth more than the power of prophesying the future.

"It is by no means the worst thing in the world to be called a "crank" says the Chicago Herald. "I find as I prowl up and down through the earth that wherever I meet a man with sufficient individuality to stand against impurity and shams of every kind, too honest to get rich by underhanded methods, and too brave to be a cowardly comformist he is called a crank. Whenever a woman is found who thinks more of the brain than the hat that surmounts it, she is called a crank. Wherever a man is found who honestly believes that life holds better things for him than to become a dancing popinjay and a social success by fine clothes and society manners he is a crank. Whenever a young girl is found who laughs at fashion and wears a gown to please herself rather than comform to a passing style, who stands by a friend at the risk of becoming unpopular, and who is a law unto herself by the dictates of her own pure, heart, she is a crank. Discoverers are cranks. Philanthropists and poets are cranks. Christopher Columbus was a crank, and yet Chicago, after 400 years turned itself head over heels to do him honor. Ah, well, when you count on your fingers the world's most famous cranks, and note the outcome of their crankiness, who would not choose but go down on that list."

Fergus Falls Journal: D. W. Hixson left for St. Paul Wednesday morning to confer with the Great Northern officials regarding a settlement for some stock which was killed by a train a month or two ago. The train ran into quite a bunch of Mr. Hixson's cattle at that time and two of the animals were killed outright and three were crippled.

Is Life Worth Living?

Then don't neglect a cough or cold, especially when only twenty-five cents will buy a bottle of Mexican Syrup. It is so soothing, and so many consumptives have been made well by its use. Read some of the testimonials on the wrapper around each bottle that prove this remedy more sure for deep seated colds, habitual coughing and even consumption, than any other remedy known to physicians, many of whom recommend and prescribe it where less effacacious remedies fail.

Pale, Puny Children.

If a child has a bad smelling breath, if it habitually picks its nose, if it is cross and nervous, if it does not sleep soundly, if it is hollow-eyed, if it has a pale, bloodless complexion, if it is growing thin and lifeless, give it Mother's Worm Syrup and you will remove the cause of its distress quickly. Then will its little cheeks get red and rosy, its appetite and digestion improve, and its health be better. Price only 25 cents. No other wormkiller so effective.

Be Not Deceived.

Don't think you can neglect your health and reach old age. The way to longevity is to be kind to nature and then nature will be kind to you. Constipation, inactive liver, etc. are foes to nature. Mexican Root Pills help nature. Try them. They cure by cleansing and strengthening.

Pain Can Be Cured.

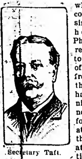
WASHINGTON LETTER

INTERESTING AND TIMELY GOSSIP OF NATIONAL CAPITOL.

LAST MARTYR TO SOCIETY

Secretary Taft Has Paid the Penalty of Social Popularity—Republican Vice Presidential Candidate from Illinois.



Secretary Taft.

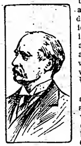
Washington.—Secretary Taft is reaping the fruit of the social dissipation to which he has been condemned ever since he came home from the Philippines. He reached Washington in the last week of January and from that time to the present there has hardly been a night that he has not been claimed for some function at which he was the principal social attraction. Receptions and dinners have fallen to him by the score, and it has been simply out of the question for him to decline them.

Taft is nothing if not obliging, he enjoys companionship, and for one of his temperament it was fatal. So he has succumbed to the inevitable and has abandoned Washington altogether for awhile to see if a complete divorce from the place will do him any good. It is high time.

More public men have been killed by the social game in Washington than by hard work. Too many dinners proved fatal to Blaine, Reed, Hobart and dozens of others who might be named. All three of those men were favorite diners-out, and from their position as well as their personal accomplishments were constantly in demand. All three of them would doubtless be alive to-day had they been permitted to confine themselves to their public duties in Washington without the distractions of [illegible] dinners.

For Vice Presidential Honors.

It is rather odd that the three men from Illinois who have been conspicuously mentioned as possible candidates for vice president on the republican ticket should all have been among the few survivors of those who knew Lincoln well.



Congressman Hitt.

Cannon, Cullom and Hitt were all associated in some way with Lincoln during his life, and both Cannon and Cullom have been recognized in Washington as resembling Lincoln somewhat not only in personal appearance, but also in the homely quality of their minds. One is known as "Uncle Shelby," the other as "Uncle Joe," just as Lincoln was known familiarly as "Uncle Abe." And as Justice Harlan recently remarked, when a public man is known universally as "Uncle," that is a pretty sure sign he is close to the hearts of the people and has the qualities that the people like.

As for Hitt, he is one of the most interesting of all the men in congress, and he has long been recognized as one of the very ablest. He has been chairman of the foreign affairs committee in the house for a great many years, and it has fallen to him to prepare the republican side of almost every diplomatic question which has been the subject of partisan controversy during that time, as, for instance, in the Hawaiian and Cuban matters just before the war with Spain. He has had a longer and more varied diplomatic experience than almost any other man in public life, having served as secretary of legation and assistant secretary of state up to the time he was elected to congress, while before that he was associated with Lincoln.

Record-Breaking Congress.

The session of congress just closed is shown by the official records to have been the busiest in the history of that body. In order to find so short a session of a so-called "long session" of congress the historians have to go back before the war, and in work actually accomplished in so short a time there is no preceding congress which excels it. No other session of congress, long or short, has ever equaled it in the number of reports made by committees, and it comes near the head of the list in bills passed. At the same time the session failed to come up to the average of increase in appropriations which, since the beginning of the government almost, has characterized each succeeding session of congress; for there is a stated law of increase following somewhat the growth of the country in population, no matter what party happens to be in control.

Rapid Legislation.

This record is due partly to the organization of the house, and partly to the understanding which has prevailed between the leaders of the house and senate. There has never been a congress where less friction developed between the two branches or where the respective leaders knew better as time went on what was likely to happen. There has been little partisan bitterness, the only spirited debate in the house being between Cockran and Dalzell, which turned chiefly on personal issues.

Of course, what gave the session its opportunity for work was the special session which President Roosevelt called for November. That enabled congress to dispose of a great amount of routine in organization, which usually delays the beginning of the work of legislation for over a month. It is estimated that the special session of three weeks, coming as it did, was worth at least six weeks of work accomplished.

Former Mistress of the White House.

A woman who was once mistress of the white house has just passed her eighty-fourth birthday in the quiet of the Louise Home, established many years ago by W. W. Corcoran, the Washington millionaire philanthropist, as a retreat for southern gentlewomen of slender means.

Mrs. Letitia Tyler Semple.

Mrs. Letitia Tyler Semple is the second daughter of President Tyler. Her mother died in 1842, and she at once took her mother's [illegible] distinction to the political and social life of Washington.

Just before her father was elected vice president she had married James A. Semple, a wealthy planter with large estates in Virginia. When Tyler succeeded to the presidency on the death of Harrison she came to Washington with him for the first time.

Tyler appointed Semple a paymaster in the navy, and after Tyler left the white house Mrs. Semple lived quietly on her husband's plantation until the outbreak of the civil war, when he resigned from the United States navy and became a paymaster in the confederate navy.

The close of the war left the Semples impoverished, and Mrs. Semple, leaving her husband at home, went to Baltimore, where she conducted a school for girls. After her husband's death in the late '70's Mrs. Semple, then about 60 years of age, came to Washington to pass her last days in the Louise Home.

Charities of Corcoran.

Of all the charities of Washington, the Louise Home is at once the most singular and one of the most meritorious. It was established soon after the close of the civil war by the banker Corcoran, who was a southerner in sentiment and who in that day was by far the wealthiest man in the District of Columbia.

The Louise Home.

It was Corcoran who founded the principal bank of Washington, and who among other benefactions presented Daniel Webster with the handsome house, since known as the Corcoran house, and now occupied by Chauncey M. Depew.

At the close of the war he was perhaps the wealthiest man in the country of southern proclivities, and those who had been left destitute by the four years' fighting came to him in droves for relief. Most of the cases were pitiful. There were scores of women delicately bred and used to a life of comfort who suddenly found themselves widowed and helpless, with poverty staring them in the face. Corcoran took pity on them. He planned such a charity as had never been conceived before. He established a home which should be open only to women of the south, of gentle birth, and that home, named in memory of his wife, "The Louise Home," is still maintained through his endowment for the purposes which he had in mind.

It is a spacious building, surrounded by ample grounds, in a part of the city where land has trebled and quadrupled in value since Corcoran's day.

WASHINGTON LETTER

INTERESTING AND TIMELY GOSSIP OF NATIONAL CAPITOL.

LAST MARTYR TO SOCIETY

Secretary Taft Has Paid the Penalty of Social Popularity—Republican Vice Presidential Candidate from Illinois.

Secretary Taft.

Washington.—Secretary Taft is reaping the fruit of the social dissipation to which he has been condemned ever since he came home from the Philippines. He reached Washington in the last week of January and from that time to the present there has hardly been a night that he has not been claimed for some function at which he was the principal social attraction. Receptions and dinners have fallen to him by the score, and it has been simply out of the question for him to decline them.

Walter Billings, thought to be a professional pickpocket, was caught "with the goods on" in Minneapolis by Henry Krumweide, formerly a member of the police force.

Nels Erickson, a farmer from Hastings, Minn., fell asleep in the rear of R. E. Cobb's commission house. His head rested near an airhole of the refrigerator plant in the building and when he awoke his ears and hands were frozen.

The output of the Minneapolis flour mills, according to the current issue of the Northwestern Miller, increased about 29,000 barrels over the week previous, but is still considerable under the amount of flour ground the corresponding week a year ago.

A Wabasha county Republican dreamed that he was a delagate at the state convention and R.C. Dunn was nominated for governor. Dreams often go by contrary's after the subject has had an interview with Jim Hill.

Clearwater county is haveing a little side show scrap over the propesition to bond the County, for $30,000. The people in this end of the county are opposed to the "scheme", and we don't blame them, for it's a slick one

The aspirants for county and legislative offices are holding their breath at the praasant time and not takeing any part in the governor fight, They may be affraid it is getting so hot they might burn their fingers,

The Northfield News says. "It is greatly to Mr. Dunn's advantage that he is not lharressed by the support of politioians". Well now what do you think of that?, punblished in Joel P. Heatwole's paper, When did Heatwole, one of Dunn's staunch supporters go out of polltiots? As a matter of fact Dunn has the hacking of some of the best politicans in the sate, from him self down to A.D. Stephens and W.E.Mckinzie of this county, and when they get short of camaign timber Jim Hill jumps on and helps them spring roarbacks.

DANGEROUS GROUND.

We expect to support the nominees of the republican party in the comming campaign as loyally as Washington supported Braddock, in 1755, after warning him of his danger.

There is an issue in the campaign in this state, and that is the merger issue, with Gov. Van Sant, as the representative of the people on one side and James J. Hill, president of the Northern Securities company, and of the Great Northern railway on the other side. The supporters of Dunn do not now deny that this is a fact as can be seen by the statement of Elmer Dickinson, a well known welthy merchant of Verndale and a prominent Dunn worker in the locality, quoted as follows:

"I will admit that Bob Dunn is Jim Hill's man, but I am willing to support him just the same. A great railroad man like Hill should have sense enough to pick a good man for governor".

Two years ago W.F. Street, of Bemidji tried to get the nomination for state senator of the 61st legislative district by declaring himself in favor of the merging of the railway interests, and notwithstanding he was a popular candidate he was overwhelmingly defeated at the primary election

The farmer of northern Minnesota is a carefull reader and an enteligent voter. He is not to be compared with the curb stone politioans of the city, who bawls his political views on the street, but he goes to election and votes and he can vote without any assistance to mark his ticket, and if the republican party of this state chose to nominate a candidate for governor who is opposed to the views of our Van Sant on this importent issue we shall go into the campaign with the same spirit that Washington displayed after the mistake of his Braddock.

CURIOUS THINGS FROM CHINA

The Most Magnificent Beds Ever Seen Are Part of the Celestial Empire's World's Fair Exhibit.

The Chinese exhibit at the World's Fair is filled with pleasing surprises. Some of the most magnificent articles of furniture are a part of this wonderful display. The carving and inlaying of ivory, bone and wood illustrate the marvelous skill of the Chinese.

Models included in this interesting exhibit show the homes and home life of the Chinese, their weddings and funerals, Chinese tea house, restaurant and shop, Chinese weaving and some of the beautiful silks and wearing apparel of the Chinese and their methods of manufacturing them.

One feature of the exhibit is two magnificent Chinese beds, each of which has the appearance of being a small house of great beauty. One is a summer bed, the other for winter. The summer bed is hand carved and inlaid with ivory and bone figures and landscapes exquisitely carved and so skillfully joined as to appear a part of the wood. The bed and furniture are of carved bamboo. The bed consists of an anteroom, with tables, chairs and tea stands, and in an inner room, which is the sleeping apartment, there is a couch with coverings of gauzy silks.

The winter bed is still more elaborate. It consists of three compartments. The first contains four chairs, a tea poy and a chest of drawers. This is the sitting apartment. The second is the dressing room, and the third is the sleeping apartment, or the couch itself. The furniture is of rosewood inlaid with ivory carving of birds, flowers and trees. The couch is covered with silks of the finest texture and in gaudy colors. The sleeping compartments are lighted with Chinese lanterns of silk hung at the outer entrance, while the light enters through gauze panels, hand painted and in forms of rosewood inlaid with ivory figures.

A table and dish made of highly polished ash, with exquisitely carved bamboo figures inlaid, are shown. The work is so artistically done that each article seems to have been made of one piece of wood.

There is also a large display of Chinese lanterns made of silk, gauze and other light material and some mode of beads artistically arranged with glass centers. The silk and gauze are beautifully hand painted.

There are models of some of the great Chinese temples, theaters and arches, showing elaborate carving in wood and ivory and two large elephant tusks exquisitely carved.

WHARFAGE FREE AT ST. LOUIS

Twenty Miles of River Front For Water Craft at World's Fair City.

Free wharfage will be given to all boats landing at St. Louis during the World's Fair. Traffic Manager Hilleary of the Exposition and Joseph P. Whyte, harbor and wharf commissioner of St. Louis, have decided on the locations assigned to the various kinds of boats.

Yachts, steam launches and all boats propelled by their own power have been assigned wharf space between Choteau avenue and Biddle street. These streets, running east and west, form the boundary lines for the central business district of the city.

House boats have been assigned wharf space north of Biddle street and south of Choteau avenue.

St. Louis has a river front of twenty miles. The Broadway line of the Transit company parallels the river from the city limits on the north to Jefferson Barracks on the south. At no point are the cars more than five blocks from the Mississippi river. The World's Fair may be reached for one fare by transferring to any of the eight lines that cross Broadway and reach the Exposition grounds.

No charge will be made for wharfage. Application for space should be made to the harbor and wharf commissioner at the City Hall, on Twelfth street, between Market street and Clark avenue.

Cost of Seeing the World's Fair.

From any point within 300 miles of St. Louis a person may travel to the World's Fair this year, view the wonders of the Exposition for three days and expend the some money he would pay in any other year for train fare alone. This is an absolute fact.

The Western Passenger Association has agreed on a ten day excursion rate, 250 miles or more from St. Louis, for one and one-fifth fare for the round trip.

Your Shadow.

"May your shadow never grow less" or "be less." That is a familiar salutation. The origin is dim, but may be as follows: When persons have made certain progress in the black arts they are compelled to run through a subterranean hall, with the evil one after them. If they run so fast that his Satanic majesty can catch only their shadow or part of it they become first rate magicians, but lose either all or part of their shadow. The expression means: May you escape wholly and entirely from the clutches of the foul fiend.

It is well known that after a man reaches the age of about fifty-five his stature grows shorter; therefore his shadow must be less. To say, "May your shadow never grow less," means, "May you never grow older."—New York Press.

The Two Kinds.

"Yes, but some people need to be headed off."—Cincinnati Tribune.

ON THE PARIS 'CHANGE.

A Place Among the Seventy Costs About Three Million Francs.

It may be said that a seat among the seventy (they call it a charge) costs about 3,000,000 francs ($600,000) or sometimes 2,500,000, and a charge earns from 5 to 15 per cent (net) a year, so that the annual profits are from $30,000 to $90,000, or more in exceptional years. But these are usually divided among several associates, for it rarely happens that an agent is the sole owner of his seat. More often he has paid for only half of it or a third of it and has three or four silent partners, who own the rest and who may again have subpartners; so that you will hear of a person owning an eighth or a sixteenth of a seat or even a thirty-second, these being simple investments that carry no rights or privileges on the bourse.

As to procuring a charge, the thing has none of the Stock Exchange simplicity, where the main requirement for getting a seat is to be able to pay for it. Here a candidate must be a Frenchman and at least twenty-five years old. He must have served four years in certain forms of business. He must be personally acceptable to the agent from whom he would purchase the seat and often to his family, including the ladies. He must be passed upon by the seventy with formal voting, as if he were joining some select club, which he is. There must be no stain on his business record and no slur on his personal character. A candidate was rejected recently for bad habits and another for no fault of his own, but because his brother had been concerned in questionable transactions. With all this favorably settled there is still needed the approval of the minister of finances and the sanction of the head of the government.—Cleveland Moffett in Century.

Leap Year Proposals.

The origin of the peculiar woman's right of leap year is said to date back to the fifth century. St. Bridget, so the story goes, was troubled because the women under her charge insisted on their right of proposing to the men. Accordingly she went to St. Patrick and begged him to settle the matter by fixing certain seasons in which women might take the initiative. St. Patrick promised them every seventh year, but then, pleased by the persuasive eloquence of St. Bridget, he said they should have the longest year in the calendar, and that was every fourth year, when February had an extra day.

So Long.

With respect to the origin of the familiar parting salute, "So long," there is a suggestion that it is derived from the Norwegian "Saa laenge," a common form of farewell, equivalent in meaning to "au revoir," and pronounced like "so long," with the "g" softened. There was a fair number of Norwegians among the settlers in America, to judge by names, and it is quite likely the phrase was picked up from them. It is in general use among the Dutch in South Africa.—London Globe.

The Tactful Barber.

"Do you shave yourself, sir?"

"None of your business."

"I was only going to say, sir, that it's done as well as any professional could do it."

That netted him an extra tip.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Ignorance is bold and knowledge reserved.—Thucydides.

He Wouldn't Miss Prayer.

When Professor Tucker was "Tutor" Tucker at Bowdoin college the bell rang for prayers at the chapel, as now, very early in the morning, and it was imperative upon tutors and pupils to respond. As a tutor Mr. Tucker was very popular, although very strict, and he was always prompt to take his place at the head of his class at the early morning devotions.

One morning, however, he found his clothing gone and his door nailed while the bell was ringing. Finding a hatchet he soon split the door down, and at the last stroke of the bell appeared, clothed in his shirt and a pair of overalls, barefooted, but with a smile of serenity on his expressive countenance. He took his customary place, and neither then nor afterward were words of complaint heard from him.

Resolved: That the people of Winsor Clearwater county Minnesota, at a mass meeting assembled, declare, That the proposition to bond Clearwater county to the extent of $35,000 for the purpose of erecting a court house is untimely and unwaranted. We are now burdened with heavy taxes, and a large increase in them would have the affect to force many people from the homes that they have struggled to make habitable. And be it furthur Resolved: That each and every voter of this part of the county, who is in accord with the foregoing resolution, make it a point to be at the special election to be held in his district relative to the bond question on the 14th of June 1904 and vote against the issue of said preposed bonds, and that he use all honerable means to induce others to vote against bonding Clearwate county in the sum preposed.—Andrew Johnson, Ch,

OYSTER FARMS.

The Natural and Artificial Beds In Eastern Virginia.

In eastern Virginia there are several thousand acres of oyster farms where oysters are raised by artificial methods on artificial beds. The natural oyster bed is where the oyster breeds and matures naturally. There are thousands of acres of such beds in the Chesapeake bay system of salt water. In such beds the oysters breed by the millions, and as they are too close together there they cannot all reach a satisfactory growth. If taken when small from these natural beds and strewn along on the bottoms where there are no oysters naturally, at the rate of 800 to 1,000 bushels per acre, such young oysters mature and ripen off for the market, some in one and the rest in two years.

There is a profit in such work when intelligently managed of 25 to [illegible] per cent. Probably more than 100,000 acres of artificial oyster beds are made to grow an oyster crop in addition to the acreage embraced in the natural beds. The area of artificial beds is increasing rapidly each year.

One singular feature about the oyster is this: They all look exactly alike, there being no difference between the male and the female externally or internally. In fact, the art of man is not sufficient to distinguish one sex from another. Another unique feature is this: The male oyster "lays" as many eggs as the female—"equal rights," we perceive. The eggs of the male are called milt, and the eggs of the female are called spawn. An ordinary full grown oyster is supposed to lay a million eggs a year. In spawning season the water is full of these eggs, and when the milt and the spawn come in contact and the water is at the right temperature life is imparted to the microscopic eggs, and it drops to the bottom, where, if it succeeds in grasping hold of something, such as another oyster or shell or rock or anything to hang on to, the tiny creature begins to form its shell and in a few weeks becomes visible to the eye.—Country Gentleman.

AN ELEPHANT TRAIT.

The Animal While Busy Will Never Injure a Person.

"An elephant never injures a person when it is busy," says an animal trainer with a big circus. "It may sound strange, but there is not a case on record of one getting ugly when it was performing or working. The reason, I think, is that the elephant is an animal of one idea—that is, it can think of only one thing at a time.

"When you put an elephant at work it gives its whole attention to its task. Great power of concentration? No. just inability to think of two things at once. When it gets busy it takes a lot to distract its attention, and it never stops to think about a private grievance. If we start a horse or a dog doing a trick we can't leave it for a minute or it will loaf or stop work altogether, but it is different with an elephant. Once get it started, either alone or with others, and it will go through with its turn without another word. It is absorbed in its work.

"That same trait, I take it, is what makes an elephant such a vicious animal when it gets ugly. It can think of nothing but what has made it angry, and it will not stop until it has torn something to pieces. Oh, yes, an elephant can carry a grudge. It never forgets an injury, and it waits its chance to get even, but when it is busy it forgets the tricks that have been played on it. It is only when it has nothing to do that it gets to brooding over its troubles. Human, eh? Well, I have known folk with that sort of disposition."

Simply Owful, That's All.

"Yes," said Mrs. Wordsworth, "the family is most interesting. John dances divinely, Tom sings like an angel, David is a famous footballer, Susanna paints with great taste."

"Also Henry?"

"Oh, Henry! Well, he's a rather dull sort of a fellow, you know. He only works and supports the others."—[illegible]

Not Fatal.

No Matter What Doctors Say—We Know That Heart Trouble in Many Cases Can Be Cured.

There are seven main features of heart disease, viz.: (1) Weakness or Debility; (2) Rheumatism or Neuralgia; (3) Valvular Disorder; (4) Leakage; (5) Enlargement; (6) Fatty Degeneration; (7) Dropsy.

Documentary evidence will prove thousands of so-called "incurables" have been absolutely cured by Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure.

Patients often have no idea their disease is heart trouble, but ascribe it to Indigestion, Liver Complaint, etc.

Here are some of the symptoms: Shortness of breath after exercise. Smothering Spells. Pain in Chest, left Shoulder and arm. Discomfort in Lying on one side. Fainting Spells. Nervous Cough. Swelling of Feet and Ankles. Paleness of Face and Lips. Palpitation. Nightmare. Irregular Pulse.

"I have great faith in Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and speak of its merits whenever opportunity presents. I can now go up and down stairs with ease, where three weeks ago I could hardly walk one block." One year later.—"I am still in good health; the Heart Cure did so much for me, that I find it a far greater medicine than you claimed it to be."—S. D. YOUNG, D. Shocked His Nation.

A somewhat striking story dealing with the now obsolete conventional suicide, "harikiri" or "happy dispatch," once common in Japan, is told by the French Admiral Gourdon. When he was a young man he had a comrade who, having assisted in the organizing of the Japanese navy, was subsequently raised to the rank of admiral in that force. He took the part of the tycoon against the mikado in the revolutionary war and, having been captured, was tried by court martial and sentenced to death, which in those days implied "harikiri." When, however, the fatal sword was presented to him he flatly refused to kill himself and declared that if he was to die somebody else must kill him. Threats and entreaties alike proved unavailing. He resolutely refused. The whole of Japan was scandalized at such abnormal behavior, which, however, saved his life. The Japanese penal code had never contemplated such a contingency as a man inhuman enough to refuse the "harikiri," and in the end he was banished from the country and returned to France.—St. James Gazette.

Coral.

The red coral which is used in jewelry and which is known as precious coral is mostly obtained in the Mediterranean, the Barbary coast furnishing the dark red, the shores of Sardinia furnishing the yellow, or salmon colored, variety and the coast of Italy the rose pink. Another club woman, Mrs. Haule, of Edgerton, Wis., tells how she was cured of irregularities and uterine trouble, terrible pains and backache, by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—A while ago my health began to fail because of female troubles. The doctor did not help me. I remembered that my mother had used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound on many occasions for irregularities and uterine troubles, and I felt sure that it could not harm me at any rate to give it a trial.

"I was certainly glad to find that within a week I felt much better, the terrible pains in the back and side were beginning to cease, and at the time of menstruation I did not have nearly as serious a time as heretofore, so I continued its use for two months, and at the end of that time I was like a new woman. I really have never felt better in my life, have not had a sick headache since, and weigh 20 pounds more than I ever did, so I unhesitatingly recommend your medicine."—MRS. MAY HAULE, Edgerton, Wis., Pres. Household Economics Club.

INVENTION AND INDUSTRY.

Municipally-owned plants furnish two-thirds of the electric lighting in Great Britain and only about five per cent. in the United States.

The importation of raisins, which formerly amounted to about 2,000,000 boxes a year, has been reduced to almost nothing by the California crop.

Immense quantities of sand equal to that imported from Turkey especially, for glass makers have, according to the Westminster Gazette, been discovered not far from London.

The Umschau claims for the newly invented process of milking cows by electricity (rubber caps being attached to the udders) the advantage of superior cleanliness, and adds that the cows more readily yield the milk than when the hands are used.

A machine has been invented which is capable of splitting wood two feet long and eighteen inches thick. It is run by a three-horse-power gasoline engine and consists of a huge knife which works through the knottiest wood at the rate of 60 strokes a minute.

Steps are being taken to develop valuable deposits of fullers' earth, near Buelah, Pueblo county, and near Akron, Washington county, in Colorado. The few deposits of this substance already located in the Centennial state are said to be among the purest found anywhere in the world.

One of the largest and most expensive mineral collections in existence, owned by John F. Campion, Leadville, Col., forms part of Colorado's mineral exhibit at the St. Louis world's fair. The collection is valued at $250,000, the bullion value alone being $80,000. It has never before been placed on exhibition.

A method of producing soft zinc has been patented in France. Equal parts of zinc and aluminum are melted, to which a small amount of bismuth is added to molten zinc until volatilization ceases. The zinc is heated to a temperature of from 900 degrees to 1,200 degrees Fahrenheit. It is stated that the soft zinc so produced is of 90 per cent. purity.

BOTH JAWS SHOT AWAY

Still a Successful Business Man.

A man who had both jaws shot away had trouble eating ordinary food but found a food-drink that supplies the nutriment needed. He says:

"I have been an invalid since the siege of Vicksburg, in 1866, where I was wounded by a Minie ball passing through my head and causing the entire loss of my jaws. I was a drummer boy and at the time was leading a skirmish line, carrying a gun. Since that time I have been awarded the medal of honor from the Congress of the United States for gallantry on the field.

"The consequences of my wound were dyspepsia in its most aggravated form and I finally proved ordinary coffee was very hard on my stomach so I tried Postum and got better. Then I tried common coffee again and got worse. I did this several times and finally as Postum helped me every time I continued to use it, and how often I think that if the Government had issued Postum to us in the Army how much better it would have been for the soldier boys than coffee.

"Coffee constipates me and Postum does not; coffee makes me spit up my food, Postum does not; coffee keeps me awake nights, Postum does not. There is no doubt coffee is too much of a stimulant for most people and is the cause of nearly all the constipation.

"This is my experience and you are at liberty to use my name." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Cattle Showing.

The cattle department of the state fair, according to Secretary E. W. Randall, will this year be better and bigger than ever.

Much of the success of the cattle department of the fair has been acquired because the larger breeders' associations of the country have made this fair one of regular official exhibits, and have donated regular premiums in addition to those offered by the society.

For the national shorthorn show a total of $4,500 in premiums is offered. This is open to the breeders of the world, and in addition there is a special $500 premium to be distributed among Minnesota breeders, besides several small premiums offered by patrons of the fair.

Premiums offered by the American Hereford Breeders' association are as liberal and comprehensive as those of the other association.

The cattle department has for many years been in charge of Col. Wm. M. Liggett, whose assistants this year will be George A. Cobb and Robert B. Liggett. Entries for the general cattle division close on August 15, but for the shorthorn exhibition on Aug. 1.

Big Fish.

A. G. Rutledge, local game warden, has been authorized by Sam F. Fullerton, executive agent for the game and fish commission, to secure specimens of muscallunge from Cass Lake, to be sent to the Louisiana Purchase exposition, showing the kind of large fish that inhabit the waters of Northern Minnesota. "Muskies" weighing from six pounds to thirty, and heavier, if possible to obtain them, will be taken from the lake, and will be sent, alive, to the exposition. Many of different weights have been taken from the lake with a hook and line this spring, and Mr. Rutledge is confident that he can procure the number required by the commission—16.

Old Liberty Bell.

A patronic welcome will Minneapolis give the Liberty Bell June 0.

If those in charge of the relic will permit its removal from the cars, it will be made the center of a parade, both civic and military in character. Or, if it cannot be removed from its car, another way is to have it switched to the tracks of the street railway, and paraded around the loop, where thousands may view it. If this is not permissionable, the parade will be made to pass around the bell while it rests at the station. The committee will ascertain as soon as possible whether the bell can be taken from its car.

Elliott Suicides.

His disordered mind overpowered by the knowledge that he was thought to have attempted the life of the president and by the persecutions he believed he had suffered, Peter O. Elliott, the Minneapolis man who sprang into prominence last fall when arrested in the White House with a loaded 38-caliber revolver in his pocket, committed suicide. His lifeless body was found dangling at the end of a 3-foot rope from the Short Line bridge near St. Paul.

Killed at Crossing.

One man passenger was killed and five others were slightly hurt by an Interurban electric railway car being crashed into a Northern Pacific engine at the crossing at Erie street SE. Minneapolis.

Andrew L. Jackson, who was killed outright, was badly mashed about the head and body. He lives at Bowdle, S. D., where he has a family of a wife and eight children. He boarded on Tenth street, and was about 50 years of age.

State Hay Lands.

The state of Minnesota is now selling its hay for 1904. "Grass stumpage" on land still held by the state is being disposed of by agents acting for the state auditor in the various counties. Many applications are coming in to the auditor's office, but as a rule they have to be referred back to local agents. Last year the state received $1,700 from this source.

News Notes.

Prominent musicians from all parts of the state will be in Duluth June 10, 17 and 18 to attend the Minnesota State Music Teachers' association.

A young man by the name of Swen Haugland, employed by Hoken Brunsven, a farmer near Cottonwood, was kicked by a horse, and as a result died of lockjaw.

The body of a newly born girl baby was found in the Cannon river. The body was lying on the bottom and to all appearances had not been long in the water.

Judge Gray, sitting at Mankato, has declared the Amboy Elevator company, a farmers' organization of Amboy, insolvent.

A special M. & St. L. train has been chartered by the Minnesota State Editorial association to carry its members on their annual outing to St. Louis to attend the fair and see the sights generally.

The frame railway station at Oakwood, about two miles east of the fish hatchery and near Highwood, was partially destroyed by fire.

The dry weather has caused apprehension among residents of Cass Lake, as the loose underbrush and grass in the woods are highly inflammable and the danger of forest fires is great. A fire was started about two miles west of Cass Lake, and Eugene F. Bruce, chief lumberman of the bureau forestry took a party of men with him to fight it.

Charles Wadena, son of a noted Indian chief of that name, died at the state reformatory at St. Cloud from consumption, according to a report received by the state board of control.

A Happy Mother.

Maple Hill, Ia., May 30.—A very remarkable case occurred here recently. The people here have never seen anything like it and it may interest many others.

From his infancy, Verne, the little five-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Barfoot, of this place, has been sickly. His mother consulted a doctor, but he did not begin to improve till some one suggested that she try a remedy called Dodd's Kidney Pills. From unmistakable symptoms she had always believed that his Kidneys were the first cause of all the trouble, so she bought a box of Dodd's Kidney Pills and began giving little Verne two pills a day. In two or three days she noticed an improvement and she kept on till he had used about two boxes when to her great joy, he was all right. Everybody remarks how much better Verne looks and Mrs. Barfoot always explains: "Dodd's Kidney Pills saved his life."

Woes of Matrimony.

"Of course," said the husband who made a specialty of manufacturing excuses, "the truth is bound to leak out some time."

"Yes," rejoined the other half of the matrimonial combine, "and I am inclined to believe that it leaked out of you long ago."—Chicago Daily News.

THE ROSEBUD INDIAN RESERVATION.

382,000 Acres of Fertile and Well Watered Lands Open to Settlement.

Some two years ago the Chicago & North-Western R'y built their Verdigre & Bonesteel line to the eastern border of the Rosebud Indian Reservation, thus securing the only direct line from Chicago, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Sioux City, Omaha and other points in the west to the fertile region which is now to be thrown open to settlement under the United States Homestead laws.

Under President Roosevelt's proclamation United States Registry Land Offices are to be opened July 5th at Yankton, Fairfax and Bonesteel, S. D., for the registration of applicants for these lands. The registration books will remain open until July 23d, and commencing July 28th, drawings will take place, to determine the order in which the applicants will be permitted to make final entry and settlement. The final entry begins at Bonesteel, August 8th. No one is permitted to register or make entry to land by mail, but must be personally present at one of the three points named for registration and at Bonesteel for final entry.

The lands are well watered by the Missouri, Niobrara and White rivers and are remarkably fertile, situated in the midst of the great corn belt of the Missouri Valley, where similar land is worth from $20 to $50 an acre. With an altitude of about 2,200 feet, they are in a region which cannot be excelled for healthfulness.

A heavy influx of people is looked for at these points of registration, and everything possible is being done by the North-Western Line to spread broadcast all information that is of interest to applicants for these lands.

Complete maps and folders have been issued and are being distributed free on application to the representatives of the Passenger Department.

Professional Ride.

"Why, your flying machine won't even leave the ground!" said the man who had been induced to observe the experiment.

"Well," answered the inventor, after some reflection, "my machine may not be as much of a traveler as some of the others, but it's a heap safer."—Washington Star.

Elegant Train Service of the Nickel Plate Road.

The thorough development and maintenance of the up-to-date passenger service of the Nickel Plate Road leaves nothing to be desired by people who travel. Ladies traveling alone or accompanied by children will appreciate the clean and well lighted coaches, made so by the corps of colored porters in uniform who attend the wants of both first and second-class passengers without extra charge. The dining car service of the Nickel Plate Road has become very popular with the patrons on the line and one of pride to the management. This service is conducted under the system of individual club meals. Carefully prepared menus are compiled into booklets, containing suggestions for breakfast, luncheon or supper that will not cost you more than thirty-five cents and on up to one dollar, which is the limit, hence the disbursement may wait for the appetite. Meals are also served "a la Carte." As no excess fare is charged on any train, it will be to your advantage to purchase your tickets via the Nickel Plate Route, where rates are lower than via any other line.

Doubtful Compliment.

Poultney Bigelow, who has accepted the chair of foreign relations at Boston university, had completed an address before the Twentieth Century club of Chicago. A young man congratulated Mr. Bigelow rather awkwardly on this address, and the learned traveler replied:

"That is a doubtful compliment. It reminds me of a remark that a friend of the groom's made at a New Hampshire wedding.

"This friend, an observant chap, watched the groom closely during the ceremony, and at the end bore down on the happy man, shook him warmly by the hand, and said:

"'Bill, ye done good. I had an idee ye would be skittish while ye wuz bein' tied up, but, begosh, ye looked as bold as a sheep.'"—Washington Post.

DOCTOR ADVOCATED OPERATION—PE-RU-NA MADE KNIFE UNNECESSARY.

MRS. EVA BARTHO, 133 East 12th St., New York City, N. Y., writes:

"I suffered for three years with leucorrhea and ulceration of the womb. The doctor advocated an operation which I dreaded very much, and strongly objected to go under it. Now I am a changed woman. Peruna cured me; it took nine bottles, but I felt so much improved I kept taking it, as I dreaded an operation so much. I am to-day in perfect health and have not felt so well for fifteen years."—Mrs. Eva Bartho.

Mrs Senator Roach, of Larimore, N. Dak.; Mrs. Senator Warren, of Cheyenne, Wyo.; Belva Lockwood and Mrs. General Longstreet, of Washington, D. C., are among the prominent ladies who indorse Peruna.

Miss Helen Rolof, Kaukauna, Wis., writes:

"Several times during the past two years or more my system has been greatly in need of a tonic, and at those times Peruna has been of great help in building up the system, restoring my appetite and securing restful sleep."—Helen Rolof.

Miss Muriel Armitage, 36 Greenwood Ave., Detroit, Mich., District Organizer of the Royal Templars of Temperance, writes as follows:

"I suffered for five years with uterine irregularities, which brought on hysteria and made me a physical wreck. I tried doctors from the different schools of medicine, but without any perceptible change in my condition. In my despair I called on an old nurse, who advised me to try Peruna, and promised good results if I would persist and take it regularly. I kept this up for six months, and steadily gained strength and health, and when I had used fifteen bottles I considered myself entirely cured. I am a grateful, happy woman to-day."—Miss Muriel Armitage.

Miss Lucy M. Riley, 33 Davenport St., Cleveland, Ohio, writes:

"I wish to add my indorsement to thousands of other women who have been cured through the use of Peruna. I suffered for five years with severe backache, and when weary or worried in the least I had prolonged headache. I am now in perfect health, enjoy life and have neither an ache or pain, thanks to Peruna."—Lucy M. Riley.

MRS. EVA BARTHO.

It is no longer a question as to whether Peruna can be relied on to cure all such cases. During the many years in which Peruna has been put to test in all forms and stages of acute and chronic catarrh no one year has put this remedy to greater test than the past year.

TEA MADE BY MACHINERY.

The Processs Is Carried On by Ingenious Clockwork—Appreciated by Early Risers.

A device for making a cupful of tea by clockwork has been brought out by en English firm. In that country tee is more of a breakfaet beverege then in this, and this epparatus is designed for such persons as want the tee-making operation to he started at the earliest possible moment, and for the operation to proceed while tbe arrangement of the toilet is being made, says tha Pittsburg Dispatch.

The principal feature of this epperetus is the alarm clock, which not only gives the waking signal, but also starts the tea brewing. The clock is connected with a spirit lemp, eo that when the alarm goes off it releases a shutter which covers tbe spirit lamp, and as it flies back the shutter strikes a match—duly pleced for tbe purpose—which lights the lamp, and thus heats the water in tbe kettle. As soon as this water boils a deft errangement of wires causes the kettle to tilt, and pour its contests into the pot set ready to receive it, the same action ringing a little gong to annonnce tbe pouring out of the water, and also automatically extinguishing the lamp. Tbe alarm can he set for any time desired, the result following as a matter of course.

Only those who have had to start at very early hours for a jonrney or for work can fully appreciate the luxury of this littia machine, which will hoth call one at the proper time and have a hot cupful of tea ready for one ae one rises. It just makes all the difference. As ths machina ia provided with a small and convenient traveling case, it is perfectly portahle, and thua will come in handy for all sorts of purposes.

DINE ONLY WHEN HUNGRY.

This Writer Says Eating When Nature Does Not Crave Food Is Highly Injurious.

A prolific cause of chronic indigestion is eating from hahit end simply because it is meal time end others ere eeting, eeye a writer in Hygienic Magazine. To eat when not hungry is to eat without relish, and food taken without relish is worse than wasted. Without relish the salivary glands do not act, the gastric fluids are not freely secreted, and the best of foode will not be digested. Many perfectly harmless dishes are severely condemned for no other reason than they were given perfunctorily and without relish and due insalivation.

Hunger makes the plainest foode enjoyable. It causes vigorous secretion and outpouring of all the digestive fluids—the sources of ptyalin, pepsin, trypsin, etc., without a plentiful supply of which no foods cen be perfectly digested.

Weit for an appetite if it takes a week. Fasting is one of the saving graces. It has a spiritual significance only through its great physical and physiologic importance. If breakfast is a hore or lunch a matter of indifference cut one or both of them out. Wait for distinct and unmistakahle hunger, and then eat slowly. If you do this you need ask few questions as to the propriety and digestibility of what you eat, and it need not be predigested!

Women Clerks in Meat Markets.

Five hundred women are employed in the provision stores in New York, cutting meat and waiting on customers. They are as ekillful as men, and their employers say that they attract custom because of their neat appearance. They wear black gowns and long white aprons. The most difficult thing they have to learn is not to wipe their hands on their aprons after cutting a slice of meat. One woman, after cleaning her hands on a towel hehind her block, remarked to a customer: "It took ma two weeks to remember that."

THE GATE OF MUKDEN.

THROWN UPON THE STAGE.

How English Audiences Reward Popular Players With Gifts.

There have lately in the provinces been several sensational nights at prominent theaters when to mark the last performance of a local pantomime all manner of gifts have been thrown upon the stage for the benefit of popular performers.

All those acquainted for long with the inner life of the theatrical profession can tell some remarkable stories of these gifts cast upon the stage. The most celebrated and universal of these relates to a lady who once held the main portion of the lease of a prominent London theater. While this lady was still an actress only and not a manageress, an actress of great talent and beauty, there was one night on the first production of the piece a small bouquet cast upon the stage at her feet. Attached to the bouquet was a small Russia leather card case, and inside this were bank notes to the value of £1,000 exactly. On no fewer than seven different occasions, with a tolerably long interval between, did the same thing occur, and the lady, as alleged, has never from that day to this discovered who her admirer was, though all manner of romantic conjectures were made at the time.

Even within the last few weeks an unknown elderly gentleman threw an envelope weighted with pennies and containing a five pound note to a tiny child performing in a London suburban pantomime. Some theaters have been celebrated for their gift nights, all manner of presents, from frying pans to green vegetables, having been gently deposited on the stage for the popular actors; yet, on the other hand, both writs and summonses have been handed to actors who could not be approached through the stage door, but who consented to receive presents over the footlights on their benefit nights.

The most curious sight the writer ever saw in connection with these gift throwing nights was in relation to a favorite actor who, at a great provincial theater, played during a long pantomimic run the part of a parasite named Cadger, who carried a pipe that had a huge bowl and whose oft repeated cry was, "Can any one oblige me with a bit o' 'bacca?" On the last night of the performance the familiar request for a "bit o' 'bacca" had no sooner been spoken than literally scores of packets and "screws" of tobacco of every imaginable kind were thrown upon the stage, more than 120 of these falling about the actor.—London Tit-Bits.

His Present.

"[illegible]," she said, "your little wifey has been saving up her money to buy you a nice present."

"Good little wifey," he replied. "What is it?"

"A smoking jacket," she explained, "and I saved the money all myself out of the house allowance. Wasn't I economical?"

"Splendid!" he exclaimed.

"And now I wish you'd bring me home some more money tonight."

"What did you do with what I brought home last night?" he asked in some surprise.

"Oh, that's what I saved the smoking jacket money out of," she answered, "and there wasn't any left."—Chicago Post.

Not to Be Hushed.

Bishop Littlejohn of Long Island, who died at the age of ninety, refused up to the day of his death to accept the assistance of a coadjutor bishop, declaring that he was perfectly able to perform his duties and care for his people. At a meeting of the clergy in the last year of his life Archdeacon Bryan was requested to call the meeting to order. The archdeacon arose and requested the delegates to give attention, remarking:

"The bishop wishes to say a few words."

"A few words, sir; a few words!" interjected the bishop. "I would have it understood, sir, that the bishop will say as many words as he pleases."

His Problematic Year.

"Did you ever appear in a problem play?"

"Yes," answered Mr. Stormington Barnes. "Last season I was doing sums with board bills, time tables and box office statements all the time I was out."—Washington Star.

ALL THE STATES AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.

Many Beautiful Pavilions and Pretentious Buildings Show Forth the Enterprise of American Commonwealths.

A beautiful city has grown up among the trees on the World's Fair grounds at St. Louis. It has nothing to do with the immense exhibit palaces, but is a thing apart. The houses in this new city are of various styles of architecture. Some are palatial in size and appearance, while others look merely cozy and inviting. Never before have so many notable and historic buildings been constructed in one group. This new city might be called the City of the States, for the houses included in it are the state buildings at the Fair.

The city is not compact, but somewhat straggling, as befits the picturesqueness of the view. Yet there is nothing suggestive of a Stringtown-on-the-Pike about this city, for the grounds surrounding each of the houses are beautified with gardens typical of the state represented.

All the states are to be represented at the World's Fair. This means a great deal, a shining triumph for the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, and furnishes another illustration of the fact that this Exposition's completeness is the marvel of the age.

Fifty-one states, territories and possessions of the United States have taken the steps necessary to participate in the World's Fair on an important scale. But two states were still outside the fold at the last report, and in each of these was a well defined movement in favor of being represented at the Fair with buildings and exhibits. New Hampshire, the old home state, and Delaware are the states referred to. In New Hampshire a fund for participation is being raised privately by patriotic citizens, so that in the event of legislative inaction this commonwealth may be represented.

The states and territories are expending over $7,000,000 in their efforts to show off to best advantage at the Exposition. This is a million and a third more than was expended at the Chicago exposition by the states. In addition to this, large cities in many states will have municipal exhibits, the funds for which are not included in these figures. The municipal exhibit idea is entirely novel. From a number of the states there will be prominent county exhibits provided by special appropriation of county funds.

This City of the States presents a picture of surpassing beauty. Nature has done much to aid in the creation of the picture. Never before has any exposition been able to grant such advantageous sites for state buildings. The buildings are situated on a plateau about seventy-five feet higher than the level ground to the north upon which stand the main exhibit palaces. There are hills and ravines here and there, enabling the landscapists to lay out a most delightful pattern of roads and terraces and lawns.

The smallest of the state buildings is that of Arizona, which stands near the southeastern entrance to the grounds. One of the largest is that of Missouri, from the dome of which it is said that perhaps the very finest view of the Exposition may be enjoyed. This building is a palace in the Italian renaissance architecture, built at a cost of $105,000. Near by is the reproduction of the Cabildo at New Orleans, in which the Louisiana Purchase transfer ceremonies took place—Louisiana's state building. Ohio has a clubhouse of highly ornate design, in the architecture of the French renaissance. Illinois is prominent with a most pretentious structure, with wide verandas and a commanding cupola.

A description of each of the state buildings, with any detail, would more than fill a newspaper page. It is only possible here to hint at some of the interesting structures. California, for instance, has reproduced in exact size the famous old La Rabida Mission. Connecticut presents a replica of the Sigourney residence at Hartford, home of the poetess Lydia Huntley Sigourney in her time. This building is said to be the finest specimen of purely colonial architecture now standing. The New Kentucky Home, from the Blue Grass State, is a handsome clubhouse that would make some of the mansions along Fifth avenue, New York city, look insignificant. Beauvoir, the quaint old house which Jefferson Davis owned and occupied for many years, is reproduced by Mississippi. Its wide verandas or galleries give it a most inviting appearance. Washington's headquarters at Morristown, N. J., are reproduced by New Jersey. Virginia contributes Monticello, the home of Thomas Jefferson.

The state of Washington contributes a structure of unique design. It is called the Wigwam, five stories high, built of wood from Washington forests. The building is octagonal, with gigantic diagonal timbers rising from the ground and meeting in an apex ninety feet in the air, above which is built an observatory, from which a splendid view of the Exposition may be had. An elevator will carry visitors to the observatory.

New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Arkansas, Colorado, West Virginia, Indiana, Wisconsin, Texas and many other states are represented by buildings which cannot fail to arouse admiration. The Texas building is in the shape of a five pointed star, an appropriate idea for the big Lone Star State. Iowa has a magnificent mansion with classic porticoes and a central tower containing an observatory chamber. Kansas, Indian Territory and Oklahoma each uphold the growing reputation of the southwest for enterprise and fertility of resources.

JAPANESE PROVERBS.

The error of a minute, the sorrow of a lifetime.

After having tasted bitterness one becomes a man.

It is more difficult to keep a fortune than to make one.

The life of an old man is like a lighted candle in a draft.

It is easier to find a thousand recruits than one general.

The capital and the fireside have each their own attractions.

Before we can sympathize with others we must have suffered ourselves.

Do not be slaves to your children. They will have their happiness later.

The wise man shapes himself according to circumstances, as water takes the shape of the vessel into which it is poured.

A Hard Problem.

"Is this Mme. Pompon?" breathlessly inquired a man who had climbed several flights of stairs and been admitted into a darkened parlor. "It is," replied the stately personage whom he addressed. "The famous clairvoyant and fortune teller?" "The same." "Do you read the mind?" "With perfect ease." "Can you foretell the future?" "The future holds no mysteries that I cannot unravel." "Can you unfold the past?" "The record of all things past is to me an open book." "Then," said the caller, feverishly, taking from his pocket a handful of silver, "I wish you would tell me what it is that my wife wanted me to bring home without fail this evening and name your price. Money is no object."

His Persistency Triumphs.

"I wrote you," she said, "to call and get your letters, which you did. Then you immediately wrote me another. I can't understand it."

"Why, then I had another one to call and get, didn't I?" he returned.

Then, seeing there was only one way to get rid of him, she promised to marry him.—Chicago Post.

He Knew It.

"Ah, Mr. Frankly," exclaimed Miss Gusher, "your secrets are so beautiful! You are surely the great [illegible]."

"That's what," replied Frankly, who disliked argument. "You can't get up a debate with me on that point."—Philadelphia Ledger.

No Quarter.

A farmer tells of an old Irishman in his employ whom he once permitted to make use of certain land for farming purposes on condition that Pat should give him one-fourth of the crop he raised. At the harvesting of the crop the farmer was amazed to find the Irishman had not kept his part of the agreement, for while he hauled away three wagon loads of produce he had not sent a single load to his master's barn. The farmer called Pat's attention to the fact that he had taken the entire crop, asking: "Now, how's that, Pat? Wasn't I to receive a fourth of the crop?" "You was, sir, you was," excitedly exclaimed the Irishman, "but there's only three loads, sir; only three loads."

Unique California Map.

A unique exhibit at the World's Fair was prepared by the agricultural department of the University of California. It is a large map, so colored as to show the character of the various soils of the state. It gives a clear idea of the situation and the extent of the arable and untillable sections. In the localities that cannot be cultivated are shown the Sierras, the lava beds and the desert. The map indicates the location of the cultivable portions of the mountains and Mohave plateau and shows the nature of the foothills and valleys of that wonderful state.

A Serious Offense.

Mr. Banks had acquired a dictatorial manner in his youth, and it had grown with his years. When he gradually became nearsighted, he refused to wear glasses and held other people responsible for any difficulties into which his failing sight led him. One day he clutched by the coat sleeve a man who was hurrying past him on the street.

"I want a word with you, Mr. Griggs," he said sharply. "I will detain you only a moment."

"My name is not Griggs. You have made a mistake," said the man.

"Your name isn't Griggs?" said Mr. Banks, still detaining the stranger and peering into his face. "I should like to know why not?"

A General Thought.

"I tell you, I'll be master of my house when I'm a man!" said little Bennie.

"That's what your father thought when he was your age, Bennie," replied the boy's mother.

Saved by A Trifle

How a Hunter Miraculously Escaped From a Desperate Situation.

In a Fight With a Bear His Rifle Jammed as the Beast Was Upon Him—Shot Just In Time.

This is a story of how a huntsman led by a bloodhound stalked a huge black bear through the thickets of the Canadian woods and how, when he finally came upon the bear in a clearing, possession of a button hook enabled him to unlock a jammed gun in time to send home the fatal shot when the angry beast was about to dash him to pieces. The huntsman, unable to obtain a competent guide and knowing but little of Canadian woodcraft, had about determined to abandon the pursuit of the Ursus americanus for the trout with which the streams of the backwoods abound when one morning there came to his quarters a farmer who said that a big black bear had eaten one of his sheep overnight and that the animal had crossed the road a hundred yards ahead of him while [illegible] that morning.

THE BEAR CHARGED FURIOUSLY.

All thought of trout vanished from the huntsman's mind. Accompanied by the farmer, he went to a sawmill owner not far away and hired a ferocious bloodhound.

The three proceeded to the spot where the bear had crossed the road, and the bloodhound picked up the scent. On through a thicket of underbrush, composed chiefly of raspberry, cane and bramble vines, the hound showed the way at a hot pace. Scratched and bleeding, with his clothes torn nearly from his back, the farmer, after following the trail for a few miles, flung himself exhausted on a mossy bank, willing that the huntsman and hound should bring the game to quarry.

Off at right angles, through a bramble break, over a clearing around a big alder swamp, the hound claimed the line. Apparently the scent was getting hotter and hotter, and Boowin as the dog was called, fretted more and more, biting at his lead and pulling the hunter along so fast that, winded and torn, he felt like turning back and joining the farmer, stretched out on the cool stream bank.

At the approach to another clearing the huntsman saw a swarm of bees buzzing around a spruce fir tree stump and pawing the stump the big black bear. For a few minutes he stood watching the animal helping himself with his monster paw to the rich stores of wild honey deposited in the trunk. Then, with a mighty lunge, the dog broke loose and, snarling and growling, made for the animal. The bear turned, rose on his haunches and, grunting angrily, shambled toward the clump of blueberry bushes where the hunter was kneeling. The hound snapped fiercely at his heels.

Taking steady aim, the hunter fired at the big brute's heart. The bullet went high, and, infuriated by a wounded shoulder, the bear crashed down upon the thicket. Another shot also [illegible]. Opening the breech of his rifle hastily to reload, the marksman found to his dismay that both the empty cartridge cases had jammed.

The situation was desperate. The hunter could almost feel the breath of the maddened bear in his face. He had left his extractor behind, but fortunately thought of a button hook he had in his pocket. With this he forced the jammed case from one chamber and thrust in a fresh cartridge. Taking quick aim between the bear's eyes, he blazed away just as the animal, with blood streaming from mouth and nostril, was about to spring upon him. The bear lurched and dropped dead at the huntsman's feet.

"ORIGIN OF PLUM DUFF."

How a Famous Dish of English Sailors Got Its Name.

There are many traditions respecting the origin of the name "plum duff," the great holiday dish of sailors. No feast on shipboard is considered perfect without it. According to the story given in the history of the British navy, an English brig in the south Pacific was caught in a series of frightful hurricanes. All on board were anxious to reach a port in time for Christmas, but the holiday found them still off the Navigator islands. Worst of all, they had shipped a sea that carried away the henhouse containing a few chickens. When the cook saw the Christmas dinner floating in the lee scuppers and in danger of going overboard he made a gallant charge down the slippery, sloping deck to recover it, but at that moment a great wave rose high over the bulwarks, broke with resistless fury on the very spot where he stood, and when it subsided cook and chickens had both disappeared.

This unfortunate accident left the crew not only without a Christmas dinner, but without any one to prepare an ordinary meal. The sailors were heartily sick of "hard tack" and remembered with longing the famous plum pudding of merry England. They determined that somehow they must have a Christmas pudding and drew lots as to who should be the cook.

The choice fell on the boatswain's mate, a brawny son of the Emerald Isle. In the galley he found an old cookbook. This he solemnly pored over in search of something promising, but for lack of skill or materials found nothing he dared venture upon. At last he settled upon a recipe which began, "Make a stiff dough." When he reached the word dough he said to himself, "If r-o-u-g-h spells ruff, d-o-u-g-h spells duff."

So he made the pudding, putting in some fine Malaga raisins, and served it out with a generous quantity of rich sauce. The sailors hailed it with delight and appreciation. "What d'ye call it?" they asked. "Plum duff" said the proud cook. And plum duff it has remained from that day to this.—Manchester Times.

Speaking and Stopping.

The knowledge of when to sit down is invaluable to public speakers and to their audiences. Perhaps the best plan is to secure a candid friend who will pull you down by your coattails. A man "on his legs" is one with whom time gallops; he has spoken for half an hour, and to him it seems but five minutes. The excitement of the brain suggests new and ever new ideals, and the extemporary talker in the pulpit or after a public dinner flounders in pursuit of these will-o'-the-wisps through swamps and thickets of bad grammar haunted by the anacolouthon and other fearful wild fowl. In the pulpit there is no man to pull the preacher down, and many are his "two words more, my brethren." After public dinners a bored audience begins to talk and laugh, but these symptoms of disapproval are not marked by the self absorbed public speaker. In short, the knowledge of when to sit down is rare and hard to acquire.—Longman's.

Thought She Couldn't Live.

Moravia, N. Y., June 6.—Mr. Benjamin Wilson, a highly respected resident of this place, came very nearly losing his wife and now that she is cured and restored to good health his gratitude knows no bounds. He says:—

"My wife has suffered everything with Sugar Diabetes. She has been sick four years. She doctored with two good doctors but kept growing worse. The doctors said she could not live. She failed from 200 pounds down to 130 pounds. This was her weight when she began to use Dodd's Kidney Pills, and now she weighs 190, is well and feeling stronger every day.

"She used to have Rheumatism so bad that it would raise great bumps all over her body and this is all gone too.

"Dodd's Kidney Pills are a God-send to those who suffer as my wife did. They are all that saved her. We can't praise them enough."

The Engines of War.

At a dinner during the Franco-German war Disraeli did not open his mouth till near the end of the entertainment, when he observed in his most sententious manner: "The French embarked in this war because they conceived that they had the superiority in arms of precision; they had the chassepot and they had the mitrailleuse (which he pronounced "mitraillouse"); but of the third engine, called a man, they did not possess even a single specimen." This said, he relapsed into perfect silence.—From the Diary of Sir Mountstuart Grant Duff.

TURN OVER TIME

When Nature Hints About Food.

When there's no relish to any food and all that one eats doesn't seem to do any good then is the time to make a turn over in the diet, for that's Nature's way of dropping a hint that the food isn't the kind required.

"For a number of years I followed railroad work, much of it being office work of a trying nature. Meal times were our busiest and eating too much and too quickly of food such as is commonly served in hotels and restaurants, these together with the sedentary habits were not long in giving me dyspepsia and stomach trouble which reduced my weight from 205 to 160 pounds.

"There was little relish in any food and none of it seemed to do me any good. It seemed the more I ate the poorer I got and I was always hungry before another meal, no matter how much I had eaten.

"Then I commenced a fair trial of Grape-Nuts and was surprised how a small saucer of it would carry me along strong and with satisfied appetite, until the next meal, with no sensations of hunger, weakness or distress as before.

"I have been following this diet now for several months and my improvement has been so great all the others in my family have taken up the use of Grape-Nuts with complete satisfaction and much improvement in health and brain power.

"American people undoubtedly eat hurriedly, have lots of worry, thus hindering digestion and therefore need a food that is predigested and concentrated in nourishment." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

THE MAKING OF A SKEPTIC.

When father had his picture took he had a winnin' smile,
Jes' like an angel whispered to him every little while;
He wore a stand-up collar and a buttonhole bouquet,
An' looked the fam'ly over in a kind an' patient way.
Like nothin' ever riled him. None who saw him would have said
He'd have the heart to take a strap to me out in the shed.
The photograph can never do full justice to the look
That father's face had on the day he got his picture took.

But when we got back home it wasn't any time at all
Till father smoked his pipe an' left his coat out in the hall,
An' looked as fierce as anything, an' started in to scold
Because the steak was tough an' everything was gettin' cold.
I tell you it was somethin' most discouragin' an' strange
To see his disposition undergo so great a change.
I wish we could arrange it every day, by hook or crook,
To have him take a trip to town an' get his picture took.

So when I see the portrait of a statesman, lookin' grave,
Or of some military man a-standin' up so brave,
Or of some actress lady, with a sweet an' tender smile,
Or of some financier, with an expression free from guile,
Or of some scientific man, a-looking calmly wise,
Or of a violinist, with his hair down in his eyes,
Or of some literary chap a-bendin' o'er a book,
I think about the day that father got his picture took.

BURYING BANQUO'S GHOST

By
F. H. LANCASTER

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

HER husband's friend had been making a series of severe remarks anent the inkspot upon her finger, her flushed face, disordered hair and several sheets of scattered manuscript:

"'Ye cannot serve two masters,' and it is my duty as your friend and his friend to tell you so plainly. And I must say that it seems to me that this inspiration—I believe that is the word you literary people use—this love of scribbling, could be easily buried beneath love of husband and home."

"It is not an easy something to bury beneath anything," the young wife objected, "or rather, like Banquo's ghost, it refuses to stay in the ditch."

"Rises at the feast and mars it, eh? Well, I'm sorry for you—I am sorry for you both." Severe gray eyes looked down critically into bothered brown ones, and her husband's friend smiled loftily. "Well, I've said all that I feel justified in saying. Good-by, dear child. I suppose you know what generally happens when a man begins to feel himself neglected?"

Helen murmured that she did and watched the erect figure sweep down the garden path. "Go," she quoted softly, "'and stand not upon the order of your going'." Then she sat down to think. Was she neglecting Dick, the dear old darling? Conscience came a ready accuser. Last evening she had written from tea until bedtime. True, he had seemed to be enjoying his paper, but he was so kind and patient, so strong and forceful, and so much older than she. Of course he wouldn't complain. And this was not the first time it had happened. "Oh," with a thrill of uneasiness, "he might just as well have gone on being an old bachelor." Then, with quick self-reproach, "I should be ashamed. I am. It is silly. My stories never amount to anything anyway. Half the things I write are rejected. Why can't I bury this ghost that is haunting our feast and keep it buried?" She dropped her head into her hands. It would be hard to foreswear scribbling—how hard only those who have scribbled know—and she shrank from making a resolution that she might not be strong enough to keep. But as his step, with a tired sound to it, struck the stair she started up, seized the scattered sheets and thrust them into the grate.

"'It is concluded,'" she muttered, whimsically, "'Banquo, thy soul's flight if it find heaven, must find it out to-night'."

"Oh, Dick, dear, I am so glad you have come. I have just been planning one of those cosy, chatty little evenings like we used to have when we were first married."

"Sure, sweetheart?" Dick said, cordially, but his spirit groaned. He had just been planning a repetition of last evening. Peace and pipe and paper, with his little wife scribbling happily at his elbow. It rested him to lean back and smoke and watch the light as it came and went in her dear young face. It is so much easier, this silent presence, when one is tired. But Helen was saying:

"Or if you feel like reading aloud I'll find some fancywork." Dick was delighted, of course, and after the tea table was cleared and the curtains drawn, he took down a book and began to read like a little man. Helen listened with conscientious alertness. Frequently, at the suggestive turn of a phrase the ghost would arise and sit down in the chair opposite; but looking at her dear boy's tired face and feeling the weariness in his voice, she found it easy to order her Banquo back beneath the sod.

"I will hem those sheets to-morrow," she reflected exultingly, "and make a pair of pillow shams. I must not try to read. That would be a regular pickax for letting the ghost out. Poor fellow, I wonder if he has been feeling neglected."

And the next day and the next, Dick, no longer neglected, came wearily home to read aloud until he began to think wistfully of bachelor days. At last the inevitable evening came that brought the despairing question:

"What has become of your writing, little woman?"

"Oh, I don't know," Helen replied hurriedly. Just then she was longing for her "writing" with all her soul, and this abrupt entrance of the ghost shook her like a second Macbeth.

Dick looked down with kindly, humorous eyes.

"Never mind," he consoled. "'Angels are bright still, though the brightest fell.'"

"Oh, please don't quote Macbeth!" She got up hastily and walked to the window. If she could only tell Dick all about it. But of course she mustn't. This sacrifice, like most of the sacrifices women make for men, must be kept a dark secret. The pathetic part about it being in this case, as in most similar cases, that the man, had he known, would have been quick to repudiate the sacrifice. But not knowing, it so chanced that in the long days that followed big, kind-hearted Dick had the role of selfish brute thrust upon him and watched the restless light take possession of his little wife's heretofore happy brown eyes, without for a moment suspecting that his supposed sensitiveness was at the bottom of all her bother. He imagined, as any other sane man would have done, that she had met with some discouraging rebuff that had turned her heart against her favorite fad. But he scarcely expected her heart to stay turned and he certainly did not approve of that jaded air. For Helen was suffering the same sensation that induced Macbeth to complain:

"Methought I heard a voice cry sleep no more."

Had not she, too, murdered her best friend? That stanch ally that had borne with her the brunt of so many battles? Small wonder that she could not sleep. Ghosts ever walk by night. Yet she had no thought of giving over the attempt to keep the ghost underground. She shook her head at the free glad thoughts that came clamoring for perpetuation and shut her eyes against pen-pictures praying to be put on paper. With all the might of resolution she closed her heart against the tempting intoxication of that exquisite self-abandonment—"The clean, strong joy of creating"—which once known is agony to forego.

But the incessant fight wearied her, and it was with a last flicker of her old whimsical fun that she put up the prayer:

"'With some sweet oblivious antidote cleanse the stuffed bosom of that perilous stuff which weighs upon the heart.'"

And presently the plot began to thicken, for the cook took a hand. Helen, having found sheets and shams a sorry substitute for studies, went in vehemently for housekeeping, prowling about the pantry, fidgeting over closet shelves and cleaning of cutlery, concocting incredible cakes to be cried over in private, but blamed upon cook in public—the upshot being, that cook, exasperated, gave notice.

It was at this unlucky crisis that Dick, noting the worried wrinkles upon the brow that was once serene and thoughtful, put down his coffee with the query:

"Don't you think, Helen, that you should do less fancy work and—er—read more?"

"I can't," she replied briefly.

Dick took a prospective glance at a long line of reading-aloud-evenings and felt that the time had come to set aside delicacy of feeling and dread of intruding.

"Why can't you?" he insisted, and poor, tormented Helen answered tartly:

"Because I'm 'letting I dare not wait upon I would like the poor cat i' the adage'!"

"Why, Helen!"

"Oh, I didn't mean to be sharp. I—"

Dick laid a hand on either shoulder and looked down steadily into her troubled eyes.

"Do you know," he said gently, "I used to have a little wife that scribbled out all her frets and worries, and she was such a jolly little wife?" He took a pad of white paper from his pocket, also a fountain pen and a beautifully sharpened lead pencil, and laid them impressively side by side upon the table. Then he kissed her between her bothered brown eyes and went out quickly.

Helen sank back in her chair with an uncertain little laugh.

"Why, he'd rather I did!" From some odd corner memory brought the line: "I've scotched the snake, not killed it," and she laughed exultingly. "I haven't even scotched it." Then suddenly sitting up, "But, O Lord Osiris, whose feet are upon the crocodiles, what a title that would be: 'A Scotched Snake!'"

When Dick came home that evening he found flushed cheeks and roughened hair, flying pencil and scattered sheets of manuscript; and settled himself contentedly to pipe and paper murmuring tenderly:

"'Lay on Macduff, and damned be him who first cries "Hold, enough!"'"

Jewels in St. Pierre Ruins.

Capt. Delano, of the steamship Hawaiian, reached Philadelphia recently from Hilo and entertained a group of friends with a description of Mont Pelee, St. Pierre and Martinique as they are to-day. The volcano is now entirely extinct, he says, and the place has come to be very attractive to tourists, hundreds of whom visit the scene of one of the world's greatest tragedies every day. He states that the search for jewels and money continues in the ruins, and will, in his opinion, until every house site on the island has been raked over a score of times. The once beautiful city of St. Pierre is now a graveyard.

Sparrows, it has been observed, will gaze at their plumage in mirrors for hours together if undisturbed.

Sleeping Car Service to World's Fair.

On June 1st the Minneapolis & St. Louis inaugurated another through sleeping car between the Twin Cities and St. Louis, which is evidence of the increasing popularity of the through St. Louis service established by that line a little more than a year ago. The new car is of Pullman's best, and leaves St. Paul on train No. 2, 9:00 a. m. daily except Sunday, Minneapolis 9:35 a. m., arriving at St. Louis Union Depot 7:15 a. m. following morning.

As with the through sleeping car now running on No. 6, "The North Star Limited," the above service will be very popular and convenient for World's Fair visitors. The train will arrive at World's Fair Station (opposite main entrance to the grounds) at 7:00 a. m., thus obviating the necessity and inconvenience to passengers of going into the Union Depot and return, as well as the saving of at least two hours' time.

Prospective visitors to the Exposition should not fail to consult agents, or address A. B. Cutts, G. P. & T. A., Minneapolis, Minn., for further information as to our low rates, car service, etc. Also ask for "Guide to the World's Fair."

Elegant Train Service of the Nickel Plate Road.

The thorough development and maintenance of the up-to-date passenger service of the Nickel Plate Road leaves nothing to be desired by people who travel. Ladies traveling alone or accompanied by children will appreciate the clean and well-lighted coaches, made so by the corps of colored porters in uniform who attend the wants of both first and second-class passengers without extra charge. The dining car service of the Nickel Plate Road has become very popular with the patrons on the line and one of pride to the management. This service is conducted under the system of individual club meals. Carefully prepared menus are compiled into booklets, containing suggestions for breakfast, luncheon or supper that will not cost you more than thirty-five cents and on up to one dollar, which is the limit, hence the disbursement may wait for the appetite. Meals are also served "a la Carte." As no excess fare is charged on any train, it will be to your advantage to purchase your tickets via the Nickel Plate Route, where rates are lower than via any other line.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I cannot tell you with pen and ink what good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me, suffering from the ills peculiar to the sex, extreme lassitude and that all gone feeling. I would rise from my bed in the morning feeling more tired than when I went to bed, but before I used two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I began to feel the buoyancy of my younger days returning, became regular, could do more work and not feel tired than I had ever been able to do before, so I continued to use it until I was restored to perfect health. It is indeed a boon to sick women and I heartily recommend it. Yours very truly, MRS. THE WONDERS OF THE WORLD AT ST. LOUIS

They Are to Be Found in the Great Palaces and Along "The Pike."

St. Louis.—Early visitors to the Louisiana Purchase exposition have found at St. Louis an exposition so nearly complete that they have in no way missed the few minor details that were unfinished on the opening day, and which have since been completed. In fact in an exposition of such proportions as this it would be impossible to discover a thousand little details that might lack completion.

Weather conditions were against the exposition management for a few days preceding the opening. Now everything is favorable, and the great fair is entirely complete. n completeness, we must repeat, that is so enormous that it is all but impossible to comprehend what it has meant to the builders. The last vestige of scaffolding that for a few days surrounded some of the less important buildings has been torn away; the last wagon load of refuse hauled from the grounds; every flower and shrub the landscape gardeners included in their scheme of decoration growing under the benign influence of a spring sun and the exposition stands forth a completed giant, beautiful in conception, wonderful in execution, stupendous in size, by far the masterpiece of the world's expositions.

Stupendous size does not half express it. This world's fair has many surprises for the visitor, but its immense size is the greatest astonisher of all. Amazement at the extent of the fair is heard from every visitor.

FESTIVAL HALL AND THE CASCADES.

It has been interesting to watch the visitors these first days of the fair. Interesting to see what would appeal to them strongest, but after one has studied the mass of humanity in their quest for the wonders it is hard to select any one feature that could be designated as a general favorite with all. Of course all visitors are enthusiastic over the general picture, the grand ensemble, which has been created, and for the first hour or more of their stay inside the grounds but few get further than the point from which they catch their first view of this grand picture.

"It almost takes my breath away," exclaimed one woman near whom I was standing as she caught her first glimpse of the beauty of the cascades and the magnificence of the grand exposition palaces. Such is the general verdict. For beauty, for magnificence, for extent, St. Louis has beat the world.

There is another feature, or rather collection of features, which seemingly appeals to every visitor, and with good reason, and that is "The Pike." The fair management do not wish to appeal to the public with a side-show. They built an exposition which should stand forth to the world on its merits as an educator, as a monument to the world's progress, but realizing that an amusement feature was necessary they set to work to provide the biggest and best in this line that has ever been known. That they have succeeded in this is evident to every visitor who travels "The Pike." Nor is this great amusement feature lacking in educational interest. Here one may study the architectural fancies of the world; here he may study the nations of the world, their methods of life, their surroundings, their customs. He sees realistic pictures of the Esquimaux in their snow and ice bound homes in one minute, and the next is transported to the jungles of tropical Africa. "The Pike" is not an aggregation of fat women and the skeleton men, in no sense a circus side-show, but a realistic picture of the world upon which five millions of dollars has been spent.

Six thousand performers from foreign countries, and busy artisans from every remote corner of earth are engaged to reproduce the life of 25 different peoples. Fifteen hundred animals are required to lend reality to the varied scenes. Two shows in the list of 40 represent an outlay of $1,400,000. Twenty of them cost not less than $100,000 apiece, and hardly an attraction less than $50,000.

Some idea of what there is to be seen of Pike features may be had from a list of the educational amusement features which this section of the fair contains:

Alaska and Esquimaux Village; Ancient Rome and Hawaiian Volcano; Battle Abbey; Bohemia; Crystal Palace; Cliff Dwellers; Chinese Village; Colorado Gold Mine; Creation; Coal Breaker; Cairo; Constantinople; Fire-Fighting Exhibition; Glass Weaving, Spinning; German Tyrolean Alps; Golden Chariot; Grant's Log Cabin; Galveston Flood; Haunted Castle; Hereafter; Hunting in the Ozarks; Infant Incubators; Indian Congress and Wild West; Irish Village; Japanese Village; Jerusalem; Jim Key (Educated Horse); Lincoln's Log Cabin; Moorish Palace; Model Playground; Miniature Railway; Magic Whirlpool; Morocco; Mysterious Asia; Naval Exhibition; Old Plantation; Old St. Louis, Mo.; Old Cahokia Court House; Old Virginia Homestead; Observation Wheel; Palais Du Costume; Pottery; Weller; Paris and France; Scenic Railway; South African Boer Exhibits; Streets of Seville; Statisticum; Submarine Diving; New York to the North Pole; Trained and Wild Animals; Under and Over the Sea; Upper Mississippi Views; Water Chutes; Wireless Telegraphy.

What runs in all; what supplies the power that makes the countless wheels go round? The majority of visitors are intensely interested in the mechanical motive force of this greatest of expositions, and well they may be. One of the most striking features is the power plant. Never before at an exposition has there been even half as much power developed as supplied from the various prime movers in the Palace of Machinery. In a large boiler house standing west of the Machinery building, filled with the latest and best productions of skilled boiler manufactures, steam is generated to supply 30,000 horse-power to the various engines in the Machinery building. In addition to this about 10,000 horse-power is received by electric cable from power stations in the city of St. Louis. But the greatest interest is in the engines themselves rather than in the large capacity of the exhibit, for among them is a giant turbine or rotary engine developing 8,000 horse-power, besides others of a similar type of smaller capacity. This is the first display of turbine engines at a large exposition, as its development is a very recent achievement of mechanical engineering and invention.

At the Chicago Exposition the largest gas engine developed only ten horse-power; the visitor to St. Louis may see a gas engine with the capacity of 300 times larger than the Chicago engine. The 3,000 horse-power gas engine is the largest engine of its character ever built. Many other gas engines of various types developing from 1,000 to 1,750 horse-power complete this feature of the exhibit, and there are many of the more familiar reciprocating engines of the latest pattern and highest efficiency.

Of the total number of prime movers in the Palace of Machinery about one-half are comprised in what is known as the Exposition power plant, the other half being exhibitors' engines. Nearly all these engines are connected with electrical generators and the power is transmitted by cable throughout the grounds to the electric railways, the machinery in operation in the exposition buildings, the pumps supplying water to the cascades and fountains, the refrigerating plant and for other purposes. The total horse-power used at Chicago did not exceed 12,000 and at the Pan-American not over 8,000, in comparison with the 40,000 to 50,000 here.

Electricity had only five and one-half acres at Chicago, while at St. Louis nine acres are given to the same department, besides a large display of electrical generators in the Palace of Machinery.

No one should be deterred from visiting the world's fair because of the fear that living expenses in St. Louis are too high. If anyone has this notion it is high time that it be dispelled. There is absolutely no doubt of the fact that one can find excellent living accommodations in St. Louis now at rates not exceeding the charges this same month in New York, Chicago or any other great American city.

No one need pay more than one dollar a day for a good room. That is an average rate, though many accommodations of excellent character may be had for less. There are many unrented rooms at five dollars a week, advertised every day in the newspapers. Hundreds of restaurants serve meals or give short order service at the same rates that prevailed before the exposition opened.

It is suggested that the stranger in St. Louis, who wishes to find reasonable boarding-house rates, make inquiry at a grocery store or meat market in the vicinity where he desires to stop. The grocers and butchers know nearly all the boarding houses in their neighborhoods, and they are quite willing to oblige the stranger by directing him to a place to suit his purse and his tastes. The "want" columns of the daily newspapers also contain columns of small advertisements for boarders or lodgers.

BEACONS LINE THE COAST.

Marines Near the American Shore Are Seldom Out of Sight of a Warning Light.

That the United States government has been mindful of the welfare of people who go down to the sea in ships is shown by the fact that there are 9,000 burning lights and signals stretched along the American coast, forming a perfect link, so that the navigator never need be beyond sight of one of the beacons. One thousand of these are located on the Atlantic coast, 1,500 are scattered along the rivers and inland waterways, 500 on the great lakes, and 280 on the Pacific coast. Of the grand total, including lighthouses of different classes, buoys, beacons and danger signals, 3,000 are lighted, giving forth their warnings at night time. Of these a score or more throw a beam of 100,000 candle power.

To maintain the lighthouse service a corps of over 4,000 men is constantly employed and a fleet of more than 50 vessels. No service in the world exceeds our own in completeness and efficiency. A modern American lighthouse of the first class costs between $100,000 and $200,000, and of this about one-third is spent for the electric light apparatus alone. Beside one of them Egyptian Canopus or Rhodes' "perfect idol," with "profulgent brows," whose rays streamed down the purple streams of Mizraim, would shine as tapers in the Mediterranean night, with no place among the seven wonders of the world, and hardly worth noticing.

Big Man and Little Woman.

She was a demure little woman with a baby. As the car was crowded she did not put the little one, who was old enough to sit up, on the seat beside her. She carried it on her lap, and made room for a fierce-looking, big man with a newspaper.

The child kicked its tiny feet in delight at the strange things it saw while riding along, and its shoes rubbed against the big man's trousers.

"Perhaps, madam," he exclaimed, "you imagine that this conveyance is your private carriage?"

"Oh, no I don't," was the prompt reply. "If it were you wouldn't be riding in it."—Tit-Bits.

THE SUNBEAM.

Rate per year in advance. $1.00.

There seems to be no doubt that we will have a good Railway and Warehouse Commission when we have two as prominent men as Ira B. Mills and Ezra G. Valentine candidates for the position.

We always had one regret because we were set off in a new county, and that was our inability to heal up a slight political sore that has been troubleing us a good deal since the last campaign, but the supreme court has again set us within striking distance and if we don't improve the opportunity to even up a little it will not be because it has not come our way.—Gully Sunbeam May 15. 1903.

We begin to see our opportunity coming.

The proposition to bond Clearwater County for $35,000 to build a court house at Bagley was overwhelmingly defeated at the election held last Tuesday. The people in the western part of the county did not so bitterly oppose the proposition, for the reason that they did not think they were in need of a court house, but because they wanted to give the people an opportunity to elect a board of County Commissioners before the county built a court house.

Congressman Halvor Steenerson is to be adopted into the White Earth band of Chippewa Indians at the 36th anniversary celebration of the tribe held at White Earth June 14th and 15th, says the Thief River Press. The big white chief is greatly beloved by the red men of the band and as a marked token of their affection he has been invited to address the assembly and to be initiated into fellowship and enjoy all of the privileges of a full fledged brave. One emolument pertaining to the honor will be a section of fine land, such a tract being granted to any one admitted as a blood brother of the Chippewas.

ARE YOU INTERESTED?

You are a part of this government and citizens of the United States, and should take an interest in this campaign for the nomination of the republican party for our next governor. We up here are a long distance from railways with valuable lands, and would naturally like to see a railway nearer us than it is at the present time.

The issue in this campaign is the merging of the railway interests, and if the people up here want to continue in the wilderness and to draw their grain from 20 to 40 miles to market they should either stay at home and not take any interest in the republican primaries, or go there and vote for a delegation to go to the convention instructed for the nomination of R. C. Dunn for the next governor of Minnesota.

If you are interested in getting drainage for the northern part of the state and want to see railways built nearer your farms, see to it and turn out to the primaries June 25th at 7 o'clock and see to it that you send a delegation to your conventions instructed for the nomination of Judge L. W. Collins for the next governor of Minnesota.

Presents For Men.

In silverware there are toilet articles such as talcum jars, cold cream jars, silver mounted brushes, combs, clothes brushes, whisk brooms, flasks and shaving brushes.

Bath robes come in the most attractive guise, and the man who has none will surely bless the sister or mother who gives him one.

Gorgeous heavy silk mufflers, embroidered suspenders, neckties of white silk, linen or silk handkerchiefs and chest protectors are some of the things men must expect, as they generally put off buying them until after Christmas.

Other decorations for a man's den are the hideous but picturesque Japanese masks, swords and bayonets. Panel decorations in oriental design will surely please if they are well selected. A wastebasket would not be amiss, and one of the new corkscrews, with a horn top, silver trimmed, would be highly acceptable.

A Pampered Ambition.

"That boy says his only ambition is to make a living without working."

"What are his parents going to do for him?"

"Make a politician out of him."—Detroit Free Press.

WORLD'S FAIR HOTEL ACCOMMODATIONS.

St. Louis Hostelries Prepared to Handle Vast Throngs—Prices Not to Be Increased—Hotel Inside of the Exposition Grounds With a Capacity For 6,000 Guests.

Ample hotel accommodations have been provided for the World's Fair visitors at St. Louis both within and outside of the Exposition grounds.

The Exposition management has organized a free information service. A pamphlet has been issued for gratuitous circulation explaining many of the conveniences that have been provided. A list of all the hotels, with rates, is contained in this pamphlet. The entire city has been canvassed, and many thousands of private house-holders have arranged to receive visitors. These houses are in every section of the city, and the rates at which guests will be received is a matter of record on the books of the bureau.

PORTION OF VARIED INDUSTRIES BUILDING, WORLD'S FAIR.

The Inside Inn, a hotel on the Exposition grounds, has a capacity for 6,000 guests. The Exposition management has control of the rates, which have been fixed at from $1.50 to $3.50 per day, European plan, including admission to the grounds. On the American plan the rates range from $3 to $5 per day. The hotel is 400 by 800 feet and is three stories high.

There are more than 150 established hotels in St. Louis, and a signed agreement has been made between many of their managers with the Exposition officials that rates shall not be raised during the Exposition period. Many new hotels have been built on sites adjacent to the Exposition grounds, and the published fixed rates warrant the assertion that no one need pay exorbitant rates for accommodations either at hotels or private houses.

Among the new hotels may be mentioned the Hotel Napoleon Bonaparte, which stands at Clayton avenue and Skinker road, overlooking the Exposition grounds. This hostelry will accommodate 5,000 persons. The rates, European plan, are from $1 to $5 per day. The Grand View hotel, south of the Exposition, on Oakland avenue, has a capacity for 5,000 guests, and the rates are $1 to $1.50 per day, European, and $2 to $2.50 per day on the American plan. The Kenilworth, on West Park boulevard and Billon avenue, has a capacity of 1,500 guests, with a rate of $1.50 per day.

The above mentioned are a few of the new hotels that have been erected near the Exposition grounds for the accommodation of World's Fair visitors. All told there are about twoscore. All are within easy walking distance, and all are situated on high ground, with comprehensive views of the grounds. All of the structures are well built, and in some of them the most luxurious quarters are obtainable. The rates are established and will not be increased during the Exposition.

NEW MUSIC FOR WORLD'S FAIR

Three Compositions by Famous People. Band Tournament.

Musical people and all who appreciate good music may thank the World's Fair for three notable compositions, written upon the invitation of the Exposition management. These are the "Hymn of the West," by the most distinguished living American poet, Edmund Clarence Stedman, the music for which was written by Professor John K. Paine, who is at the head of the music department of Harvard university; "Louisiana," a march by Frank Vanderstucken, leader of the Cincinnati Orchestra; a waltz, "Along the Plaza," by Henry K. Hadley of New York, who has won his laurels long before this as writer of operatic and other musical compositions. This music will be heard publicly for the first time upon the opening of the Exposition on Saturday, April 30, and frequently thereafter in the musical programmes of the greatest of world's fairs. These are the only official compositions.

Thirty thousand dollars will be given in prizes for the best bands at a tournament to be held during the Exposition. All through the World's Fair the musical feature will be prominent. The most famous bands of the world are under contract to participate during considerable periods. Among these are Le Garde Republicaine band of France, the Royal Grenadier band of England, the American National band, Sousa's band and others.

The newspapers will soon begin to publish pictures of the politicians that are looking for primary election votes, and then their troubles will begin, as some of the candidates for office are always of the opinion that they own the whole paper if they give the editor $5.00 for doing $25.00 worth of work.

The Crookston Times, or any of the other corporation papers, had not now ought to have any kick coming because the people begin to take an interest in the campaign. The farmers of northern Minnesota are interested. They want to see a Governor nominated who will take an interest in building up their interests instead of the railway interests.

SIBERIA IN WINTER.

ARCTIC COLD AND ICINESS REIGN FOR FOUR MONTHS.

Vladivostok Then Is Frozen Stiff, a World of Black and Deadly Frost. The Way Frozen Food Is Displayed In the Bazaar—Coast Sledge Racing.

Imagine a black world frozen stiff, and that is Vladivostok in winter. Wherever water once flowed, in bay or harbor, a wide, gray white road now runs, and these are the only two colors in a wide, still world. There are no trees. The large forests of which the old travelers wrote have long since been cut down for fuel, and the immediate hills behind the town are all as bare as a man's hand. Once behind these hills the endless rolling plain begins, which is Siberia, says Herbage Edwards in London Black and White.

Directly summer is over all the wealth of flowers which for five short months have simply rioted in the land go black, die out. The earth freezes stiff. Winter has come, and black and stiff the world remains. In Vladivostok there is little snow. Sometimes a gray dust, more like powdered ice than snow, blows over the land, but for the most part it is a black, not a white, world of frost, and in its way it is more impressive. The earth freezes deep many feet down and is as hard as iron. The whole harbor turns a kind of dull gray. That, too, is frozen deep. To keep any sort of channel open the powerful ice breaker has to go through it twice a day. Twelve hours of an ordinary winter's day is often sufficient to block the passage, and all this in a town in the same parallel as Marseilles.

To those who have never experienced it real arctic cold is almost inconceivable. They cannot grasp the difference between 10 and 50 degrees of frost. It remains to them merely one of numbers. Indeed when once the winter has gone it is sometimes difficult to remember really how cold it was, but during the four severe winter months themselves it is a very solid and serious fact. Every night you go to sleep remembering, if you are new to such things, that a failure of the furnace which heats the house means death. You might wake first to know you were frozen or you might not. In the poorer houses the inhabitants sleep on the stoves, and the weak ones often die. Drunkenness here is often attended with a swift retribution, which does not in the least prevent it, and every day in winter people are taken up frozen from the gutters, the spirit which is in them only hastening the freezing, so that the carts which are always sent round to pick up the sailors when the crews of the men-of-war are ashore have to do their work quickly. In the summer time, when there is not the same need for hurry, the men often lie about in gutters until the afternoon. The word "gutters" is used simply to designate a certain part of the roadway. Gutters as such do not exist. The drunkenness among all classes of Russians is simply appalling. Officers think nothing of taking a tumblerful of raw whisky as a modest "bitters" before dinner.

When the wind is not blowing the cold is endurable, though five fur lined overcoats are not at all an extraordinary amount of winter wrap. You wear, of course, fur boots, fur gloves, fur caps. Women have their skirts and bodices lined with fur. Wildcat, being both soft and very warm, is often used for this purpose. It is quite astonishing the partiality for such things as oily sardines that one develops.

In the winter time the bazaar is really a sight. Everything is frozen stiff. The huge, long sturgeons from the interior stand in rows on their very sharp pointed noses. Baskets full of little fishes are piled together like chips of ice. Frozen birds hang down on long festoons, and the municipality is spared one trouble—it never has to make away with food "gone bad." The bazaar is almost entirely in the hands of the Chinese, the tall, dark, rough Chinese of the north, who live wrapped up in wadded cotton clothes until they look like bundles of bedding. Without the Chinese and the Japanese Vladivostok would find it hard to exist. They do all the work of the town. The Russians garrison and govern it. The Chinese, the Germans, the Japanese and the other nations trade in it.

The great sport of Vladivostok in the winter is sledge racing, and when once the harbor is frozen over a proper course is marked off, and every one who owns a horse takes part. A Russian horse is a superior brute. He stands as high and looks as strong as a cart horse, but he goes like the wind. He will walk or he will gallop, but he does not condescend to do anything between. His harness is weird and wonderful and very Russian, consisting primarily of a huge wooden half hoop over the head, the keystone of the whole structure, which is attached to the shafts by winding long, thin straps backward and forward. It takes hours to put this on; is always liable to come undone and if undone is very dangerous. An English lady once related to me with horror how she was taken for a drive in Vladivostok and the horse and carriage just went over everything—walls, banks or whatever came in the way. It is quite true, a Russian horse does, and if you have once driven behind one you are never nervous again. You are either killed or cured.

In Vladivostok you take your daily skate as your constitutional, and the most exciting thing to do is to sledge along the coast—dangerous because shore ice is never quite trustworthy—to Askold, which is an island on the northeast coast of Siberia.

Unique California Map.

A unique exhibit at the World's Fair was prepared by the agricultural department of the University of California. It is a large map, so colored as to show the character of the various soils of the state. It gives a clear idea of the situation and the extent of the arable and untillable sections. In the localities that cannot be cultivated are shown the Sierras, the lava beds and the desert. The map indicates the location of the cultivable portions of the mountains and Mohave plateau and shows the nature of the foothills and valleys of that wonderful state.

You will never get on the sunny side by waiting for the world to turn round.—Atlanta Constitution.

THE WIND'S MYSTERY.

Mountain and Valley Breezes and How They Originate.

The meteorologist is gradually divesting the wind of its mystery and is able to explain convincingly how and when it originates. The study of a great number of observations taken simultaneously all over the country and, in fact, all over two continents has enabled the expert to foresee just when wind and storm will arrive at certain sections of the country.

Of course the physical topography of any neighborhood has its influence on the local storms, fogs and prevailing winds. The "mountain" and "valley breezes" that are so eagerly sought during the summer recreation or sojourn is an instance of the effect of mountains on local climate and weather conditions. As explained by a professor of meteorology, because of active radiation at night the layers of air near the earth become cooled, and as cool air is heavier than warm air, a law of physics that is generally appreciated theoretically, but usually overlooked practically, this heavy air tends to move down the hillside. The tendency becomes after a time sufficiently pronounced to produce a general downhill movement, eventually resulting in a perceptible breeze.

That is what is commonly designated locally as "the mountain breeze" and which, from its origin, is practically in one constant direction, though the intervention of powerful storms may temporarily reverse the customary movement. Vice versa, during the day the presence of warmer and therefore lighter air near the earth causes a movement of the atmosphere with an upward tendency, creating the so called valley breezes. In certain favorably situated localities the appearance of the mountain or the valley breeze is as regular as clockwork, the transitional period being marked by a calm.—Philadelphia Record.

BEAVERS IN MONTANA.

The Rare Animal Is Very Tame Where He Is Not Hunted.

The beaver is not shy where he is not hunted and acquires confidence in a friendly watcher sooner than any other animal I know. Strangers or unusual clothes on a person to whom they have become accustomed alarm them, though, like dogs, they can apparently identify an acquaintance by scent.

The beaver's sense of smell is very acute, for he is able to scent a man 200 yards away, and his eyesight is also most keen; but he seems to be dull of hearing when at work, and I have often walked to within a few feet of one while he was cutting wood. However, their method of warning each other of danger is by slapping or "smothering" the water with the long, flat tail which is so characteristic a feature of the animal and which not only helps him in swimming, but is used for carrying mud. If a large animal appears at a place where beavers want to work he covers the water continually, one after another joining in, till the intruder is scared away. I have had a thorough wetting at night while watching a pond through the splashing made by this trick.

I saw my first beavers in the Musselshell river in Montana. At first they dived whenever they became aware of my presence, but after about three months they paid no attention when they scented me, and in six months they would swim around or cut bushes within a few feet of me. In fact, they repeatedly stole my fishing poles cut from green willows until I learned to use dry ones.—Country Life in America.

Old Soldier's Story.

Sonoma, Mich., June 13.—That even in actual warfare disease is more terrible than bullets is the experience of Delos Hutchins, of this place. Mr. Hutchins as a Union Soldier saw three years of service under Butler Barke in the Louisiana swamps, and as a result got crippled with Rheumatism so that his hands and feet got all twisted out of shape, and how he suffered only a Rheumatic will ever know.

For twenty-five years he was in misery, then one lucky day his druggist advised him to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. Of the result Mr. Hutchins says:

"The first two boxes did not help me much, but I got two more, and before I got them used up I was a great deal better. I kept on taking them, and now my pains are all gone and I feel better than I have in years. I know Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure Rheumatism."

STRATEGY THAT SUCCEEDED

One Way to Get a Woman to Take Her Hat Off in a Theater.

She sailed down the aisle just before the curtain rose for the matinee, an elegantly dressed woman of middle age and more, wearing a broad, black hat with a long, curving feather on it. She took a seat in front of two young women and gave not the slightest intimation of removing that marvelous tower of headgear, relates the Chicago Inter Ocean.

"Pardon me, but would you mind removing your hat?"

This request apparently made not the slightest impression on the owner of the handsome plume, and a few minutes later the second young woman asked, in a tone somewhat louder than that of her companion:

"Would you please be so kind as to take off your hat?"

The offender moved her head slightly, but otherwise gave no response.

The victims of fashion were silent for a few minutes and then one of them was heard to say very distinctly to her friend:

"Oh, well, perhaps she is a little bald. That, of course, explains it. Don't think of asking her again."

The woman with the hat started, and before the speaker had finished the offense was removed.

Only Use Theatrical Manager Could Make of Embryotic Melodrama.

George Ade, at a recent banquet, was asked to speak on success, relates Success. "I suppose that failure is more familiar than success to all of us," he said. "[illegible] work away. Four things fail. The fifth thing succeeds. The hardest worker [illegible] the most failures, but then they have the most successes, too.

"One of my early failures was a melodrama that I traveled all the way from Chicago to New York to sell to a manager. This was in my youth, when I had confidence in myself. The manager returned my melodrama: He said he didn't care for it.

"I pointed out the merits in it which he had overlooked. I proved that he would make a great mistake if he should not accept this work. But he shook his head.

"'Can't you use it at all?' I asked, desperately.

"'Well,' he said, 'I might grind it up and use it for a snowstorm.'"

HAS TRIED BOTH.

Travel for Health Vs. Dieting.

A man who was sent to Europe for his health and finally found cure in a little change in his diet says:

"I was troubled with dyspepsia for five years and two doctors here in Kenosha that treated me for over a year both told me there was no help for me. Then I had an expert from Chicago, but still received no relief; then followed another expert from Chicago who came to our house two times a month for four months. He gave me up like all the others and told me to take a trip across the ocean, which I did in the year 1899 and came home about as bad as when I started. The doctors told me my stomach lining was full of sores. Then I began to study my own case and learned of the diet recommended by the Postum Cereal Co., so I gave up coffee, pork and all greasy foods and began using Postum Food Coffee. Gradually I got better and better until I am well now as I ever was in my younger days, have no trouble and eat anything fit to eat.

"Sometimes away from home I am persuaded to drink coffee, but I only take a sip of it, for it tastes bitter and disagreeable to me, but the longer I use Postum the better I like it and the better I feel. I could say a great deal more of my experience with Postum, but think this will give everyone a good idea of what leaving off coffee and using Postum can do." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Burned to Death.

Devotion to her children cost the life of Mrs. A. L. Hauser, Minneapolis.

Mrs. Hauser was heating a can of varnish on her cook stove preparatory to applying it to the floor. The fire from the stove ignited the varnish and it began to blaze.

Mrs. Hauser, having a mother's thought for her two children who were asleep upstairs, attempted to throw the burning can outdoors, but in doing so her clothing took fire and soon she was a living torch.

Her cries brought the neighbors, but before they could smother the fire the woman was burned so badly that nothing could be done to save her.

Killed in Elevator.

Nick Reinart, was buried in a bin of screenings at Elevator K, Twenty-ninth street and Garfield avenue, Minneapolis, and his body was not recovered for three hours.

It was thought that when he was recovered that the spark of life had not been entirely smothered, but after working over him for some minutes it was discovered that he was dead.

The accident was due to the fact that the chute leading from the bin was clogged up, and when Reinert entered the bin to ascertain the cause the screenings started and sucked Reinart to the bottom of the bin. He leaves a wife.

Farmer's Wife Held Up.

While Peter Schaust, who lives about one and a half miles north of Delano, was attending church a masked robber entered his home and compelled Mrs. Schaust to give up what money was in the house. At first she refused, but he drew a revolver and fired a couple of shots, one of which just passed her head and frightened her so much that she gave him the money on hand, amounting to nearly $300. The constable and sheriff were at once notified and are working on the brief description Mrs. Schaust could give of the robber, who they think was a stranger in that vicinity.

Girl Disappears.

She has been absent several days and no trace of her has been found. She disappeared Saturday evening, and the following morning buggy tracks were found at one corner of a pasture fence not far from the house.

The entire neighborhood has been searched and the grandparents are distracted.

Stewart is accused of having stolen $24,000 in certificates of deposit from J. E. Hall of Duluth formerly a rail-conductor.

It was afterward found to be a mistake and Stewart was released.

Suicide.

Mrs. Frank DeBilson of Foley, age 28, committed suicide by taking carbolic acid because she had a little difference with her husband. About the last words she said to him were: "Kiss me, Frank; it will be the last time."

She formerly lived in Minneapolis. Her parents reside at New Ulm, and the be taken there for burial.

CATARRH IS THE CAUSE OF MOST KIDNEY DISEASES.

PE-RU-NA CURES CATARRH.

SAMUEL R. SPRECHER.

Captain James L. Dempsey, Captain 2nd Precinct Troy Police Force, writes from 198 Ferry St., Troy, N. Y., as follows:

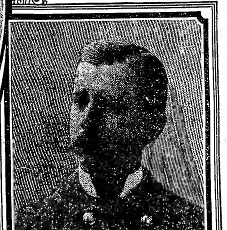
"From my personal experience with Peruna I am satisfied it is a very fine remedy for catarrhal affections, whether of the head, lungs, stomach or pelvic organs. It cures colds quickly, and a few doses taken after undue exposure prevents illness.

"Some of the patrolmen under me have also found great relief from Peruna. It has cured chronic cases of kidney and bladder troubles, restored men suffering from indigestion and rheumatism, and I am fully persuaded that it is an honest, reliable medicine, hence I fully endorse and recommend it." JAMES L. DEMPSEY.

Officer A. C. Swanson writes from 607 Harrison St., Council Bluffs, Ia., as follows:

"As my duties compelled me to be out in all kinds of weather I contracted a severe cold from time to time, which settled in the kidneys, causing severe pains and trouble in the pelvic organs.

"I am now like a new man, am in splendid health and give all praise to Peruna."—A. C. Swanson.



CAPTAIN JAMES L. DEMPSEY.

Samuel R. Sprecher, Junior Beadle Court Angelina, 3,423 I. O. O. F., 205 New High St., Los Angeles, Cal., writes:

"I came here a few years ago suffering with catarrh of the kidneys, in search of health. I thought the climate would cure me, but found I was mistaken. But what the climate could not do Peruna could and did do. Seven weeks' trial convinced me that I had the right medicine, and I was then a well man. I know of at least twenty friends and members of the lodge to which I belong who have been cured of catarrh, bladder and kidney trouble through the use of Peruna, and it has a host of friends in this city." SAMUEL R. SPRECHER.

Catarrh of the Kidneys a Common Disease—Kidney Trouble Often Fails to Be Regarded as Catarrh by Physicians.

Catarrh of the kidneys is very common indeed. It is a pity this fact is not better known to the physicians as well as the people.

People have kidney disease. They take some diuretic, hoping to get better. They never once think of catarrh. Kidney disease and catarrh are seldom associated in the minds of the people, and, alas, it is not very often associated in the minds of the physicians. Too few physicians recognize catarrh of the kidneys. They doctor for something else. They try this remedy and that remedy. The trouble may be catarrh all the time. A few bottles of Peruna would cure them.

Pe-ru-na Removes the Cause of the Kidney Trouble.

Peruna strikes at the very centre of the difficulty, by eradicating the catarrh from the kidneys. Catarrh is the cause of kidney difficulty. Remove the cause and you remove the effect. With unerring accuracy Peruna goes right to the spot. The kidneys are soon doing their work with perfect regularity.

Thousands of Testimonials.

Thousands of testimonials from people who have had kidney disease which had gone beyond the control of the physician are received by Dr. Hartman every year, giving Peruna the whole praise for marvelous cures.

Pe-ru-na Cures Kidney Disease.

Peruna cures kidney disease. The reason it cures kidney disease is because it cures catarrh. Catarrh of the kidneys is the cause of most kidney disease. Peruna cures catarrh wherever it happens to be located. It rarely fails.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Forbidden Fruit.

A request was once made to the authorities of one of the colleges at Cambridge that room might be found on the spacious lawns of their garden for the lady students of Girton College to play lawn tennis.

Guessing clearly enough what would be the result of the admission of these students of the fairer sex among the undergraduates, the master replied that it was ordered in the statutes of the college that the gardens must be devoted to the purposes of floriculture, and must not be used for husbandry.—Spare Moments.

Ladies traveling alone or accompanied by children will appreciate the clean and well-lighted coaches, made so by the corps of colored porters in uniform who attend the wants of both first and second-class passengers without extra charge. The dining car service of the Nickel Plate Road has become very popular with the patrons on the line and one of pride to the management. This service is conducted under the system of individual club meals. Carefully prepared menus are compiled into booklets, containing suggestions for breakfast, luncheon or supper that will not cost you more than thirty-five cents and on up to one dollar, which is the limit, hence the disbursement may wait for the appetite. Meals are also served "a la Carte." As no excess fare is charged on any train, it will be to your advantage to purchase your tickets via the Nickel Plate Route, where rates are lower than via any other line.

HUNDREDS OF LIVES LOST

Awful Steamer Horror Occurs in New York Harbor.

Heavily Laden Excursion Boat Takes Fire Off Hell Gate.

SCORES OF VICTIMS LEAP OVERBOARD AND DROWN

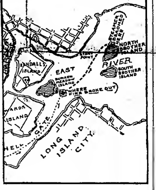
Others Remain and Succumb to the Flames—Dead Mostly Women and Children—Latest Estimate of the Dead.

New York, June 17.—Over 700 persons, according to the coroner's latest estimate, lost their lives Wednesday morning by the burning of the excursion steamer General Slocum in Long Island sound while off Ricker's island and in plain view of New York city and Long Island shores. Up to Friday morning over 500 bodies of victims had been recovered while over 200 persons are still missing.

The disaster likely will equal in number and wholly matches in pitifulness and horror the Iroquois theater fire in Chicago last December. It was appalling in its immensity, dramatic in its episodes and deeply pathetic in the tender age of most of its victims.

Victims Women and Children.

As in the Iroquois fire most of the victims were women and children. They were members of the Sunday school of St. Mark's German Lutheran church, bound for their annual excursion up Long Island sound, happy, gay, care free and full of joyous expectations of their day of all days in the year. They went to their death with bands playing, flags whipping in the breeze, and under as fair a sky as was ever vouchsafed to a picnic crowd. The 400 children were singing, dancing and waving handkerchiefs and flags in answer to the salutations of those on shore or from passing steamers.



Map of that portion of the East river where the General Slocum was burned and hundreds of lives sacrificed.

Horror Upon Unspeakable Horror.

The scenes during and after the catastrophe were the kind that make the heart sick. Mothers hugging their children to their breasts in love and terror were forced to choose between certain death in the flames and almost equally certain death in the water. Some, made frantic by their sudden peril, threw their babes into the whirling waters of Hell Gate, hoping doubtless for improbable rescue, while many were not allowed the poor privilege of choosing, but were forced overboard by the mad rush of the panic-stricken passengers in their efforts to get away from the flames.

Great preparations had been made for the seventeenth annual excursion of the Sunday school of St. Mark's German Lutheran church, the congregation of which is drawn from the dense population of the lower East and West sides, and the General Slocum had been chartered to carry the excursionists to Locust Grove, one of the many resorts on Long Island sound. It is variously estimated that there were between 1,500 and 2,500 persons on board the General Slocum when she left the pier at Third street, East river, though the Knickerbocker Steamship company, which owns the Slocum, officially states that the number of passengers was 873, that being only one-third of the vessel's capacity. It is thought, however, that there were several hundred children in arms, for whom fares are not usually charged on these trips, on board.

At the extreme eastern end of Randall's island, off One Hundred and Thirty-fifth street, there is a stretch of water known as the Sunken Meadows. At this point, just as crowds were watching the gaily decorated steamer from the shore, the General Slocum took fire, and as the age of the vessel (she was built in 1891) had resulted in the well seasoning of the wood with which she was almost entirely built she was soon a mass of flame. The fire is said to have broken out in a lunch room on the forward deck through the overturning of a pot of grease. The wind was high and all efforts to subdue the fire was futile.

At One Hundred and Thirty-fourth street there are several lumber yards and oil tanks, and as Capt. William Van Schaick, in command of the General Slocum, started to turn his vessel toward the shore there he was warned that it would set fire to the lumber and oil, and so he changed his course for North Brothers island, one of the twin islands near the entrance to the sound, some half a mile away, where the boat partially burned was beached. She sank near this place at 12:25 o'clock p. m., two hours and 25 minutes after the fire was first discovered.

Leap Overboard.

In the meantime the passengers had become panic stricken, and those who were not caught up by the flames rushed to the rear of the vessel, and hundreds jumped overboard into the swiftly running waters. It is alleged that the life preservers were too securely fastened to their holdings to be available, and stories are told of frantic efforts made by strong men to cut them loose; but even if they could have been torn down they were too high up for the children to reach.

An Awful Race.

The race to North Brother island was horribly dramatic. It was made while the flames, which had been fanned into a fury by the strong head wind, were consuming hundreds of persons, old and young. The scene was one of frightful panic, with women and children jumping overboard and being lashed by the channel whirlpools against the vessel's sides. Women and children were crowded together on the hurricane deck which soon burned away and fell, and it is believed that most of those on this deck were burned. The after rail gave way and the passengers who had crowded against it were pushed into the river. Mothers and children became separated and frantically sought each other, while in several cases fathers and mothers gathering their children together jumped with them into the water. Little children, holding each other by the hand, jumped together and were afterward found clasped in each others arms. It is alleged that men fought with women to escape, resulting in the trampling under foot of scores of children.

Meanwhile the Slocum burned to the water's edge. At 12:25 o'clock, two hours and 25 minutes after the fire was first discovered, she sank. It is estimated that there were than nearly 100 charred bodies on her decks. Just after the steamer sank the water nearby was black with bodies. The tug Fidelity succeeded in picking up 88 charred corpses in Hunt's cove off Ricker's island and carried them into the sound. None of these bodies, it is thought can ever be identified. Heads, legs and arms are burned off and not a shred of clothing is left on any of them.

The scene on North Brother island as described by the rescuers was a pitiful one. Body after body was washed ashore or brought in by boats and added to the long row on the beach. Fifty-three persons died there while the doctors were attending them. As the bodies of the living and the dead were taken out of the water, those alive were taken to the hospitals on the island or sent across the river to hospitals in Manhattan. Here ambulances from almost all the hospitals in Greater New York and every other sort of conveyance which could be found were put into service. For hours the bodies of the burned and the drowned drifted ashore on the island and between One Hundred and Thirty-first and One Hundred and Thirty-eighth streets in Manhattan. Some came ashore still alive. Many of these died while others will recover. The scenes on the beach of North Brother island were pitiable in the extreme, as the living and the dead were brought in. The row of bodies stretched along the beach and hysterical women and frantic men went along looking at one after another, searching for children and friends.

Pastor Is Saved.

Rev. J. G. Schultz, the assistant pastor of the church, called at the temporary morgue and identified the body of Mrs. Anna Haas, the wife of the pastor of the church. The coroner at once gave permission for the body to be removed to the residence of Dr. Haas. Dr. Haas is among the rescued. He, himself, wife and daughter got outside of the rail of the Slocum before the steamer beached. He cannot say whether they jumped or fell or were pushed into the water. He sank and when he rose he found scores about him fighting for life. He failed to find his wife and daughter. With great effort he kept afloat, and was about to give up in despair when a man on one of the tugs picked him up. Of the scores he saw about him when he rose, one by one sank. It is not yet known whether his daughter is among the living or the dead.

Many May Be Safe.

There are a number of places where the living may have landed, and it is believed that many that are now reported missing are safe, and eventually will be heard from by the officials who have the rescue work in hand. Indeed, a surprising number of persons reported to these officials that they had been saved, thus cutting the list of missing down considerably, as well as the probable mortality list.

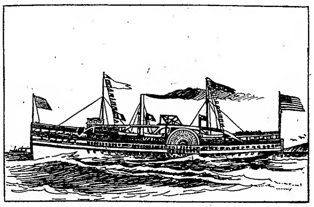
Many Injured.

Many persons who were injured in the panic that followed the breaking out of the flames on the General Slocum, and at least 200 persons were taken to the hospitals. Not a death has occurred so far among these, and many of them have already been discharged.

Engineer in Hiding.

Information was received at the district attorney's office during the afternoon that Engineer Conkling, who was said to have perished in the disaster, is alive and in hiding. County detectives, under the direction of Assistant District Attorney Garvan are now looking for him.

ILL-FATED STEAMER GEN. SLOCUM.



The General Slocum was built for an excursion boat, and when not chartered for special excursions ran between New York and Rockaway Beach. It was owned by the Knickerbocker Boat company, which also owns the excursion steamer Grand Republic. At yacht races the great size of the boat made it prominent in the fleet of excursion steamers that lined the course. The vessel was launched at Brooklyn in April, 1891. The keel was 235 feet, the deck 250 feet long. Its breadth of hull was 37 feet, overguard, 70 feet. The gross tonnage was 1,284 and the net tonnage 1,013. The boat had two boilers, each 23½ feet long and 9½ feet in diameter, and four furnaces.

Will the Polk County delegation go down to the state convention instructed for R. C. Dunn for governor with a free pass over the G. N. Ry. line, or will they go as free men sent by the people?

Hunt has a long life, so says the fortune teller, and we will remember two years hence, and we will get after you old man A. D., and don't you forget it. Your bank account is extensive while we are property struck, but we will make you awful sorry for that $26 you owe us.

We feel confident that the people of the westend of Clearwater County are strictly onto their job. Since they gave the proposition to bond the county for $35,000 the last set back, and we are of the opinion that they will see to it to send their delegates to the Bagley convention instructed for L. W. Collins for governor.

Chas. McCarty, County Commissioner of Polk County, has come into the G. O. P. for revenue only, and comes out asking for an office. Charlie is one of the old line democrats, and can not expect to get office the first time. We gladly welcome you to our ranks Chas., but ride on the hump of the elephant before trying to take the front seat.

If the people of this locality want to see railway building up this way, it is their duty to turn out to the primary election on June 25th and see to it that delegates are sent to the county convention instructed for Judge Collins for governor. If you are in favor of continuing to draw your wheat to Jim Hill's railroad, no matter how far it is from you, stay at home on June 25th and allow him to dictate who is to be the next governor of Minnesota.

The Grey Eagle Gazette says "Bob Dunn is a common man." We agree. A very common ordinary man, who has less than common respect for himself and the dignity of his position as a candidate for the highest office in the gift of the people, else how could he engage in such an undignified street brawl, and sandwich his remarks with unprintable language? Yes, a common man and will so remain after June 30.—Glenwood Gopher.

The unprintable remarks of Mr. Dunn has not lowered him in the estimation of the common people as much as his printable interviews with Jim Hill. The people of this state do not want a man in the high position of governor who is Jim Hill's "Bob."

The Albert Lea Times says: Leading republicans do not consider Mr. Dunn and his political manager, Mr. Heatwole, as safe men in whom to intrust the leadership of the party, for the reason that neither has been at all times true and loyal to the party. It is pointed out that only two years ago Mr. Dunn declined to make speeches or to aid in the state campaign, and Mr. Heatwole not only did not aid the state ticket, but, through the columns of his paper, the Northfield News, week after week, and throughout the campaign openly and bitterly attacked Governor Van Sant, then the candidate of his party by unanimous nomination and fighting for republican success and supremacy. No democrat or populist did more to attempt to discredit the party standard bearer during the campaign than did Editor Heatwole. Such men, it is urged, are not safe party leaders, and it is contrary to good party policy to place the control of the party organization and the state government in their hands.

Spells of Witches

A Region Where They Are Said to Drive People to Crime.

Dreadful Deeds of Persons Thought to Be Under Influence of the "Evil Eye"—The Powwow.

In the fastnesses of the Pennsylvania mountains and in the farming districts, the homes of the Pennsylvania Dutch, bordering the great anthracite region, spells are implicitly believed in. The belief in witchcraft which was burned out of New England survives in Pennsylvania.

A month or two ago a farmer named Weisinger shot and killed two of his brothers. The men had lived together all their days in peace and brotherly love. They had some trifling dispute, and one of them, walking into the farmhouse, brought out his gun and deliberately shot his two brothers dead. At a preliminary examination when asked why he did it his only answer, given apparently in perfect seriousness and good faith, was, "I must have been bewitched." He urged that he was not responsible; that some one had cast a spell over him. It is a plea which in the district where he has lived would be accepted as seriously as it was made. Even in the county seat more than one of the jury will hear it with sneaking sympathy.

HE BLEW MERRITT'S HEAD OFF.

A respectable middle aged negro named Lipscombe deliberately killed an old darky named Merritt, who he believed had cast a spell upon his wife. Some time previous the two men had had some difficulty over a trifling account. A little after that Merritt went to Lipscombe's wife and told her he had "drove up a nail for her" and that she would be dead in three weeks. She believed him and worried herself sick. Lipscombe saw his wife apparently dying before his eyes and went over to Merritt's house with his Bible under one arm and his shotgun under the other. He tried the Bible first as a means of breaking the spell and finally, believing it the only way, blew Merritt's head off. He made no attempt to escape, went quietly home and waited for the officers to come and arrest him and went with them without protest.

In Cumberland county, Pa., there lives a degenerate class of Pennsylvania Dutch who have both negro and Indian blood in their veins and have grafted on their own superstitions those of the Indian conjure man and the negro voodoo until the air is thick with spells, and no man's life is safe unless guarded by innumerable charms against these unseen powers of evil, whom an enemy will of course invoke.

As a rule these beliefs are only to be found in the rural districts and are carefully guarded from the profane eyes of a "foreigner." In the isolated farming districts of Berks, Schuylkill and Lancaster counties, Pa., the belief in witches, in powwows, in seventh sons and in the evil eye is well nigh as strong today as it was 200 years ago. Is a man apparently marked for misfortune, has he what out west or even in New England would be called "a run of bad luck," do his crops fail, his buildings burn, his animals or perchance his children sicken and die, it is a spell. Some one has bewitched him, and he generally has a pretty distinct idea who this some one is. Naturally he retaliates in kind. He does not take the matter to court, seeking damages or legal redress. He finds some one who can cast a stronger spell and fights his adversary with his own weapons—witchcraft with witchcraft.

There is probably no other people in the country as tenacious of the beliefs of their fathers as the Pennsylvania Dutch.

They will tell tales of witches and spells and incantations and charms till one's blood runs cold, of the harm wrought by the evil eye, of the pain killed by a powwow, of a miraculous cure by a seventh son.

Of course this belief creeps into the homes and is met in the courts or, rather, in the very informal court which a justice of the peace holds. In criminal cases it is offered as an excuse with a full knowledge that it will not be accepted and a sullen understanding of the fact that "strangers" regard it as absurd. But even among people who ought to know better the belief in the powwow prevails. Even one of the justices of the peace told the writer how he was "powwowed" as a boy when he had seriously burned his hand. He was taken to an old German woman who had power to powwow, and she made mysterious passes over his burned hand and muttered mystical words, and forthwith the pain of the hand was less, and it healed almost immediately.

Judge David C. Henning of Pottsville tells of meeting an old Schuylkill county farmer and by addressing him in his own tongue getting him to declare the faith that was in him on the subject of witches and witchcraft. They sat on a fallen tree by the roadside in the shadow of Blue mountain, and the old fellow said:

"No; I have never seen a witch, and I don't believe there are any witches nowadays—not real witches. Some people say they have power to powwow still, and I don't know, perhaps they have. But they are not real witches. In my grandmother's day there were real witches. She often told me about them when I was a boy. She knew some of them well. There was Peter Klein. He was a real witch man, and he could change himself into animals and trees and things. You've heard of Peter Klein surely? No? Why, Klein was a great man in his day."

The stories the old farmer told of him to prove that he was a witch man were about as follows:

"One day Klein was being followed by a party of Indians, and when they were almost upon him and there seemed no way of escape he changed himself into a stump. The Indians could not imagine where he had vanished, and they beat around through the underbrush of the forest for hours, directed by a chief, who, when he was weary, seated himself on a stump and directed the search for the fugitive. But he had seated himself on the stump which was Klein, and so when the Indians finally gave up the hunt and went away and Klein changed himself back into human shape he found he was bent over from the weight he had sustained. And to the day of his death he was humpbacked.

"Then, again, on another occasion Klein saw a party of Indians approaching, and, since he could not escape, he turned himself into a wildcat and climbed up into a tree. Under the tree the Indians paused to rest and to discuss plans for an attack on the fort on the next night. Klein overheard all their plans, but in his eagerness was a little careless and rustled the branches so that the Indians saw the wildcat and fired at it, wounding it in the right foreleg. The next morning Klein went up to the fort to warn the commander of the proposed Indian attack, and his right arm was in a sling.

"So, you see, in those days there were certainly witches, but they're all dead now, and no one knows how to be a witch now."

"Well," said the judge, "why not? If there were witches in your grandmother's day, why are there no real witches now?"

"Because they have lost the books that taught witchcraft. All about how to be a witch was in the sixth and seventh books of Moses, the lost books of Moses, the people call them. And in those days they had these books. Where are they now? Lost! Buried somewhere right here in Blue mountain, no man knows where. But until they are found there shall be no more witches and no more witchcraft, though my cousin married a woman who was a seventh daughter and all the neighbors go to her when they are sick, and she cures them by just laying her hands on them and saying a charm. But that is not witchcraft. Any seventh son or seventh daughter can do that. Everybody knows that."

A serious cutting affray. A big cut, and all kinds of cuts cured by Mark's Carbolic salve.

There is a time for all things, so it is said. Mark's Sarsaparilla is a good blood purifier any time.

Miss Le Blanc completed her term of school here yesterday and left for her home at Crookston today.

Gonvick will celebrate July 4th in the good old fashioned way. Go to Wildwood July 4th and see a grand rural celebration.

Knute T. Tveit, of Griebrok, was in town Wednesday making arrangements to make final proof on his Lost River claim.

Martin D. Lien, of Gonvick, was in town Monday. While here he made application to prove up on his homestead.

Engvold Wald did not return Wednesday from his Thief River Falls trip, and it is expected that he has bought a farm and started farming.

The Indians who should have been at Winsor Sunday passed through here Tuesday on their way home from White Earth to Red Lake Agency.

J. H. Swenson, the Fosston photographer, was taking views here Tuesday, and we expect to have some photographs of our business and residence buildings soon.

Two of Winsor's young men have been making visits to this place quite often of late, but we expect to see one of them discontinue his visits now or go down to Crookston.

Mr. and Mrs. Matt Amundson and Ole Erickson were business visitors here Saturday. Mr. Amundson is one of our latest settlers in Gully, having come here and bought a farm.

County Commissioners Morken and Ekelund were up here last Friday and Saturday looking over the county road north of here, on which the Commissioners are going to make an appropriation for drainage.

Nels Bolstad bought a lion on Monday last for $4.00 and has named him Morgan. He made night hideous with his howls Monday night, but has now adapted himself to the new state of affairs and will become a permanent resident of Gully.

Charles Enquist has his new residence nearly completed, and expects——, well we will draw the curtain, but it always did have a suspicious look to see a bachelor getting a nest ready. It is rumored that the bird is in St. Louis, but will become a resident here soon.

Among the notable people present at the Winsor celebration we noticed Miss Alice Campbell, proprietor of the farm known as the Clearwater Crossing. Miss Campbell filed on the land Nov. 10th and has had a hard struggle to keep it, but is absolute owner and proprietor at the present time.

The people who attended the Indian celebration at Winsor Sunday met with a disappointment when they found that there were no Indians present. It seems to have been no fault of the management, as the red men had promised to come; but it appears that about all of them had been attending the big celebration at White Earth, where Halvor Steenerson was admitted into tribe of Ojibways, and owing to the warm weather were unable to return in time to be at the celebration at Winsor. The Fosston Band were there on time however, and did much to allay the disappointment of the people who had come to see the Indian Pow-wow. A large number of prominent people were present from Bagley, Fosston and McIntosh. Everything passed off nicely, and all present seemed to enjoy themselves.

A schoolboy's composition on "The Editor" ran as follows: "The editor is one of the happiest individuals in the world. He can go to any circus in the afternoon and evening without paying a penny, also to inquests and hangings. Has free tickets to theatres, gets wedding cake sent to him, and sometimes gets a licking, but not often, for he can take things back in the next issue, which he generally does. While other folks have to go to bed early, the editor can sit up late every night and see all that is going on. When I am a man I mean to be an editor, so that I may stay out late at night. That will be jolly."—Ex.

It is your business to take a part in the nomination of our next governor. Don't stay at home the 25th of June and allow the convention to fix up a padded delegation to send delegates from your county convention to St. Paul to the state convention on free passes over the G. N. Ry. to nominate their candidate for the next governor of Minnesota. Turn out to the Caucus at 7 o'clock June 25th.

Hon. F. M. Eddy has steadily gained strength in the last month, and if there is not a nomination made on the first ballot in the State Convention he may stand a better chance of being our next governor than he has been given credit for.

"Tit For Tat."

Professor Skeat in his Etymological dictionary explains the expression as "blow for blow" and says that it is a corruption of tip for tap, where tip is a slight tap. He refers to Bullinger's Works, I., 283 (Parker society), the translation of which is, I believe, dated 1577. May I be permitted to direct attention to the fact that "tit for tat" had already appeared at an earlier date in John Heywood's "Proverbs," 1546?

Since tit for tat (quoth I) on even hand is set.
Set the hares head agaynst the goose jeblet.
Pp. 109, 110, Reprint, 1871.

In a note it is stated that "tit for tat" is simply a corruption for tant pour tant. Halliwell-Phillipps' dictionary has "tint for tant, tit for tat."—Notes and Queries.

A Dangerous Trade.

The dangers of work in a white lead factory are described by a medical authority in a discussion of the causes and effects of lead poisoning. Most of the cases occur among the workers in the department where the preparation of the carbonate of lead is carried on by what is called the "Dutch process," in which the lead, in sheets, is placed on the top of pots filled with acetic acid and converted first into the subacetate and finally decomposed by carbon dioxide emitted by tar. In moving the carbonate clouds of white lead dust are easily caused by careless handling on the part of the workmen, and in spite of the respirators worn by them much of the poison is taken into the system.—Harper's Weekly.

Artists' Difficulties In Painting Men.

Artists will tell you it is no easy thing to paint a man in a frock coat so that he shall appeal picturesquely to the casual wayfarer. The modern habiliments affected by the male person do not lend themselves to artistic reproduction on canvas. There are no scintillant colors, no fine lines of form, in a trousered poseur, and to achieve a successful portrait of a man is to spell the artist's capabilities in capital letters. With women models—well, there the story is of a different cast, just as woman herself is so wholly different, so enchantingly complex.—Metropolitan Magazine.

The Cold In Alaska.

David T. Hanbury, writing of his first experiences in Alaska, said: "The cold could not be kept out of even the most painful examples of domestic architecture which Dawson City could at that time boast, but the author stuck to the cult of the morning tub. After I had melted the pail of ice on the 'air tight' stove I poured some of the water two inches deep into the bathtub, which I had removed to the rear of the room, where there was no heat. Not two minutes had elapsed before I threw off my chamois pajamas in the front room and, opening the communicating door, stepped hurriedly into the bathtub, for I had no time to lose. Quick as I had been, the atmosphere had been quicker, and just as I stepped into the tub with both feet, wrenching with a great effort the soap from a beam hard by, I slipped on the newly frozen ice to the tub, and over we went, soap, tub and myself, all separated in different quarters of the room. Those two minutes had sufficed to transmute my water into smooth and glassy ice."

Singing on Carpet.

Standing upon carpet has a tendency to muffle the voice, since a layer of inelastic and nonconducting material is then interposed between the seat of voice production and the floor, which, when it is not covered, acts as a sound board, taking up the vibrations and giving increased effect and distinctness to them. This can be illustrated by placing a timepiece first upon a rug or carpet and then upon the bare floor. In the latter position the ticking is much louder, because the vibrations of the clock are then much more forcibly communicated to the floor and so to the air of the room and finally to the ear by actual contact between the clock and the floor. A carpet damps or kills these vibrations because it is a bad conductor of sound. The difference, which is so audible in this case, is in some degree to be detected when the voice is heard under similar conditions.

Camels In War.

The camel is a good soldier. It may be stupidity, and it may be bravery, but a camel is as steady under fire as a tower. The Persians mounted small cannon on the backs of their camels and called them zambwahs, or little wasps. This fashion was adopted in India, and after the battle of Sobraon 2,000 of the artillery camels were captured. In the Indian mutiny the British had a camel corps of 150 beasts, and on the back of each camel sat a Scotch highlander in his kilt.

In 1878 the British used camels against the Afghans, and the government paid for 50,000 camels that died in those campaigns. Many of these were driven to death by their owners in order that they might claim the government bounty. There was also a camel corps which did good service in the Sudan war against the mahdi.

The Deadliest Poison.

Cyanide of potassium and hydrocyanic or prussic acid are considered by most people to be about the most poisonous of known substances. This is an error. They are the most rapidly acting of all poisons, but not the most potent. One drop of pure prussic acid placed in the eye of a large dog will kill it within two seconds, and such a dose will kill a man. But there is an alkaloid in aconite root called pseudaconitine, one three-hundredth part of a grain of which will kill a moderate sized animal. This is the deadliest poison known, being 300 times as toxic as prussic acid.

Her Case Is Hopeless.

A little girl became so accustomed to exaggeration and misstatement that nobody could believe her, and her parents were greatly annoyed by the unfortunate reputation that she was acquiring.

One afternoon her mother said to her: "Now, listen, Lillian, and heed my words. What has happened to one sinner may easily happen to another. You know what happened to Ananias and Sapphira, don't you?"

"Yes'm. I do. They fell dead on the street corner, and I saw 'em carried into a drug store."

Loyal to the Last.

"Weren't you [illegible] annoyed by the manner in which your wife played when she was your partner at whist?"

"No," answered [illegible] stoutly; "I wasn't [illegible]. I was puzzled. I couldn't help wondering who made that fool assertion about its being wrong to trump your partner's ace."—Washington Star.

They Were Orphans.

"What a mendacious duffer you are, Philius," said Dillus. "You said this was an orphan asylum, instead of which it is an old men's home."

"Well, you go in and look for an old man who isn't an orphan. You won't find him!"

Mrs. Fairbanks tells how neglect of warning symptoms will soon prostrate a woman. She thinks woman's safeguard is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Ignorance and neglect are the cause of untold female suffering, not only with the laws of health but with the chance of a cure. I did not heed the warnings of headaches, organic pains, and general weariness, until I was well nigh prostrated. I knew I had to do something. Happily I did the right thing. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound faithfully, according to directions, and was rewarded in a few weeks to find that my aches and pains disappeared, and I again felt the glow of health through my body. Since I have been well I have been more careful, I have also advised a number of my sick friends to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and they have never had reason to be sorry. Yours very truly, MRS. MAY FAIRBANKS, 210 South 7th St., Minneapolis, Minn." SIFTINGS OF SCIENCE.

That coral reefs are made up entirely of the skeletons of animals and algae is proved by borings to a depth of more than 1,000 feet in the Pacific island of Funafuti.

The discovery is said to have been made in England of a new spirit, "unlike either petrol or alcohol," and "not unpleasant" in odor, which is cheap and will take the place of petrol in running automobiles.

"The chromophone" was exhibited recently to an invited audience in a London theater. It combines the cinematograph and gramophone. Conversations and vocal and instrumental music, synchronized with the movements of the figures, accompany the pictures.

That thought must have some definite vehicle, even when unexpressed, most psychologists agree. That this vehicle is the mental image of speech has been asserted by some, while others believe that it may be also the image of written language or some special combination of images that is neither of these.

Edouard Meyer finds that the vegetable organism, as well as the animal, gives off N-rays in varying quantities, as may be made evident by the feeble fluorescent screen. The most marked indications are given by the green parts, such as stems, and especially leaves, but the emanations are feebly detectable from the flower. On treating tissues in active growth with the vapor of chloroform, so as to slacken their vital functions, the N-ray indications were correspondingly lessened.

FOOD FACTS

What an M. D. Learned.

A prominent physician of Rome, Georgia, went through a food experience which he makes public:

"It was my own experience that first led me to advocate Grape-Nuts food, and I also know from having prescribed it to convalescents and other weak patients that the food is a wonderful rebuilder and restorer of nerve and brain tissue, as well as muscle. It improves the digestion and sick patients always gain just as I did in strength and weight very rapidly.

"I was in such a low state that I had to give up my work entirely and go to the mountains of this state; but two months there did not improve me; in fact I was not quite as well as when I left home. My food absolutely refused to sustain me and it became plain that I must change; then I began to use Grape-Nut food and in two weeks I could walk a mile without the least fatigue and in five weeks returned to my home and practice, taking up hard work again. Since that time I have felt as well and strong as I ever did in my life.

"As a physician who seeks to help all sufferers I consider it a duty to make these facts public." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Big Cattle Show.

Three great cattle breeders' associations will hold shows at the Minnesota state fair. The displays of the American Shorthorn Breeders' association and of the American Hereford Cattle Breeders' association are well known to patrons of the fair, but the American Aberdeen Angus Breeders has not been as prominent. The breed is constantly growing in favor, and Aberdeen Angus cattle are now extensively raised on the Minnesota stock farms. Recognizing the value of this breed the board of managers of the state fair have devoted a generous premium classification to the Aberdeen Angus breeders, which is supplemented by 50 special premiums offered by the American Angus Breeders' association, about $1,000 in cash prizes being offered for Aberdeen Angus cattle. C. F. Curtis, of Ames, Ia., will judge the Aberdeen Angus cattle this year.

The Minnesota state fair opens Aug. 29 and closes Sept. 3. Half fare rates have been secured on all railroads leading to the Twin Cities.

Well Pleased.

James Wilson, secretary of agriculture, was in St. Paul on a visit of inspection to the Minnesota experiment station. Secretary Wilson was enthusiastic over the work which is being done at the state farm. He says that the Minnesota station hardly has its equal in the world; that the work in research and agricultural experiment which is being done there is of the greatest value, and that it will revolutionize many ideas in regard to agricultural methods. The experiments in regard to the development of dairy products and the feeding of dairy animals are among the most important which are being done at the station. The results of the investigation concerning the feeding of dairy animals going on at the institution will be made public soon, and will astonish the authorities on the subject. The department at Washington is entering into hearty co-operation with those in charge of the experiment station.

The Little Red School House.

Little red school houses on the hill are being built in Minnesota in large numbers, if the school loans made by the state investment board are an indication of the number of new structures. The board loaned approximately $500,000 in the fiscal year ending July 31, 1903, and the amount will be greater in 1904. This sum includes loans to counties and townships, but a large part of it is to school districts for building new school houses or repairing old structures. The state auditor has no information as to the character of the new school houses, but it is learned from other sources that the buildings erected this year are generally more substantial and more commodious than those built in previous years.

A Little Hero.

Perishing in trying to save his younger brother from drowning in the Mississippi, at Minneapolis, John Otter, aged 10 years, died a hero.

Several boys were swimming near Thirteenth avenue NE, when Mathies Otter, aged 6 years, ventured beyond his depth and cried for help. His brother hurried into the water and caught the little fellow. He managed to push him to the shore, but was so fatigued that the current was too much for him and he was himself carried beyond his depth. Before his companions on the shore realized what was happening, the young hero sank and drowned.

Will Improve Power.

C. C. Cokefair, general manager of the General Power company, owner of the water power on the St. Louis river at Duluth has returned from the East and announces that the bonds of the company have been placed and plenty of money will shortly be forthcoming to develop the water power. The company is making preparations to award the contracts at once for the construction and machinery. The installation of the first thirty horse-power will cost $3,000,000. The plan is to use water power to develop electrical power for transmission.

Prohibition Ticket.

The prohibition party of this state held its convention in Minneapolis, and placed in nomination a state ticket, headed by C. W. Dorsett of Minneapolis, for governor. Mr. Dorsett had no opposition in the actual balloting, although George F. Wells of St. Paul was also nominated and withdrew his name in favor of the Minneapolis man. J. F. Heiberg, of Heiberg, was named for lieutenant governor; L. J. Von Fossen, attorney general; H. A. Rigg, secretary of state; Delbert U. Wells, treasurer; F. R. McManigle, auditor.

PUT SUGAR IN THE SOUP.

Smith Thought It Was Tea; Then He Deliberately Lied Out of It.

There had been a glorious game of golf, followed by a jolly dinner at the club house, relates the Chicago Record-Herald.

Sometimes it is not the correct thing to tell even a truthful story with real names, hence it happens that it was the Joneses who gave the spread and the person that happened in was Smith.

Smith is really a man of parts, wealthy, intelligent and genial, and usually knows "what's what," but he is not given to swell affairs and is not dressy, withal.

A business call had taken Smith to the club house, and Jones, seeing him, called him to the table after the others had begun. Soon as he was seated, being preoccupied by salutations from other persons at the table that he knew, he was absently sweetening the cup at his elbow, when Mrs. Jones, hoping to make the matter quite plain to this plain man, said, shrinkingly:

"Ah—Mr. Smith—er—that is the soup."

"Yes, thank you," Smith nonchalantly replied. "Yes'm, I understand. But I always sweeten my bouillon," with the slightest emphasis on "bouillon." But Smith was at that moment a prevaricator, to put it mildly. He really thought the cup was tea, and probably never tasted sweetened bouillon in his life.

Disappointment.

The young man with the swell suit, slender cane, and jaunty air, was conscious of being observed.

Out of the corner of his eye he saw that the people on the other side of the street were looking at him as he sauntered along.

A sign on a letter box, "Fresh Paint," attracted his attention.

He stopped and looked at it.

But he did not touch it.

He turned, instead, and looked at the people on the other side of the street through his monocle.

Then he resumed his sauntering.

Strong Language.

Fredericksburg, Ind., June 20.—Rev. Enoch P. Stevens, of this place, uses strong language in speaking of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and he gives good reasons for what he says:—

"I can't praise Dodd's Kidney Pills too much," says Mr. Stevens. "They have done me so much good. I was troubled with my Kidneys so much that I had to get up two or three times in the night, and sometimes in the day when starting to the waterhouse the water would come from me before getting there. Two boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me entirely.

NEW HOMES in the WEST

382,000 ACRES of Fertile and Well-Watered FARM LANDS in the Rosebud Country to be thrown open for settlement.

The lands to be thrown open are contained in that part of the Reservation lying in Gregory County, South Dakota. Each square (see map) represents a Township—36 sections.

Under President Roosevelt's proclamation United States Registry Land Offices are to be opened July 5th at Yankton, Fairfax and Bonesteel, S. D., for the registration of applicants for these lands. The registration books will remain open until July 23d, and commencing July 28th, drawings will take place, to determine the order in which the applicants will be permitted to make final entry and settlement. The final entry begins at Bonesteel, August 8th. No one is permitted to register or make entry to land by mail, but must be personally present at one of the three points named for registration and at Bonesteel for final entry.

The lands are well watered by the Missouri, Niobrara and White rivers and are remarkably fertile, situated in the midst of the great corn belt of the Missouri Valley, where similar land is worth from $20 to $50 an acre. With an altitude of about 2200 feet, they are in a region which cannot be excelled for healthfulness.

The direct route to the Rosebud Country is via the Chicago & Northwestern Railway, the only double-track railway between Chicago and the Missouri River. Full particulars may be had by addressing W. B. KNISKERN, Passenger Traffic Manager, Chicago, or any Agent of the Northwestern Line.

THE CANDIDATES ARE NOMINATED

Republicans Name Theodore Roosevelt, of New York, for President and Charles Warren Fairbanks, of Indiana, for Vice President.

Chicago, June 24.—Theodore Roosevelt was placed in nomination for president of the United States in the republican national convention Wednesday by Former Gov. Frank S. Black, of New York. When at 11:05 the orator named the candidate "Theodore Roosevelt" one of the most remarkable demonstrations ever seen in a national convention began. A roar from 10,000 throats filled the hall. Cheers, songs, whistling, megaphone discord and band music broke forth when Mr. Black finished his nominating speech and placed Roosevelt's name before the convention. A short time later a similar demonstration occurred when Senator Fairbanks, of Indiana, was named by acclamation for the second place on the ticket.

THE FIRST DAY.

Temporary Organization—Speech by Chairman Root.

Chicago, June 22.—Without a disturbing element to impede smooth operation the first day's program for the republican national convention was carried out like clockwork. Not a jarring sound was heard, not a false step taken. An organization was perfected preparatory to the adoption of a platform and the making of nominations in the succeeding days of the convention.

Mr. Root's Address.

Mr. Root began his address with a review of the history of the republican party, following it down from Lincoln to McKinley, and at the mention of the names of these and others of the great men of the party he was greeted with prolonged applause, and when he said: "When with McKinley we remember Hanna," there was a demonstration, the delegates standing.

The administration's Panama canal policy received a round of applause when Mr. Root declared that "the weaklings would have postponed its construction to another generation."

Mr. Root's challenge, of "judgment on the record of these republican administrations," was the signal for a shout and applause. Reverential silence prevailed as the speaker alluded briefly to the assassination of President McKinley, and again applause as his successor's record was reviewed.

Mr. Root concluded his address with the words "Theodore Roosevelt," and they were magic to the delegates. The most marked demonstration of the session ensued. The delegates climbed on their chairs and tossed hats and handkerchiefs into the air.

The lists of committees were then read, and at 2:12 the convention adjourned, to reconvene on Wednesday at noon.

THE SECOND DAY.

Cannon Made Permanent Chairman—Other Proceedings.

Chicago, June 23.—Because Speaker Joseph G. Cannon was the central figure the proceedings of the republican national convention Wednesday took on a picturesqueness and demonstrativeness which Tuesday was looked for in vain. From the moment he was escorted to the platform to wield the gavel as the permanent chairman the entire atmosphere of the convention changed. Enthusiasm which had lain dormant burst forth and the applause rang true and hearty. He made a speech and the audience cheered whether he spoke jocularly or in serious vein.

Report of Credentials Committee.

The report of the committee on credentials interested the convention only so far as it dealth with the Wisconsin situation. Senator McComas, of Maryland, chairman of the committee, read a report of the investigation of the contest; he took the delegates into the confidence of the committee and explained in detail that a thorough canvass was made into the merits of the contest, despite the fact that the contestants had withdrawn their claims on the ground that fair treatment could not be had. He said the imputation was directed at the convention itself and though resented deeply by the committee the inquiry was exhaustive and patient. The report closed with a declaration that the "Stalwart" faction led by Senators Spooner and Quarles, Representative Babcock and Judge Emil Baensch, the four delegates-at-large is the regular republican party in Wisconsin. This national endorsement of the faction headed by the two United States senators from that state evoked prolonged applause.

Platform Adopted.

When the committee on resolutions was called upon for its report, Senator Lodge, of Massachusetts, took the rostrum, and proceeded to read the declaration of principles. He was frequently interrupted by applause. Senator Lodge moved the adoption of the platform at the conclusion of the reading. Chairman Cannon put the question and after a rousing vote in the affirmative declared the report unanimously adopted.

THE THIRD DAY.

Roosevelt and Fairbanks Named as the Candidates.

Chicago, June 24.—Chairman Cannon called the republican national convention to order at 10:30 a. m. Thursday. Rev. Thadeus A. Snively, rector of St. Chrysostom's church, was presented and invoked the Divine blessing.

Call for Nominations.

Chairman Cannon at once announced that the next order of business would be a roll call of the states for the nomination of president of the United States.

The clerk called "Alabama," and immediately Oscar R. Hundley, of that state, mounted a chair and announced that Alabama requested the honor and privilege of yielding its place on the roll to the state of New York.

Instantly the convention was in an uproar. The New York delegation were on their feet like one man waving their flags and shouting wildly. Ex-Gov. Frank Black, of New York, who was to deliver the nominating speech in behalf of President Roosevelt, immediately started for the platform amid the wildest enthusiasm on the part of the delegates.

Mr. Black said both parties agreed on one plank—the equality of man—the difference being that the democrats sought to make all "as low as the lowest" and the republicans "as high as the highest." "Never interrupt the enemy while he is making a mistake," was one epigrammatic remark. "The most important arguments are afforded by contrast," was another. Mr. Black then proceeded to contrast the unity of the republicans with the dissent of the democrats on principles and men. He said the party needed no new name. It had never failed to express the calm will of the people. He said the party was ever ready to advance convictions and give reason for them.

Convention in Uproar.

Gov. Black pronounced the nominating words at just 11:06 o'clock. As he did so he retired quickly from the platform. But the words "Theodore Roosevelt" had not left his lips when there was a shout. The convention was on its feet. Like the crash of thunder that follows the lightning, the enthusiasm began. Flags were in the air, hats were thrown up, men jumped on to their chairs, women stood and shouted. The air was rent with one continuous prolonged shout from thousands of throats. So mighty was the volume of sound that nothing definite in the way of articulate sound was distinguished. At this point, the band struck up. Its strains, however, were only faintly discernible in the mighty din. Then, Chairman Cannon took a hand. Unfurling a tattered silk flag, he advanced to the extreme edge of the platform and began to wave it.

The applause continued about 23 minutes, when Chairman Cannon vigorously rapped for order.

Seconding Speeches Made.

Seconding speeches were made by Senator Beveridge, of Indiana; George A. Knight, of California; Harry Stillwell Edwards, of Georgia; Ex-Gov. Bradley of Kentucky; Joseph B. Cotton, of Minnesota, and Harry S. Cummings, of Maryland.

The clerk then called the roll by states. When Alabama responded with her entire vote for Roosevelt, there was a cheer. As the states followed in alphabetical order and each response ended with the words "Theodore Roosevelt," the cheer was repeated.

Vote Is Unanimous.

Chairman Cannon announced at the conclusion of the roll call that Theodore Roosevelt had received the entire vote of the convention, 994, and it only remained for him to announce his nomination for the presidency by the republican party.

The enthusiasm following the announcement of the chairman was of much briefer duration than that which followed the first call, the cheers not lasting over two minutes.

Mr. Cannon then announced: "The clerk will call the roll for the presentation of candidates for vice president." Mr. Hundley, of Alabama, as before on the presidential roll call, announced that his state desired to waive its right in favor of the state of Iowa.

Dolliver Nominates Fairbanks.

This meant Senator Dolliver, who was to deliver the first nominating speech in favor of Senator Fairbanks, of Indiana. As the tall form of Iowa's junior senator was seen pressing toward the platform, the cries and shouts broke out and they were redoubled in violence when Chairman Cannon led forward Senator Dolliver and spoke a few words of introduction.

The first mention of Senator Fairbanks' name was the signal for cheers, which were renewed when he formally presented the name of the Indiana senator.

When the applause subsided Senator Depew, of New York; Senator Foraker of Ohio; Gov. Pennypacker of Pennsylvania, and ex-Senator Carter, of Montana, in turn made short speeches seconding the nomination.

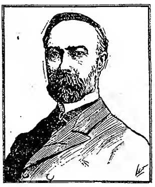
Named by Acclamation.

The roll call on vice president was dispensed with and Fairbanks nominated by acclamation, after several favorite sons had been withdrawn.

Graeme Stewart, of Illinois, was recognized and moved "that the convention do now adjourn sine die." Chairman Cannon put this motion amid great confusion as the delegates and spectators were leaving the hall. He declared it carried and brought his gavel down with a resounding whack at just 2:25 o'clock.

The formal notification of President Roosevelt of his nomination will be made on July 27 at Oyster Bay. Speaker Cannon will be chairman of the notification committee.

The chairman of the committee to notify Charles W. Fairbanks of his nomination as vice president will be the temporary chairman of the convention, Hon. Elihu Root, of New York. The formal notification will be given, probably at Indianapolis, August 3.



CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS.

The democrats are making a errible howl about nominating heir candidate for president, while the G. O. P. is taking it as ool as can be be, with Teddy itting well in the saddle of the lephant.

The next legislature will elect United States senator. It might e well for the public as well as he senators if every aspirant for egislative honors was compelled o express his preferences for enator before the nominations vere made.

Now that the nomination for overnor is over let us have a ittle rest and peace, but the pri-nary campaign is already on nd after that the campaign, so t is liable to keep the politicians uite busy until after the general lection in November.

The nominees for county of-ices do not seem to be in a rush bout filing for the nomination. t seems to be a case of dreading o get into the fight by one can-idate for fear the other candi-ates for the same office will tart to spring roarbacks for emul.

Senator Charles W. Fairbanks, f Indiane, Roosvelt's running nate, is undoubtedly as strong a andidate as the party could resent for the nomination for ice president, and Indiana can ot be classed as one of the oubtful states, but as safe for he Republican party.

And now comes the news that he lands on the Thief River 'alls reservation was not quite s good as was expected and hat Congressman Steenerson is o blame because some of it has gravel subsoil instead of clay. f Halvor does not promise to ave the next reservation he pens up better land he stands o show of being reelected to ongress, says his opponents.

GOOD ROADS AGITATION.

A great many agriculturists re skeptical relative to the prac-ical efficiency of the so-called "good roads" i. e. a road con-tructed along scientific lines. The farmer does not fear so much hat the roads will not be good s he does that they will cost too much. He would rather get long with his roads as they are han spend large sums on modern roads of the stone or plank kind. The farmer is not to be blamed n this attitude, in as much as it s correct, but he should not for-et that he and his neighbors vill regulate the cost of all roads uilt and that it is possible that better results can be obtained rom the same outlay of money if cientific methods are followed ather than the crnde one in ogue in the Valley generally to-lay.

The organization of a good roads organization for Polk county at this time would be most opportune. The campaign or better methods of transpor-ation can find no richer field than that of the Red River Val-ey. While the soil is most ex-cellent for raising crops it is not f the nature that makes good roads. If the farmers of the county but be made to under-stand the saving in time and money of better highways over which to transport his produce to market or to haul his manu-factured commodities to the farm from the town, he would look with more favor on the stone or gravel roads. He would be will-ing to spend more time and money in making roads. The matter should be pushed and the roads in the county made passa-ble in all kinds of weather, to a great extent, at least.—Crookston Times.

Strange Murder

Terrible Crime of Indiana Farmer--Goaded to Desperation.

Insults of Son-in-law Drove Him to Retaliate by Shooting -- Was He Insane?

The transfer of John W. Terrel from the jail in Bluffton, Wells county, Ind., to the Eastern Hospital For the Insane at Richmond is perhaps the closing chapter in a tragedy that has been exceptionally sensational from the beginning.

John W. Terrel was one of the best known and at the same time one of the most prosperous farmers of Wells county. His favorite daughter had been married some eighteen months before to a young man named Melvin Wolfe, but the union proved unhappy, and she had returned to her father's house. Wolfe after the separation did everything possible to annoy his wife and, it is said, indulged in threats against her and her father. His favorite method was to drive past the Terrel home and apply epithets to his wife. One Sunday afternoon Wolfe drove past in a buggy with a woman. He cursed his wife and others sitting in the yard. Again and again he drove past the house, each time using the most insulting language, especially to his wife. As Wolfe approached for the fourth or fifth time, Terrel ran into the house, took down his shotgun and as his son-in-law drove up fired both barrels and severely wounded Wolfe in the leg. Wolfe whipped up his horse and drove rapidly to the village of Petroleum, four miles distant, where he was placed on an operating table.

FIRED BOTH CHARGES OF SHOT.

Terrel as soon as he had reloaded his gun ran to the stable, where he mounted a horse and without coat or hat started in pursuit. When he reached Petroleum he rode directly to the doctor's office, where a large crowd had assembled. Terrel threw himself from his horse, rushed to the side of his prostrate son-in-law, placed the muzzle of the gun against his head and fired both charges of shot into it.

Those who saw Terrel as he rode up to the office and as he entered say that his countenance was that of a veritable demon. His hair was streaming in the wind, his face was set, his eyes were ablaze. He did not speak to any one, and after he had gained admission to the office he seemed lost to everything but the man who lay upon the operating table helpless before him. After firing the fatal shot he walked out of the office and surrendered to the sheriff.

Terrel never seemed to comprehend the enormity of the deed. When brought to trial a plea of insanity was entered, but the jury found him guilty and fixed his punishment at imprisonment for life.

The presiding judge permitted a commission to inquire into Terrel's mental condition, and its verdict was in accord with the general belief.

After receiving the verdict of the commission the judge made a careful investigation of authorities, and, though wishing to avert sentence, he found it impossible to do so under the law, and the prisoner was duly sentenced to life imprisonment.

It was at this point that the governor interfered. He had been informed that the prisoner was entirely under his control after sentence should be passed upon him. A parole was issued, and the sheriff was ordered to impanel a lunacy commission, the prisoner's sanity was again inquired into, and a second time he was declared insane.

The action of the governor indicates that the sympathy for Terrel extended to the executive office, and his exercise of the right to parole the prisoner, at least till he can be intelligently treated, is generally approved.

FALLS FROM GREAT HEIGHTS.

Marvelous Escapes From Death of a Lucky House Painter.

Max Gerth is a house and sign painter with a charmed life who lives in St. Louis. Since 1898 he has had the most thrilling experiences as an impromptu "high tumbler" of any man who lives to tell of it.

He has had one fall of nine stories, one fall of the equal of six stories, one fall of one story and one more, the latest, of four stories. In addition he has twice tumbled into the East river at New York, once to escape from a burning steamer and to save the lives of two children and the other time as the result of the treachery of a boat hook and a painter's boat. In telling of his remarkable adventures Gerth said:

"I didn't begin to fall much until 1898. I was one of four painters at work on the ninth floor of a New York skyscraper. A rope gave way, and all of us fell. As I went down—it seemed I was falling from the sky—I began to reach out for something to catch.

"I grabbed at everything, shadows and wires and cornices and window sills, and caught nothing until after it seemed I had been falling an hour. Then my hands touched a life line swung from the top of the building. I held to it, though the jerk sent the rope whizzing through my hands and tore the flesh off my palms. I broke the fall about two stories above the ground and lowered myself easily then. The three men who had been on the stage with me were instantly killed. Except for my hands and a few bruises I escaped injury and was soon back at work. Nothing more of any consequence happened to me until the afternoon of the burning of the steamer Salle in New York harbor.

"I had barely got to the deck when the alarm of fire was sounded. The ship burst into flame. Sailors on board the Salle were hurrying the passengers and other occupants of the ship into small boats and lowering them into the water. I saw a lot of the men jump into a small boat and take two children in with them. But the men were terribly excited, and something went wrong with the tackle. The boat hung as it was being lowered. Somebody cut a rope at one end, and the bow fell, tumbling all the occupants into the water.

"I sprang into the river to try to save the children. I know something about swimming, and it was lucky I did. I caught both the children and then swam around between burning steamers and ferries and fireboats for half an hour. Nobody would pick us up. Finally, with the children, I made my way to the foot of Harper street and dragged myself and them up on dry land. Nine men working in the steerage with me at the time I was sent on deck for more paint were burned to death.

"IT SEEMED I WAS FALLING FROM THE SKY."

"It was only a few months later when I got another tumble that promised to put me out of the painting business for good. I was at work above the bridge on the Kronprinz Wilhelm when a rope gave way, and my paint buckets and I went tumbling down. I fell through a hatchway and down into the steerage, a distance in all something like six stories. I don't know how I got out of that alive. I came to St. Louis in February. Soon after I was working alone on a stage four stories up. Suddenly I heard a familiar noise. It was that of a rotten rope parting. I looked up, and the next instant I was doing a pinwheel act in midair, with paint buckets trying to beat me to the ground.

"And then I saw a frail awning sticking out over the sidewalk. It was almost under me. I wondered if by the time I dropped that far my body would be in such a position that I could catch at the awning. I kicked out and tried to straighten up and threw my hands out to catch the rim of the awning. It worked. I was almost head down when I reached the awning, but I caught it. So instead of a smashed skull I have only a cracked ankle, and that will soon be all right."

Mrs. Andrew Jordahl was at Fosston last Friday interviewing a dentist.

The Kvindeforening met at the residence of Knute Tveitli yesterday afternoon.

A serious cutting affray. A big cut, and all kinds of cuts cured by Mark's Carbolic salve.

Mr. and Mrs. Daymon of Badger Creek, have been visiting relatives here during the past week.

W. S. Austin and Miss Aason left for Minneapolis last week for a brief visit with relatives and friends.

William Bruckman, of Winsor, was a pleasant caller at this office Wednesday, and left cash for another year's subscription.

Hans Johnson smiled with a broad smile Wednesday morning and on making inquiry we got this reply, it's a ten pound boy.

The Sunbeam office acknowledges a very pleasant call on Saturday from Misses Noma Green of Winsor, and Ida Larson.

W. H. Hanney and family, of Winsor, left Saturday afternoon for Rochester, Minn. They will drive the entire distance with team.

W. G. Hunt and Nels Bolstad went down to Crookston Monday as delegates to the Republican County Convention from this township.

Engvold Wald is now a real estate owner on the Red Lake reservation, having bid in 108 acres five miles northeast of Thief River Falls at $4.60 per acre.

The Town Board of Review met here Monday to correct the assessment and listen to any complaints that might be brought before them of unequal assessments.

George Singer and a large number of Chicago visitors who are looking for a fine quarter section of land on the Red Lake reservation, left for Thief River Falls last Tuesday.

George S. Baird and Gust Thompson, who went to Canada three weeks ago, returned last Saturday better satisfied than ever with Minnesota, as they did not like that part of Canada they visited at all.

Two of Louis Olson's children in Eden Township narrowly escaped death last week by eating rat poison, which had been left within their reach. They were very sick but are now on the road to recovery.

Winsor will celebrate the Fourth of July in grand old style. Prominent orators will speak during the day. Races of all kinds in the afternoon. Fire works in the evening. Also a good big bowery and good music for dancing during the evening and night have been arranged. Come all and bring your friends and a good time is assured.

I. D. Cahernaugh and family left for Shellbrook, Canada, on Monday, where they will make their future home. They ordered The Sunbeam to follow them so as to keep posted on the doings of their old home. Mr. Cahernaugh was one of the pioneer settlers of Winsor township and sold his farm to go over and become a subject of Great Britain.

There was not as large a turn out to the caucus on Saturday evening as was expected, as the farmers were busy. The following were candidates for election as delegates and received the number of votes set opposite their names: W. G. Hunt 20, N. Bolstad 16, A. G. Arneson 15, C. O. Larson 11. W. G. Hunt and Nels Bolstad were elected to represent this township in the County Convention.

There is probably no place on earth better than a country newspaper office to learn how many kinds of people there are, says the Pierson (Iowa) Enterprise. Some get huffy if a statement is sent, others will not pay until they receive a statement. Some will pay without a statement and others will not pay whether a statement is sent or not. Some thought they owed more and some thought they didn't owe so much. Some say they couldn't get along without the paper, and others say it doesn't amount to much. But the meanest, scrubbiest in the list is the man who takes it until he is shut off for non-payment and then spends half his time explaining how he used to take "the thing" but stopped it because it was "no 'count."

Louis Gonyea, the deputy sheriff of Crookston, has filed for the nomination of sheriff of Polk county on the Republican ticket. Louis is one of the "boys" and that settles it. Don't run your head against a stone wall gentlemen, for we are firmly of the opinion that Louis will be the next sheriff of Polk county, and don't you forget it.

Tom Bjoin has filed for the nomination for sheriff of Polk county. This is the same old Tom that sold you farmers them threshing machines and took a mortgage on your last cow, and now he wants to be elected sheriff to put you into jail.

How We Breathe.

Men and women do not breathe alike. In a woman the breathing is from the thorax, or chest, while in a man it is mainly from the diaphragm, which is lower down. This peculiar difference is so marked that it is possible to recognize by it a woman disguised as a man, although the disguise may be faultless in other respects. Most physiologists say that this difference is not due to sex, but owing to artificial conditions, such as the wearing of corsets.

Conscientious.

Weary Walker—No, ma'am; I ain't dirty from choice. I'm bound by honor. I wrote a testimonial for a soapmaker once and promised 'to use no other.' Mrs. Housekeep—Well, why do you not use that? Weary Walker—Because, ma'am, that firm failed about five years ago.

He Didn't Want to Arbitrate.

"The reason I can't get along with my wife is that she wants to submit all our differences to arbitration."

"To arbitration?"

"Yes. She always wants to refer disputes to her mother."

Feeling Better.

She—So your ideal jilted you? He—Yes, but I am somewhat reconciled. I have since learned that she married hers.—Puck.

Men Who Burn Money.

"There are not many men who smoke cigars at $2 each," said the cigar man in a downtown restaurant much patronized by customers who do not have to worry about the cost of their luncheon, "but we have to keep them in stock. When they are called for, it is usually by a couple of old chums who are lunching together after a long parting who are feeling good and who want a heavy smoke after a liberal meal. As a matter of fact, most men think they are burning money when they pay $1 for a cigar. Sixty cents for one cigar and from that down to three for 50 cents is considered about the right thing. We sell a good many cigars at 35 cents each or three for $1. In fact, they are the standard thing in high priced cigars. Occasionally a customer will buy a box of two dollar cigars or even more expensive than that for a birthday present or to send to some friend going to Europe. These cigars are made only by skilled workmen and represent the highest perfection in cigar making."—New York Times.

A Full Menagerie of Names.

A story is told of a Cherokee woman who married six times and never got out of the animal line. When she was a girl she was known as Miss Mollie Panther. She married an Indian named Coon, and when that gentleman was transferred to the happy hunting ground she soon became Mrs. Fox. The Fox did not last always, and when he entered the last chase the widow married a mild, placid man named Mule, who never had any kick coming till he harnessed up to draw his load across the great divide. After a period of mourning the widow again entered the realms of matrimonial bliss and became Mrs. Wolf, and when his scalp went to the Great Father, along with his corporeal remains, she became the wife of a man named Tiger, and when Mr. Tiger changed his stripes for a pretty white robe in the great beyond she selected another husband of the name of Rabbit.—Kansas City Journal.

History of Child Slavery.

It was not until 1819 that factory work for children under nine was prohibited or that children between nine and sixteen were not allowed to work more than twelve hours a day, and it was not until 1802 that the law required an apprentice to be provided with two suits of clothing, one of which was to be new each year. Notwithstanding this partial protection, when Mrs. Trollope wrote the "Factory Boy" in 1840 it was illustrated by pictures of ragged and emaciated children which would now be regarded only as gross exaggerations of the truth, but which then produced no adverse comment and were perhaps as influential in reforming the abuses they displayed as was "Uncle Tom's Cabin" in calling attention to the evils of slavery.—New York World.

Some Superstitions.

To break a mirror to many persons indicates the death of the person who last looked into the mirror or some serious injury to that person. The savage tribes of nearly every country believed that striking either the image or the shadow of any person meant an injury to that person. They believed that the image or the shadow represented the spirit of a person, and many are the tales told of magicians who inflicted the injuries on persons they inflicted on their images. To drop a stone into water where the image of a person was reflected meant death or some dire disaster.

A Queer Remedy.

Francis Grose, whose work on the popular superstitions of the day was compiled in the year 1787, says: "The peasants of Suffolk have a simple and never failing cure for ague. It is this: Write the word 'Abacadabara' in form as shown below, place it in a nutshell and wear the same about the neck." The form is here given:

A B A C A D A B A R A
B A C A D A B A R
A C A D A B A

The Difference.

At one time there were two members of the house of commons named Montagu Mathew and Matthew Montagu, the former a tall handsome man and the latter a little man. During a session of parliament the speaker having addressed the latter as the former, Montagu Mathew observed that it was strange he should make such a mistake, as there was as great a difference between them as between a horse chestnut and a chestnut horse.

Both Satisfied.

"I'm satisfied," said the angry tailor, "that you don't intend to pay me this money."

"All right," chuckled the happy debtor. "If you're satisfied, I am."

A REASON FOR SICKNESS.

Healthy kidneys take from the blood every 24 hours 500 grains of impure, poisonous matter—more than enough to cause death. Weakened kidneys leave this waste in the blood, and you are soon sick. To get well, cure the kidneys with Doan's Kidney Pills, the great kidney specific.

Mrs. J. H. Bowles of 118 Core Street, Durham, N. C., says: "I was sick and bedfast for over nine months, and the doctor who attended me said unless I submitted to an operation for gravel I would never be well. I would not consent to that and so continued to suffer. My back was so weak I could not stand or walk, and it ached constantly. The first day after I began using Doan's Kidney Pills I felt relief, and in a short time I was up and around the same as ever, free from backache."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mrs. Bowles will be mailed to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Sold by all dealers; price 50 cents per box.

Geronimo, the old Apache chief, stoutly insists that he never was captured by Gen. Miles.

Thomas F. McGerry, former mayor of Ionia, Mich., is now doing duty as a waiter in the penitentiary at Ionia.

Dr. J. J. Eisenbut, of Denver, aged 104, has about begun to live, being convinced that he will reach the age of 1,000.

W. J. H. Murat, a machinist, of Los Angeles, Cal., claims the throne of Naples as a direct descendant of Joachim Murat.

Chilkoot Jack, a stanch friend of the whites, has been elected chief of the Chilkat tribe of Indians in Alaska, to succeed Donowoka, the aged warrior, who died last March.

In the little village of Newbern, Va., lives Mrs. Rebecca Mayo, the last surviving widow of a soldier of the revolution. She married Stephen Mayo at the age of 77 when she was less than 20 years of age.

Martin T. Burke, of La Crosse, Wis., for many years a well-known business man of that city, and by marriage a cousin of Gen. Grant, is the only survivor of the few men who were associated with the great soldier-statesman in the famous old leather store in Galena.

In the class of 1878 at Yale were two bosom friends who have done more than any other persons to shape the political development and to advance the general welfare of Porto Rico and the Philippines. They are Gov. William H. Hunt, who is still in office, and Gov. William H. Taft, now secretary of war.

Judge C. W. Raymond, recently appointed chief justice of the United States court of appeals in Indian territory, was a factory hand in an interior town of Illinois 25 years ago. Joseph G. Cannon, now speaker of the house of representatives, became interested in the young man, induced him to study law, and has remained a helpful friend. Judge Raymond was appointed to the federal court at Muskogee by President McKinley in 1901.

Senator Stewart, of Nevada, enjoys the distinction of being the only man in the senate who has never been shaved. His beard began to grow when he was 16, and has been growing for sixty years.

TWO STEPS.

The Last One Helps the First.

A sick coffee drinker must take two steps to be rid of his troubles and get strong and well again.

The first is to cut off coffee absolutely.

That removes the destroying element. The next step is to take liquid food (and that is Postum Food Coffee) that has in it the elements nature requires to change the blood corpuscles from pale pink or white to rich red, and good red blood builds good strong and healthy cells in place of the broken down cells destroyed by coffee. With well-boiled Postum Food Coffee to shift to, both these steps are easy and pleasant. The experience of a Georgian proves how important both are.

"From 1872 to the year 1900 my wife and I had both been afflicted with sick or nervous headache and at times we suffered untold agony. We were coffee drinkers and did not know how to get away from it for the habit is hard to quit.

"But in 1900 I read of a case similar to ours where Postum Coffee was used in place of the old coffee and a complete cure resulted, so I concluded to get some and try it.

"The result was, after three days' use of Postum in place of the coffee I never had a symptom of the old trouble and in five months I had gained from 145 pounds to 163 pounds.

"My friends asked me almost daily what wrought the change. My answer always is, leaving off coffee and drinking Postum in its place.

"We have many friends who have been benefited by Postum.

"As to whether or not I have stated the facts truthfully I refer you to the Bank of Carrollton or any business firm in that city where I have lived for many years and am well known." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

How Hickerson Celebrated

By T. C. HARBAUGH

I WISH you would brush up the old uniform. You'll find it poked back in the wardrobe, I guess. I haven't seen it since the last celebration and—"

"Of course you haven't," said Mrs. Hickerson. "Don't you know you gave it to that man who came here last summer? You said you didn't want to see the old thing again."

"Did I? Why, that suit cost me $27."

"And you bought it the summer I went without a bonnet. You know you did, Hickerson. You'll have to wear something else to-morrow. They've made you grand marshal, I hear."

"Yes. You see the appreciation in which I am held by the people. It means future and greater honors and—"

"The last time you wore that uniform Herkimer's bull calf tried to get out of the pasture at you. There's too much red in the suit for Independence day. Why, you'd look like Cornwallis in it even if you had it."

"Well, I've got to wear something to-morrow."

"Maybe the tramp will drop round in time and loan you the uniform."

Hickerson said nothing, but went upstairs and dived into the wardrobe. In the darkest corner his hand touched something and lo! out came the flashy garments.

"I thought she didn't know anything about it," he said triumphantly. "Gave that suit to a tramp? Well, I guess not. It is a little red," he went on, surveying the garments. "Wasn't made for a Fourth of July celebration, but it'll do."

He carried the suit downstairs and exhibited it to his wife.

"Found it, did you?" she said. "I thought you wouldn't go poking round after the old thing. They'll take you for a full-fledged Britisher in that."

"But a marshal of a parade is permitted to wear anything that suits him, I reckon. Besides—"

"Whom will you impersonate, Cornwallis or Burgoyne?"

Hickerson did not reply, but stalked off with the suit. She heard him brushing it up in the next room. Hickerson tried it on and went to the mirror.

"Take It Off," Cried the Leader.

"Cornwallis or Burgoyne, eh?" he exclaimed. "What does she know about the revolution, I'd like to know."

The next day he appeared on the streets with the flaming garments. As he walked down to the headquarters of the parade to get his horse he was the observed of all observers.

Spicertown was filling up, so were some of its citizens.

"What's that over yonder?" cried a man on the opposite side of the street from Hickerson. "What rascally Englishman wants to insult a free-born people with that uniform? Here, boys! here's a real Britisher."

Hickerson saw half a dozen fellows rush out of a resort and cross the street.

"Take it off!" cried the leader.

"Take what off? I'm a free-born American and the grand—"

"You're nothing of the kind. This is the glorious Fourth of July and we don't allow any Britisher on the streets. We don't."

"But, gentlemen, I'm Samuel Hickerson, and I've been appointed—"

"'Put no one but Americans on guard,' said Washington," was the interruption. "This is Freedom's day."

* * *

"Samuel," said Mrs. Hickerson a few minutes later as she held up the torn uniform, "the doctor says you stood the stitching very well, quite like an old soldier. The cuts on your head aren't very deep, and your arm isn't broken. They're going past the house now."

"Let 'em go, Mary. I wish King George had conquered this blasted country after all. And that uniform? Don't wait for a tramp to come for it. Throw it in the ash-bin."

Doing Her Share.

The Others (about to start on a Fourth of July picnic)—Why, Mrs. Keremith, where is your basket of luncheon?

Mrs. Kersmith—I didn't have time to pack any. But I've engaged a surgeon. He will join us at the grounds. —Chicago Tribune.

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Hurrah for Our Butter.

Minnesota has captured everything in sight in the first butter scoring at the world's fair.

Butter men say her record in this event is phenomenal, and compliments are being showered on the Bread and Butter State for the great showing made, and state representatives there are just touching the high places as they blushingly receive the compliments.

Minnesota wins first and second place for creamery butter as follows:

M. Sondergard, Hutchinson, W. F. Stahman, Loretta, and L. Larson, Darwin, each 98⅓ points; L. B. Anderson, of Albert Lea, and H. H. Jenson, Clark's Grove, each 98¼ points.

Print Butter: Mrs. J. C. Joslin, of Winetend, first place with 97⅓ points.

Dairy butter: Mrs. L. M. Holmes, of Owatonna, first place, with 96⅓ points.

Thirty five other Minnesota entries scored 96 points or better, which places them in gold medal claim, and over eighty scored for silver medal. The judges were:

Oscar Douglas of Boston, John Middlestead of Chicago and B. D. White of New York, who, without knowing whence the butter came, pronounced it the finest lot they had ever tested; it being the highest average ever attained by any state in such a contest.

They agreed that such results could only be attained by excellent pure food laws carefully enforced, and praised the state dairy and food commission and the commission for the many entries and care shown in making exhibit.

That three men from one state should come within a quarter of a point of the record score for the United States is considered remarkable, and is the topic of conversation among dairy interests.

Wisconsin took third place for creamery butter, with a score of ninety-seven.

North Dakota had nineteen entries in the creamery class. Miller of Ellendale, Knowlan of Wishek, Sutherland of Hemple and Miller of Forman being highest, with 93⅓ points each. The balance were between that and 86, the judges knocking all samples on account of wild onion flavor, otherwise the points were high.

State Fair Races.

Nominations for the Minnesota State Fair races must be placed with Secretary E. W. Randall, Hamline, Minn., very shortly, as the entries positively close at 11 p. m., July 1. Last year's records on the Minnesota track, as well as the very large number of entries and the enormous attendance at the fair, have added to the reputation of this annual meet, and horsemen everywhere are now talking of the probabilities for the meet of this year, which opens on August 29. Interest has been heightened by the increase in the amount of money offered by the state fair management. The purses have always been liberal, there having been for a number of years past none less than $1,000 for harness horses, but this year the management has added $3,000 to the total, which now reaches the handsome sum of $25,000.

Is Not Game.

The inmates of the state institutions will not eat caviare sandwiches as a result of the seizure by the game and fish commission of 600 pounds of caviare at Beaudette. Officials in the attorney general's office held that caviare is neither game nor fish, and that under the law the game and fish commission is not obliged to turn over the caviare to the state institutions. The state board of control did not want the caviare, so Mr. Fullerton will sell it. Caviare costs about 80 cents a pound.

Executive Agent S. F. Fullerton, of the state game and fish commission, says that through the co-operation of game wardens of Minnesota and Canada illegal sturgeon fishing in Rainy river and Lake of the Woods has been reduced to the minimum.

Lightning's Work.

A bolt of lightning struck the house of L. Thomas at St. Paul Park and injured Mrs. Minnie Thomas of Great Falls, Mont., and her 15-year-old son. A gash three inches wide was burned from Mrs. Thomas' left shoulder to her hip. The wound, while not deep, is exceedingly painful, and she is kept in her room from the effects of the shock. Her son Vernon was seated on a sofa. He and the sofa were hurled across the room. The boy was rendered unconscious, and it was fully fifteen minutes before he was brought to.

HONORS WERE PLUMB EVEN

Out-of-Town People Have Something to Talk About as Well as City Folks.

Maxfield Parrish, the illustrator, has a picturesque house in Vermont, and from this pleasant home he often makes excursions into the wildest and most isolated parts of the state, says the New York Tribune.

During a recent visit to New York Mr. Parrish said:

"I stopped overnight at a lonely Vermont farm last month. The house commanded a barren and desolate landscape. It was anything but gay.

"I remember the brief conversation I had with the farmer as he showed me to my bed.

"'A very quiet place,' I said.

"'It is,' said he.

"'Does a newspaper ever find its way here?'

"'Seldom.'

"'Then,' I said, 'you don't hear much of what is going on in New York, eh?'

"'No,' said the farmer, grimly, 'but then, you see, they don't hear much in New York of what is going on here, either.'"

The Preacher's Evidence.

Roland, Ill., June 27.—Diabetes has so long been looked upon as an incurable form of Kidney Disease that a sure cure for it must rank as one of the most valuable medical discoveries of the age. And every day brings forth fresh evidence that Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure Diabetes. Important evidence in their favor is given by Rev. Thos. B. Norman, the well-known Baptist minister here. Mr. Norman says:

"I had all the symptoms of a bad case of Diabetes and received so much benefit from the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills that I cheerfully recommend them to anyone suffering from that dread disease. Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure the worst form of Diabetes."

Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure Diabetes, one of the final stages of Kidney Disease. All the earlier stages, from Backache to Rheumatism, are naturally much more easily cured by the same remedy.

People who sit in their houses and run the business of the world are now planning campaigns for Russia and for Japan. One is reminded of the story which Punch told during the Boer war of two parlor strategists who were walking down the Strand, quarreling with Gen. Buller's poor strategy in crossing the Tugela. Presently they tried to cross the street, and were run over by an omnibus.

The Northwest Particularly Favored.

No other section of the United States is so particularly favored regarding transportation to the World's Fair at St. Louis as the Northwest, for the reason that the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railway is the only road that runs direct to the Fair Grounds, and is the only line that exclusively has a station of its own directly at the entrance of the grounds.

This feature will play a very important part with visitors to the world's greatest show from Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, Manitoba, North Dakota, South Dakota, Wisconsin, Iowa and Minnesota. It is also the most direct and shortest route from the Twin Cities; saves time and eliminates that most disagreeable feature of travel that one must necessarily meet with on other lines, namely, the changing from one car to another en route.

The M. & St. L. trains are composed of the most modern and latest design of vestibuled Pullman sleepers and reclining chair cars, and with their buffet, library and exquisite dining cars attached, leaves no want of the traveler unsupplied in any manner.

Eighteen hours' ride from St. Paul or Minneapolis places one right at the door, as it were, of the main entrance to the Fair Grounds. Near the Minneapolis & St. Louis station may be found hotels of all descriptions, which will save much worry and anxiety, as well as exhaustion, to many visitors. For, those who are compelled to go down town to the Union Station, where all other roads discharge their thousands of passengers from the east and south, must necessarily travel several miles in street cars to reach the grounds.

One will get a fairly good view of the grounds from the large observation windows of the M. & St. L. trains, just before arriving at their exclusive World's Fair station.—Western Architect.

It was hardly necessary for world's fair officials to go to Morocco to secure a bandit. Some real live specimens, who would make Raisuli look like an amateur, could be found no further away than Wall street.—Detroit Free Press.

WHY HOT WEATHER MAKES WOMEN NERVOUS.

Blanche Grey.

A Well Known Canadian Lady Sends Letter of Endorsement to Pe-ru-na.

Miss Mary Burns, 28 Spring Garden Road, Halifax, N. S., writes: "Having used Peruna for indigestion and stomach trouble and to build up a broken down system with the very best results, I am pleased to state my experience with this excellent medicine. I had been troubled with stomach trouble and poor digestion for some years, and although I tried many remedies and dieting, nothing seemed to restore my health until I used Peruna. In three months I had entirely recovered my health and strength."—Mary Burns.

Suggestions by Dr. Hartman.—How to Combat the Nervous Depression Incident to Warm Weather.

Nervousness is very common among women. This condition is due to anaemic nerve centers. The nerve centers are the reservoir for nerve vitality. These centers become bloodless for the want of proper nutrition.

This condition is especially noticeable during the warm season. Every summer an army of invalids are produced as a direct result of weak nervous systems.

This could easily be overcome by the use of Peruna. Peruna strikes at the root of the trouble by correcting the digestion. Perfect digestion furnishes increased nutrition for the nerve centers. Perfectly digested food gives these reservoirs of life a vitality which creates strong, steady nerves, and in this manner fortifies and nourishes life.

Miss Blanche Grey, a prominent young society woman of Memphis, Tenn., in a recent letter from 174 Alabama street, writes: "To a society woman whose nervous force is often taxed to the utmost from lack of rest and irregular meals, I know of nothing which is of so much benefit as Peruna. I took it a few months ago when I felt my strength giving way, and it soon made itself manifest in giving me new strength and health."—Miss Blanche Grey.

Pe-ru-na Contains no Narcotics.

One reason why Peruna has found permanent use in so many homes is that it contains no narcotic of any kind. Peruna is perfectly harmless. It can be used any length of time without acquiring a drug habit. Peruna does not produce temporary results. It is permanent in its effect.

It has no bad effect upon the system, and gradually eliminates catarrh by removing the cause of catarrh. There are a multitude of homes where Peruna has been used off and on for twenty years. Such a thing could not be possible if Peruna contained any drugs of a narcotic nature.

At this season of the year we are peculiarly liable to inflammations of the stomach and bowels. It is the part of wisdom to learn how to cut them short and in the easiest and quickest manner. Peruna does this by its peculiar power over all forms of catarrhal troubles.

GUARANTEED CURE for all bowel troubles, appendicitis, biliousness, bad breath, bad blood, wind on the stomach, foul mouth, headache, indigestion, pimples, pains after eating, liver trouble, sallow complexion and dizziness. When your bowels don't move regularly you are sick. Constipation kills more people than all other diseases together. You will never get well and stay well until you put your bowels right. YALE WINS BIG BOAT RACE.

Captures 'Varsity Contest in Annual Regatta with Harvard — Loses Four-Oared Race by Accident.

New London, Conn., July 2.—The Yale-Harvard regatta was concluded just before noon Friday and again Yale took the premier event. In the big 'varsity race, the Yale men crossed the line winners by seven lengths. The time was: Yale, 21:41½; Harvard, 22:07. Throughout the race the Eli's were never headed and from the crack of the pistol the result was never in doubt.

Just before the big race Harvard had snatched an eleventh-hour victory in the four-oared race. In this event, which was rowed upstream from the navy yard to Gales Ferry, Yale had led throughout and within a quarter of a mile from the finish was rowing well and six lengths ahead. At this point the Yale men seemed to go to pieces. It was not a collapse of oarsmen, however. There was an unfortunate weakness in Yale's rigging, and the [illegible] on which Fish was pulling broke. This precluded all possibility of a Yale victory. Harvard astern, saw her chance, spurted, and won a victory which was confessedly hollow. With the results of Friday's events Yale carried off the palm of the regatta, having also won the freshmen eight race Thursday. The official time of the four-oared race was: Harvard, 10:12; Yale, 10:15.

At Large, A. W. Wright, of Austin; Thomas Lowery, of Minneapolis.

St. Paul, July 1.—The republican state convention for the nomination of candidates for state offices held two sessions yesterday at the Metropolitan opera house. United States Senator Moses E. Clapp, of St. Paul, was made temporary chairman at the morning session, and after his speech the convention adjourned to 2 o'clock. At the afternoon session a committee on credentials was appointed, consisting of seven Dunn men, seven Collins men, and Senator G. B. Ward of Alexandria, an Eddy man, as chairman. The convention then adjourned until 9 o'clock this morning to give the committee on credentials time to prepare its report.

The whole fight for supremacy hinged on the contested delegations.

The roll call of the counties showed eleven contests, as follows: Anoka, 11 delegates; Beltrami, 10; Benton, 8; Cass, 9; Hennepin, 113; Ramsey, 67; Red Lake, 8; Roseau, 8; Sherburne, 9; Traverse, 8; total, 251 delegates.

St. Paul, July 2.—The convention convened yesterday morning at 9 a. m., but as the committee on credentials was not ready to report and adjournment was taken until 2:30 p. m.

The credentials committee entered the convention hall at 3:45, and after a few minutes delay waiting for all members to appear and sign the hastily prepared report, Senator G. B. Ward of Alexandria, the chairman, read the majority report. The report recommended that no delegation be seated from Roseau county, and that the following delegations be recognized:

Dunn—Anoka county, 11 votes; Benton, 8; Clearwater, 7; Red Lake, 8; Sherburne, 9; Traverse, 8; total 52.

Collins—Beltrami, 10; Cass 9; Hennepin, 113; Ramsey, 67; total, 198.

W. B. Anderson of Winona then read the minority report of the Dunn members. The report reviewed the Hennepin county contest, the evidence submitted to committee in the form of affidavits as to contesting delegation to the county convention, and the seating of the sufficient Collins delegates to give them a majority in the convention. Detailed statements of misuse of ballots by Collins men in certain precincts was given.

The minority report was adopted which seated the Dunn delegation from Hennepin.

Then there was a peculiar situation. Marshal Grimshaw had been named chairman of the committee on permanent organization. He was no longer a member of the convention and with a voice choked with emotion he addressed the chair. He turned the report of the committee over to Hiller H. Horton, the second man on the committee, and then made a few remarks.

"We are no longer members of this convention," said he, "but we are loyal republicans and will be found supporting the nominee of the party in November and will make an effort to give the candidate for governor the same plurality as that the republican candidate for president will receive."

Then he led the followers out of the convention and the other faction marched in and took their seats.

James A. Peterson, of Minneapolis nominated R. C. Dunn for governor. James A. Martin, manager of the Collins campaign moved to make it unanimous. The motion prevailed amid cheers.

The naming of the rest of the ticket took but little time.

THE REPUBLICAN PLATFORM.

The Republicans of Minnesota assembled by their representatives in state convention, earnestly and confidently address themselves to the people of this state in the following declaration of facts and principles:

We unanimously reaffirm the platform adopted by the national Republican convention at Chicago, June 22, 1904, and we gladly express our loyalty to the broad principles and national policies therein enunciated.

We heartily commend the administration of President Roosevelt, and congratulate the country on its happy and prosperous condition brought about as a direct result of his administration, and we hereby unanimously ratify and second his nomination.

We express the highest appreciation of his record, not only in continuing the great work of President McKinley, but also in the greater work of solving the new questions that have confronted him. In his management of the Philippine question. In his firm stand at the time of the Venezuelan crisis. In his honest efforts to secure justice to Cuba. In his vigorous demand for official purity and honesty, and punishment of the corrupt. In his manly course in reference to the anthracite coal strike, in his resolute stand against the closing of Chinese ports to our trade. In the encouragement he has given our army and navy. In the success achieved by his practical efforts to enforce the law against unlawful corporations. In the courageous unfaltering and statesmanlike manner in which he has aided the Panama canal. And in the wisdom he has shown in proclaiming immediate neutrality in the war now raging in the orient. In all this, and much more, he has shown himself a strong executive and an ideal president, and we hereby promise him our loyal and undivided support.

The Republican party of Minnesota indorses its representatives from this state in congress, is proud of their ability, courage, independence and experience in shaping legislation, caring for the interests of our commonwealth, insisting upon the rights of its members, in maintaining the interests of the producing classes of the west, bringing added glory and honor to the state they so ably represent.

We believe that the large corporations commonly called "trusts" should be regulated by law, and supervised both in their organization and operation, that their tendencies may be checked and their evil practices prevented, and insist that they shall be so regulated and controlled as to prevent monopoly and promote competition, and in the fullest measure subserve and advance the public good.

We believe in the doctrine of protection to American industries as set forth in the national Republican platform of 1904, and we believe in reciprocity as defined and advocated by William McKinley and James G. Blaine.

The veterans of the Union armies deserve and should receive the best treatment and generous recognition and they should be given the preference in the matter of employment and they are entitled to the enactment of such laws as are best calculated to secure the fulfillment of the pledges made to them in the dark days of the country's peril. We should ever be mindful of the fact that in every national emergency the best and truest men in our country enlist. We will also remember that every president since the time of Lincoln was an ex-soldier with the sole exception of one Democratic president, and that it is our duty to liberally pension the defenders of our country and their widows and orphans, and we recommend that provisions for the veterans' wives be provided at the Soldiers' Home in order that they may spend their last days together.

We cordially endorse and commend the able, efficient and fearless administration of Governor Samuel R. Van Sant, and the people are to be congratulated for the calm and patriotic manner in which he has espoused the cause of the people against the railway merger and trusts. We are firmly of the belief that competition between the railroads of this state would be more beneficial to the general public than the consolidation of said railroads, and with due appreciation of the importance of the undertaking, we thank the president of the United States and governor of this state for the timely anti-merger litigation in the interests of the people which was brought to such a successful conclusion in the supreme court.

Resolved, That we express anew our confidence in the distinguished ability, high character and valuable public services of both our United States senators, Knute Nelson and Moses E. Clapp, and appreciate the fact that during their career in the senate they have reflected high honor upon the state and nation. We rejoice in the fact that Minnesota's senators stand among the strong men of the senate, and that their ability and industry have given them an established position in that body; and

Resolved, That it is the sense and choice of this convention that Senators Knute Nelson and Moses E. Clapp succeed themselves in the United States senate, believing that the best interests of the people in this state will be best subserved thereby; and,

Whereas, The term of Moses E. Clapp in the national senate expires March 4, 1905, therefore,

Resolved, That we hereby present him to the incoming legislature as the candidate of the Republican party of this state for United States senator, and we hereby nominate him to succeed himself and pledge the support of the Republican party of Minnesota to that end.

We urge legislation that will expedite the construction of the Isthmian canal in order that our commerce may be extended in peace, and our country protected in war, and that our ships come in competition with our railroads.

We favor a uniform system of good roads for the counties of this state, and urge the adoption of such modern road laws as will equitably proportion the cost and provide intelligent supervision in their construction. We believe that a system of good roads is an important factor in the development of this state, and that the material interests of the community would be benefited by the expenditure of a liberal share of the public funds in that direction, and that the common roads being the property of and for the benefit of all the people, should be paid for by all the people, and to that end we favor a system of state aid in the construction of our principal highways.

The Republican party of Minnesota recommends that eight hours should be considered a day's work on all works controlled by public authority. We favor the abolishment of Sunday labor where practicable; we earnestly solicit a better understanding between labor and capital. We favor the use of the union label on state supplies wherever practicable, and urge the state board of control to use in all institutions the products of Minnesota industries wherever possible without detriment to the interests of the state.

We appreciate the enactment by congress of legislation which will debar the Chinese from gaining admission to the United States, to the injury of American labor, and we demand the enforcement of the immigration laws which shall exclude all unworthy and undesirable immigrants, whose presence menace our citizenship or injure our wage workers.

We demand equal taxation for all classes of our citizens. We advocate the extension of the postal rural free delivery service wherever its extension may be justified, and thank all our Republican congressmen for the very effective work done by them in the interest of the progressive and beneficial addition to the service. We believe in the Republican party, and commend its principals without reservation to the people of this state.

ROUTE RUSSIANS IN BATTLE

CZAR'S TROOPS ARE DRIVEN FROM FENSHUILING.

Japs Said to Have Lost 1,124 Killed and Wounded—Fierce Engagement Near Port Arthur.

London, July 1.—The Japanese armies engaged in enveloping Gen. Kuropatkin's forces have made material progress, with heavy loss of life. A Tokio dispatch, giving details of the capture of Fenshui pass, states that the Japanese lost 1,120 men in killed and wounded after a two days' battle in which they defeated 17 battalions and three regiments of infantry, six batteries of field artillery, 36 guns in all—and nine squadrons and one regiment of cavalry.

London, July 1.—A dispatch to the Japanese legation from Tokio Thursday gave a few details of the operations at Fenshui pass. It says the Russians left 90 dead on the main road, while the number left elsewhere is not yet estimable. Six Russian officers and 82 men were captured. The total casualties of the Japanese are estimated at 170.

The report, which was sent by the commander of the Takushan army, says the Japanese army, in three columns, commenced operations June 26 for the occupation of Fenshui pass where the Russians had constructed semi-permanent fortifications, with forts, entrenchments, wire entanglements and abatis. The Russians stubbornly resisted, but after a fierce engagement the Japanese succeeded in surrounding the Russians and finally captured the pass June 27.

Shanghai, July 1.—A desperate battle has taken place about ten miles north of Port Arthur, and the Japanese have occupied the Wolf mountains. The Russians were driven back with fearful loss, one entire regiment being annihilated in a dashing charge by Japanese infantry. The strong line of defense was abandoned by the Russians in their retreat. The next line of defense which they fell back upon is close to Port Arthur. By the occupation of the mountains, which were strongly fortified, the Japanese will be able to command the road practically to the fortress with their heavy siege guns, which are being carried along with the advancing army.

Chefoo, July 1.—The Japanese land forces now are within striking distance of the forts of Port Arthur and have begun to bombard them, the Russians replying vigorously. The opposing armies see each other plainly. Two Russian officers tried to break through the Japanese lines and were captured.

Rome, June 27.—A dispatch from Tokio to the Giornale d'Italia says the Russian Admiral Prince Uhtomsky and 750 men were drowned when the battleship Peresviet was torpedoed and sunk.

Tokio, June 27.—In a supplementary report of the naval battle at Port Arthur Admiral Togo says:

"On June 23 my combined fleet attacked the enemy off Port Arthur. Early in the morning the fact that the battleships Peresviet, Poltava and Sevastopol, with the cruisers Bayan, Pallada, Diana, Novik and Askold, preceded by several mine dragging steamers, were emerging from the harbor entrance was reported to me by wireless telegraphy from the scouting ship. Then, according to arrangements previously made to provide against the enemy's egress, I hastened to the appointed rendezvous, sending my fourth and fourteenth destroyer flotillas to watch the enemy's movements.

"At 11 o'clock the battleships Czarevitch, Retvizan and Pobieda joined the dragging steamers, which commenced cruising about in the mines section, and attempted to make a fairway. We kept troubling them. At three o'clock p. m. my fourth and fourteenth flotillas engaged seven of the enemy's destroyers which were covering the dragging operations and defeated them. One of the Russian vessels, catching fire, fled into the harbor.

"The enemy having cleared a fairway with the aid of their dragging steamers the Novik steamed out to sea. Our third fighting squadron, keeping in contact, drew the enemy southward on a southeasterly course. Our first squadron, hidden south of Sugan island, waited for the enemy and concentrated all its destroyers. At 6:15 p. m. our first squadron sighted the enemy eight miles northwest of Sugan Island. The Czarevitch was leading.

"The enemy was thrown into disorder and could not make port, so they anchored at 10:30 p. m. in the roadstead, where we attacked them eight times before dawn. At 10:30 p. m. our sixteenth flotilla dashed from Sboosen point and launched two torpedoes into the bows of a battleship resembling the Peresviat, which immediately sank. We could ascertain no other results till morning, when we saw that one battleship was missing and two vessels of the Sevastopol and Diana class unable to use their engines. On the twenty-fourth (Friday) the enemy's fleet entered the harbor, some being towed and others under their own steam, the last getting in at four o'clock a. m."

Swan Torkelson has about ecided to become a candidate or the nomination for sheriff of learwater County. Swan is of e opinion that it is better to let e people settle the question of ght or wrong than to have the oliticians settle it.

We understand that the old liable and only A. R. Holston going to be a candidate r election as County Attorney f Polk County. A. R. has a rge number of friends in the ounty who would undoubtedly ke to see him elected.

The state convention of the epublican party at St. Paul une 30th demonstrated to other tates that Minnesota republi ans are loyal to party, and not ithstanding there was a warm ght for the nominations there as no bolting done, which is ertainly a credit to the party The Collins' supporters took heir defeat as good naturedly s possible, and will do their hare towards the election of the andidate of the republican arty.

As free trade is the Democrat c panacea for all ills to which he commercial world is heir, so rotection is the prescription given by Republicans. Yet neither is in and of itself a pre entative of disaster or a remedy for it when it comes. When strikes occur in the United States under our protective system Democrats say it is the fruit of protection; when they occur in Great Britain under free trade those favoring protection charge them to the English system. The facts both are wrong. Protection or free trade has little to do with strikes. Strikes and lockouts occur under both systems and are about equal in the countries where either system is adopted. Nor is prosperity or adversity responsible for strikes, as they occur during both conditions. Yet there is a difference in the results to the strikers. During prosperous times there is less suffering from strikes than when adversity prevails, for most of those engaged have a few dollars on which to live, and their fellow laborers are more able to contribute to their support. The American laborer, like his English or European cousin, is not always an easy man to please. He has ambition and hope, as well as an inherent independence that will not brook injustice or tyranny. More strikes are inaugurated now days because of supposed grievances than to secure increased wages; more of them come from demands for believed transgression of rights than insufficient wages, and many are an outgrowth of a desire on the part of the strikers to gain an advantage that will prevent a future imposition upon what they believe to be their rights. In thus anticipating they induce that which they would avoid.

One Eyed, But a Hero

Some People Thought Mike a Bum, but His Time Came at Last.

A Tenement House Fire In New York Gave Him the Opportunity to Prove His Courage.

"One Eyed Mike" O'Brien, homeless, without occupation and a "bum," the police say, proved himself a hero at an exciting fire in New York city by rescuing three children and aiding in saving their mother.

The fire started in a four story brick tenement and spread so rapidly that the two families living on the third and fourth floors had no chance of escaping by the stairway. Almost before the engines arrived the upper floors were a roaring mass of flame.

TAKING FOUR-YEAR-OLD ESTHER EYL IN HIS ARMS.

O'Brien, told to "move on" from his customary loafing place, was wandering aimlessly on the opposite side of the street. He saw two of the four little Eyl children at a window on the third floor and, running across the street, tried to get to them. Going to the third floor of the house, he clambered out of a window to a ledge so narrow that he had difficulty in retaining a foothold. But without hesitancy he balanced himself on it and, jumping to the ledge of the window at which the children were, saved himself from falling by grabbing the coping.

He swung into the smoke and flame filled room and, taking four-year-old Esther Eyl in his arms, undertook to return by way of the dangerous window ledges.

"Wait a minute!" Fireman Weber of Engine company No. 35 shouted.

Holding the child at arm's length as far as possible from the heat of the flames and the stifling smoke, O'Brien waited until Weber arrived at the window of the adjoining house. He then passed the child over to him and, returning into the room, reappeared with Sam, the infant son of the Eyls. The youngster was thrown over to Weber, and O'Brien went back into the room.

He was gone so long that the firemen feared he had been overcome, when he reappeared at a window and began motioning to them to run up a ladder. As he broke the window glass a great cloud of smoke and flame rushed out. A puff of wind blew away the smoke, and the firemen saw O'Brien holding the unconscious body of Mrs. Eyl. He placed her with her head hanging out of the window and, stooping, picked up an inanimate bundle and began fanning it with his hat.

"It's my four-weeks-old baby!" cried Mr. Eyl, who was watching the windows of the floor occupied by his family.

Quickly the firemen raised an extension ladder, and O'Brien handed Mrs. Eyl, who was still unconscious, to the firemen, who took her down the ladder. The infant began crying lustily as O'Brien brought it down with him.

The crowd which stood watching the fire cheered O'Brien, who, when he found every one was out of the house, was joined by "Limpy" Jack Tatum and a few others of his cronies, and walked off unconcernedly, apparently thinking little of his brave act.

While O'Brien was rescuing the Eyl family the firemen were having an equally exciting time. The family of Mrs. Tessie Kreps, consisting of herself, four children and a boarder, Louis Flori, were grouped in a window on the top floor, surrounded by smoke and fire.

Half crazed with fright, Mrs. Kreps was preparing to throw her young children to the sidewalk. The firemen on the truck shouted to her to wait, and the life net was hastily spread.

"Throw the children one at a time into the net," shouted Assistant Foreman Griffith.

Mrs. Kreps picked up her four-year-old child Tessie and after kissing her threw her toward the net. The firemen caught the child. She bounced up and then, sitting up, looked around in surprise and said:

"Jump me again."

She was quickly taken out, and Mrs. Kreps threw the other children, Rosie and Carrie, into the net, kissing each of them before the throw.

"Throw the baby!" yelled the firemen. Mrs. Kreps hugged to her breast her eight-month-old son Willie. She refused to throw him, so the firemen hoisted a thirty-five foot ladder to the window, but it was too short. Almost before the top of the ladder had touched the wall Fireman Weber was halfway up. When the men on the ground saw the ladder was too short by four feet five of them raised it, and Weber brought down Mrs. Kreps and her baby. The boarder, Flori, was assisted to the street by Weber.

Within a short time after the rescue of all the people in the building the fire was under control after doing about $4,000 damage.

Both the police and firemen were loud in their praise of the heroic act of "One Eyed Mike" O'Brien. He is known by pretty nearly everybody in the neighborhood. He wears a bright red and green sweater.

One of the youngsters in the neighborhood, a warm friend of O'Brien, was asked what O'Brien worked at for a living.

"Well," the boy answered, "he just drinks, learns us fellers how to fight and pulls people out of the river in the summer time."

PLUCKY GIRL GETS BURGLAR.

Chases Him With Revolver From House and to a Police Station.

Miss Mary Jamison is a pretty young woman who, encountering a burglar in the home of her cousin, Mrs. Robert Lecouver, New York, ordered him out of the house, pursued him up a hill and captured him in the rear yard of the Highbridge police station.

"Mrs. Lecouver had gone out for an automobile ride," said Miss Jamison, "and I had just returned to the house. As I was leaving the room I saw the form of a man. He crossed the threshold of the door as I passed out into the hallway. I hardly managed to gasp out:

"What do you want here?"

"I—I—want—to—insure your life," he responded in a faint voice. In an instant I realized that he was in a blue funk, and I took courage in his fear. The fact that there is a police station a hundred yards from the house also gave me courage. I cried:

"'You lie! You are here for no good.' This seemed to rouse him, and he jumped for the stairway. I had become nervously heroic, and, rushing into Mrs. Lecouver's room, I secured a revolver.

AND THEN CAME DOWN AGAIN.

"My panic stricken burglar would have had a good start on me had not my big St. Bernard, Ben Ali, who was sunning himself on the porch, risen to the occasion. Ben Ali jumped at the fleeing burglar and seized his coat tails. It took my visitor a minute or more to separate the tails from his garment, and when I reached the veranda he was speeding across lots.

"'Stop thief!' I yelled, brandishing the revolver and bloodthirstily trying to shoot. I couldn't pull the trigger, however, so picked up my skirts and gave chase. Mr. Burglar hurdled the fence. I got over with more speed than grace, and then we hotfooted it up the hill.

"I guess I was making as much noise as a mob, and Policeman Edsall issued from the station house and joined the chase. The burglar, like the ingenious person in the nursery rhyme, went up the hill and then came down again, skirting around until he was in the back yard of the station house. There Policeman Edsall and I grabbed him simultaneously. I am glad the pistol did not go off."

Mr. and Mrs. Nels M. Bolstad went down to Crookston Tuesday. Mr. Bolstad says it was a business trip, but we are of the opinion that he planned that necessary business trip just so as to be in Crookston the 6th and see the big Ringling Bros. show.

This land joins the Gully Townsite property and has been under contest for the past three years, Mr. Bolstad finally winning out.

Stephen Singer will hold his Indian Powwow at Winsor July 17th, at which the Indians will surely be present. It was no fault of Mr. Singer's that the Indians did not show up on time on June 19th, as they had a celebration at White Earth June 14th and 15th, and owing to the warm weather they were unable to return in time for the celebration at Winsor June 19th.

THEY CELEBRATED.

Bagley put up one of the good old fashioned celebrations July 4th. The ball game between the Fosston and Bagley teams was hotly contested, Bagley winning out by one score. The orations by Senator Stephens and R. J. Montague, of Crookston, were well received and loudly applauded. The bowery dance under the management of C. A. Wagner was well conducted and was a success from a social and financial standpoint.

Lovely Liverpool Lasses.

Can you or your readers give any explanation of the remarkably heavy percentage of splendidly handsome ladies to be seen in Liverpool's city thoroughfares? When I say handsome, I refer not only to facial beauty, but also to symmetry of form and perfect physique. Walk from the Central station via Lord street to, say, the Landing stage, any day in the week, and you will behold a phalanx of superb womanhood. I am a Manchester man by birth and sentiment, but I must confess our city can produce nothing to compare with Liverpool's battalions of tall, lovely girls.—St. James' Gazette.

Effectually Suspended.

Only one dog has ever had the audacity to enter parliament during the proceedings. A hundred years ago the lords were thrown into consternation by a dog's entry. Lord North was addressing the house, and the dog promptly proceeded to bark furiously at him. Lord North, considerably upset, moved that the member who was interrupting him should be suspended. Thereupon the dog was driven out and suspended in such a manner that he never interrupted again.—London Opinion.

The Number Forty in the Bible.

The rain that produced the flood fell for forty days and forty nights, and after it ceased it was forty days before Noah opened the ark. Moses was forty days on the mountain fasting, and the spies spent forty days investigating matters in Canaan before making their report. Elijah fasted forty days in the wilderness, and Jonah gave the people of Nineveh forty days in which to repent. The forty days' fast of Jesus is known to all readers of the New Testament.

A Dutch Fishing Village.

Almost every fishing village in Holland has its special dress and its own quaint customs. One can see from old Dutch pictures that these have not varied for the last 200 years. One most interesting place is the island of Marken, a tongue of land on the margin of the Zuyder Zee, which can well be inspected in a couple of hours. It is so little above the sea level that the clusters of houses or tiny villages are built on mounds connected by bridges, and nearly every little house has its own little moat and its own little boat—everything except the people is on a diminutive scale in Holland—moored near the door so as to be handy in case of flood. The houses, with the exception of the church and the clergyman's house, are built of wood on high piles. They are none of them very old, as the place has often been flooded and burned. In winter Marken is often under water, and the inhabitants use boats to pass from one village to another. The cottages, which are painted blue, green or black, with pointed gables, and roofed with red tiles, are all exactly alike and possess only a ground floor built on high piles.

A Novel Time Glass.

"During a trip which I took through the West Indies several years ago," said a traveler, "I saw a sight in one of the villages which brought the old proverb, 'Necessity is the mother of invention,' forcibly to my mind. In the front of one of the houses on a veranda stood a sentry whose business it was to keep the time for the village by means of a primitive sandglass. Two bottles were firmly tied together, mouth to mouth, and fixed in a wooden frame, made to stand in reversible positions.

"A quantity of black sand ran from one bottle into the other in just half an hour, and when the upper bottle was empty the frame was reversed. Twelve short sticks marked with notches from 1 to 12 were hung upon a string, and a hook was placed between the stick bearing the number of notches corresponding to the hour last struck and the one to be struck next. The sentry announced the time by striking the hours on a large gong."

The First Locomotive in Maine.

The first locomotive used in the state of Maine came from England, having been built at the works of Robert Stephenson & Co. in the year 1835, and made its first trip over the Bangor, Oldtown and Milford railroad on Aug. 19, 1837. This road was then generally known as the "Veazie road," and the track was made of wooden rails strapped with iron. The shackles used to connect the engine and cars were made of three thicknesses of sole or belt leather held together by copper rivets and had a hole in each end so as to hook over an upright stationary pin bolted or driven into a rigid beam extending from the end of the car. It is said that for a time the engine was run in opposition to a six ox team employed by a Bangor lumber dealer who was not willing to pay the rates charged on the railroad, and it was not until the management of the line came to what he considered fair charges that he turned his traffic over to it.

In Nature's Wonderland.

There is but one Grand canyon. The name should never have been given to lesser gorges. The very fact that there is a so called Grand canyon in Colorado is misleading. "The Grand canyon of Colorado" does not sound much different from "the Grand canyon of the Colorado." Hence many people confuse them.

The canyon of the Colorado river, which flows through Arizona, forms the boundary line between that territory and California and then empties into the gulf of California.

It is the grandest gorge in the world. In it 3,000 of the wonderful gorges of the state of Colorado could be hurled. With its tributaries, many of which have never yet been explored, it would reach, if all the canyons were placed one after another, nearly around the world.—Four Track News.

The Queer Man.

Of all forms of temper there is none more tiresome to deal with than that which is known as "queer." Down comes a bolt from the blue in the midst of apparent sunshine, and a sudden gloom and moroseness hide our friend completely from our view. An injured attitude is assumed; a martyr's halo carefully pinned on, and happy, everyday life becomes an impossibility. People who want to be loved or even liked should never be difficult. Society has not time, even if it had the inclination, to study their idiosyncrasies and play up to all their petty prejudices. The passionate and even the sulky temper is forgiven sooner than the difficult one and is perhaps more possible to cure.—Edith H. Fowler in London Mail.

To Tell if a Man Shaves Himself.

"I can tell in a minute simply by looking at a man whether he shaves himself or is shaved by a barber," said the wielder of the razor and brush. "No, it isn't a question of cleanliness nor yet a question of hacking the face. There is no reason why a man who is accustomed to shaving himself shouldn't make as clean a job of it as the average barber. And yet I can spot him every time. See that little lock of hair that grows down the side of the face just in front of the ear? Well, when a man is shaved by a barber those two locks don't vary in length more than a sixteenth of an inch. The man who shaves himself, on the other hand, is invariably lopsided. He always begins to shave higher up on the left side of the face than on the right side, as a consequence of which one side of the face looks longer than the other. No, I don't know that I can explain this phenomenon. I only know that the condition exists."—Philadelphia Record.

Collector Stratton, of the San Francisco port, has received notification that the Chinese minister has made the following regulations as to the use of the flag: A flag having one dragon rampent in a yellow moon will be reserved for common use; two dragons are to be used only in the case of mercantile joint stock companies.

Fifty-three women in the United States have been regularly ordained and are doing the full work of ministers. Forty-five of the 53 are married, although some of them were ordained before marriage. Most of them have independent parishes, where they preach, make pastoral visits and officiate at marriages and at funerals.

Dr. E. C. Savidge, of New York, has been casting his professional eye over audiences in the Metropolitan opera house, and this is how he sums them up, male and female: "Look at the men—agile, keen, quick of movement, still in the game of life, of use to their family, age and race. Turn to their consorts—save a few exceptions for our chivalry they are obese or scrawny, hebetudinous or jerking, flabby bundles of tissue hanging in folds; each fold, to the esoteric eye, full of burnt-out tissue juice, poisoning the individual with the ashes of her own life."

Writing of "Savage and Civilized Dress," Edwin Smith Balch says that while it might be assumed that the superior development of the brain of civilized man would result in some form of dress far better and more tasteful than anything found among savages, it may be doubted whether this is the case. One marked error of civilized dress is its interference with the proper ventilation of the skin. The human animal breathes with his entire skin; refuse matter is thrown off as perspiration through every pore. The fact is well known, but in the garments of civilization it is almost universally unrecognized.

NOTES ABOUT ANIMALS.

There is nothing odd or peculiar about the sleep of the lions and tigers. In captivity they show the same indifference to danger that they manifest in the jungles, and by day or night will slumber through an unusual tumult, unmindful or unconscious of the noise. Their sleep is commonly heavy and peaceful.

Since the Indians have been thinned out the gila (heela) monster is overrunning the southwest territory. The only antidote known for the gila's poison, which is fatal in about 30 minutes, is a secret of the Hualipis Indians, in Mexico, who think it Godgiven, and never have divulged it, although government officials and scientists have lived among them for the purpose of discovering it.

That ants perceive and avoid rays of ultra violet light much higher in the scale of vision than the human eye is able to detect, has been shown by Sir John Lubbock. Now a writer in the Electrical World suggests that those who are trying to determine the wave length of the X-rays experiment with ants. The X-rays are invisible to man, but it has not been determined whether they are too long or too short for his eye to see. The ultra violet waves are too short.

WRONG TRACK

Had to Switch.

Even the most careful person is apt to get on the wrong track regarding food sometimes and has to switch over.

When the right food is selected the host of ails that come from improper food and drink disappear, even where the trouble has been of lifelong standing.

"From a child I was never strong and had a capricious appetite and I was allowed to eat whatever I fancied—rich cake, highly seasoned food, hot biscuit, etc.—so it was not surprising that my digestion was soon out of order and at the age of twenty-three I was on the verge of nervous prostration. I had no appetite and as I had been losing strength (because I didn't get nourishment in my daily food to repair the wear and tear on body and brain) I had no reserve force to fall back on, lost flesh rapidly and no medicine helped me.

"Then it was a wise physician ordered Grape-Nuts and cream and saw to it that I gave this food (new to me) a proper trial and it showed he knew what he was about because I got better by bounds from the very first. That was in the summer and by winter I was in better health than ever before in my life, had gained in flesh and weight and felt like a new person altogether in mind as well as body, all due to nourishing and completely digestible food, Grape-Nuts.

"This happened three years ago and never since then have I had any but perfect health for I stick to my Grape-Nuts food and cream and still think it delicious. I eat it every day. I never tire of this food and can enjoy a saucer of Grape-Nuts and cream when nothing else satisfies my appetite and it's surprising how sustained and strong a small saucerful will make one feel for hours." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

True food that carries one along and "there's a reason." Grape-Nuts 10 days proves big things.

An Idyl of the Sugar Beet Fields

By BELLE MANIATES

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

IT was certainly an infliction to Curtis Waldo, the young manager of the sugar beet factory, to be up and doing at the dawn of this summer day. He hurried to the down town office of the factory, where a troop of noisy, happy youngsters were awaiting with impatience their drive to the fields a few miles distant, where they were to weed the beets and receive generous payment for each hour's work.

It was something of a task to take their names and get them stowed away in the big wagons in waiting, and he gave a groan of relief when the task was over. He heard the door open.

"Another!" he thought, wearily, as he raised his head from the ledger. The look of impatience vanished at the sight of the slender young figure of a girl presumably 19 years of age, who stood before him. Her face was fair and delicately pink. A big, broad-brimmed hat rested on a head crowned by shining, reddish-brown hair, and the eyes that harmonize with such hair looked appealingly up at him.

"What can I do for you?" he asked in courteous tones.

"I want to weed beets. The driver said he'd wait while I came and got a ticket."

Waldo glanced at the dainty white hands with the well-kept nails.

"Why," he said, deprecatingly, "do you know it's hard work in a blazing hot field, stooping over and pulling up those tough weeds? Do you think you could endure it?"

"I can—if they can," she said, with a sigh, pointing to the boisterous mob without.

"What kind of work do you do?" he asked, skeptically.

"I sew. But I don't like it. I want to try out of door work."

"Well, be careful," he advised, as he went out to the wagon with her. He noted approvingly the neat, well-fitting gingham dress and, as she climbed into the wagon, he had a fleeting glimpse of a slender foot and a shapely ankle.

He watched the wagons of merry-makers drive away.

"They seem to think it's a picnic," he thought, grimly. "They'll not be so gingery when they come in to-night, I'm thinking."

All through the morning his thoughts wandered to the sweet, dream-centered face of the last applicant, Myra Cole. About 11 o'clock he said suddenly to the bookkeeper:

"I am going to drive out and see how our kindergarten is progressing."

He arrived at the fields just as the little weeders were about to begin their midday meal. They were tired, dirty and perspiring, but still happy and noisy. He found his vision of the morning with a little tot on each side of her.

"Give your luncheon all to them," he said, peremptorily. "I drove out to see how things were working, and I brought luncheon enough for both of us. Come down to the road where my horse and carriage are."

She followed him obediently.

"Shall we serve it in the carriage?" he asked.

"There is a nice shade tree across the road. We can spread it out more comfortably there."

He agreed with this suggestion and watched her unpack and arrange the luxurious luncheon he had brought.

"How did you keep your hands from burning?" he asked.

"I wore some thick gloves, and I didn't pull very many. I couldn't stand the sun. I am afraid I haven't earned much, but I will do better when I am used to it."

They sat down on the ground to the luncheon and he was pleased to see that she ate as daintily as she did other things.

"Are your parents living?" he asked.

"Yes; I live at home with them."

"And are they very poor? Pardon the question, but it doesn't seem as if you were fitted for such hard labor."

"I have to help. My mother is an invalid."

"Oh," he said, sympathetically. "And your father? Does he work?"

"Yes; he works at the Globe Paper works."

"Have you any brothers and sisters?"

"One brother."

"Where does he work?"

"He doesn't work yet. He is a year younger than I."

"He is old enough to work. He should be the one to do this instead of you," he growled.

When they had finished luncheon he asked her to drive during the rest of the noon hour. She hesitated and looked a little doubtful as to accepting.

"It'll do you good and rest you for the afternoon."

She finally consented to take a little drive, but insisted upon returning to the field at one o'clock.

"Where do you live?" he asked, as he helped her out of the carriage.

"At 415 Twelfth street," she replied, with a slight blush.

"And may I come and see you to-night," he asked.

The blush deepened.

"I am going to a dance to-night."

"A dance! Where?"

"The Draymen's union."

His idol tottered.

"With whom are you going?"

"My brother."

This was more encouraging, but still, the Draymen's union! He couldn't associate her with the entertainment. Mechanically he lifted his hat and drove abruptly and swiftly away. He was at the office when the wagon loads drove up in the evening. The children did not fulfill his prediction of losing their ginger. Their elastic natures had revived during the ride home all their hilarity of the morning.

Although Myra Cole was one of the first to enter, she stepped aside to let the others receive their payment. When the ranks finally began to thin Waldo looked up to see why she did not come to his desk. To his amazement she had vanished.

"I suppose she was in a hurry to dress for the dance," he mused, with a shudder at the thought of that refined maiden attending such a dance.

Although an employe had been broken into the work of starting the "kindergarten" Waldo appeared at the scene of action the next morning. She was there, as sweet and dainty as he had pictured her. She came up to him at once.

"I didn't wait for my money last night," she said.

"I suppose you were impatient for the dance," he said, with a little sarcasm apparent in his voice. "You must be tired. Did you dance every time?"

"I didn't dance at all," was her astonishing reply. He had thought of her as easily being the belle of the hall.

"Why not?"

She gave an odd little laugh.

"No one asked me!" she replied, wistfully.

"No one asked you! Not even your brother?"

"My brother doesn't know how to dance. Thank you," as he handed her the envelope.

"Wait, you haven't your ticket for to-day," he said, as she turned to go.

"I am not going to the fields to-day. I have to be at home."

In an instant she had given way to the jostling, eager children and was gone from his sight. Everything went wrong with Waldo that day, and he didn't go at night to pay off the "brats," but sent the cashier. In the evening he found himself on Twelfth street. He didn't plan to call—only to walk past No. 415. This, however, he was unable to do, as there was no such number. She was utterly lost to him unless she came to weed again.

The next morning was Sunday and when he picked up the Times he was interested and amused to read a bright, snappy article headed "A Day With the Beetweeders." There was a brief allusion to the manager's kindness and patience towards his little employes. He wondered how the Times got such accurate information and was so correct as to details.

"I have it," he cried, triumphantly. "Myra Cole was the reporter incognito. I might have known she was not what she pretended, a working girl."

He was in a peaceful, happy frame of mind all day and early Monday morning he sought the editorial offices of the Times.

"Helloa, Lorimer," he said to the city editor. "I want to see the reporter who gave us such a good write-up yesterday."

"Certainly. Miss Hayden wrote the article. Come this way."

Waldo followed into a little office where a young woman sat at a desk.

"Miss Hayden, let me present Mr. Waldo, manager of the sugar beet factory."

The young woman turned and Waldo experienced a shock of disappointment upon beholding a black-haired girl who wore spectacles.

"Your article in yesterday's paper was good, so good," he said, recovering his composure, "that I am curious to know from whom you got the facts."

"From one of the weeders—a very intelligent young girl."

"Was her name Myra Cole?" he asked, eagerly.

"Let me think," she mused. "I believe that was the name she gave me, although I am not sure."

"Do you know where I can find her?"

"No, I do not."

Baffled, Waldo left the office. Then it occurred to him that her father worked at the Globe Paper company. Happy thought! He hastened to the office and asked for the manager, whom he knew slightly.

"Good morning, Mr. Grant. I want to speak to one of your employes, if I may."

"Certainly, Mr. Waldo. Which one?"

"His name is Cole."

A search through pay rolls failed to reveal an employe by this name. As he was about to take his leave a door behind him opened and a voice he instantly recognized said:

"Good morning, papa!"

Quickly he turned and beheld Myra Cole, whom Grant introduced as his daughter! Her eyes danced mischievously.

"So it was you who gave the facts to the Times?"

She laughed happily.

"Yes; Laura Hayden is a friend of mine and I did it to accommodate her and she wanted to go to a concert that night, so I did the Draymen's union for her, too."

"Will you tell me," he asked, gazing earnestly into her sparkling eyes, "why you did not reveal your identity to me?"

"Oh—because—" she replied.

Her father laughed.

"That is a favorite reason with my daughter. You will never get a more satisfactory answer than that from her!"

But he did.

LOVE'S YOUNG DREAM.

Truly Touching Situation Brought About by the Outrageous Dust.

The wind swept a cloud of dust about them as they turned the corner of the street, relates the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"Did you get any dust in your eyes, darling?" he asked fondly, holding her closely to him, as though to keep the too eager wind away.

"Yes," she murmured, searching for the handkerchief.

"Which eye, dearest?"

"The right one, love. Did you get anything in yours?" she asked anxiously, seeing his handkerchief appear.

"Yes, darling."

"Which eye, dearest?"

"The right one, love."

"How sweet!" she exclaimed, with a sad light glowing in her well eye. "Do you suppose, dearest heart, that it could have been part of the same piece of dust that got into our eyes, darling?"

"I hope it was," he said, beaming with one eye and wiping the other.

"Wouldn't it be sweet, dear?"

"Wouldn't it, love?"

And the wind howled around the corner as though it was in pain and from the house three doors below a dentist's sign fell off into the street.

WISE BEYOND HER YEARS.

Senators Cullom and Cannon Baffled by a Bright Little Girl.

At the republican state convention in Springfield, Ill., Senator Cullom and Speaker Cannon tried to get a popular ruling as to which is the handsomer man, says the New York Herald.

"If I had a face like yours, Joe," said the senator, "I'd wear a veil or build a fence around it."

"And if I looked like you, Shelby," replied "Uncle" Joe, "I'd walk backward all the time. Your rear elevation isn't so bad, but the front facade is a bad blotch."

"I'll tell you, Joe, we'll leave it to this little girl. She doesn't want any political job and I guess she'll be honest," suggested Senator Cullom.

The little girl's mother was with her. "Which do you think is the best looking, Dorothy?" asked the proud mother.

The child looked at both out of big, frank eyes and said:

"I don't like to say, mamma, which I like best. I might 'fend Mr. Cannon."

It Pays to Read Newspapers.

Cox, Wis., July 4.—Frank M. Russell of this place, had Kidney Disease so bad that he could not walk. He tried Doctors' treatment and many different remedies, but was getting worse. He was very low.

He read in a newspaper how Dodd's Kidney Pills were curing cases of Kidney Trouble, Bright's Disease, and Rheumatism, and thought he would try them. He took two boxes, and now he is quite well. He says:—

"I can now work all day, and not feel tired. Before using Dodd's Kidney Pills, I couldn't walk across the floor."

Mr. Russell is the most wonderful case ever known in Chippewa County. This new remedy—Dodd's Kidney Pills—is making some miraculous cures in Wisconsin.

Hitting the Four Hundred.

At this writing our blood is hot, and we are drunk with indignation. Time and again we have complimented gratis the spunky, swell "Four Hundred" of our city, but as they have lowered the standard of swellheadedness we are going to scorch their rines with the hope that they will regain consciousness and hoist their social banners on planes of uncertain levelheadedness.—Campton Courier.

The democratic national convention opened in St. Louis, listened to an extended speech from Representative John Sharp Williams, its temporary chairman, appointed the committees necessary to perfect a permanent organization, and took a recess. VICE PRESIDENCY.

Ex-Senator Henry G Davis of West Virginia is Selected as Parker's Running Mate.

St. Louis, July 10.—Ex-Senator Henry G. Davis of West Virginia was nominated for vice president by the Democratic national convention at 1;13 o'clock this morning. The convention adjourned at 1:30.

The democratic national convention did not go into session promptly at the time appointed, although the greater number of delegates and alternates were in their seats, keyed up to a high pitch of excitement over the possible event of the night.

The news that there would in all probability be all sorts of political fireworks had spread rapidly through the city, and the people commenced pouring into the building, anxious to see what would be done.

The crowd, although large, was nothing compared to the terrific jam that was allowed to pass into the Coliseum Friday night.

It was reported from the conference at the Southern hotel that no word would be forthcoming for an hour, and it was decided to defer the opening of the session until something definite was received from the guidance of the chairman.

In the meantime the greatest excitement prevailed in and around the hall, and it was equalled by the deep perplexity in which many of the delegates found themselves.

They knew a message had been received from Judge Parker, but its exact contents were unknown. There were hundreds of versions, but none of them was known to be accurate. They were all looking for a tempest, but could not make any accurate estimate of its violence.

Judge Parker's telegram was as follows:

"I regard the gold standard as firmly and irrevocably established and I shall act accordingly if the action of the convention to-day is ratified by the people.

"Inasmuch as the the platform is silent on the subject I deem it necessary to make this communication to the convention for its consideration as I should feel it my duty to decline the nomination except with that understanding."

WASHINGTON LETTER

INTERESTING GOSSIP FROM THE NATIONAL CAPITOL.

PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES

The Old and New Methods of Nominating Them—Cortelyou Always a Republican—Alaskan Judiciary to Be Investigated.

Washington.—At no city in America is the interest in the great political conventions so great as it is here. This is natural, as one or the other of the nominees of these conventions must become the official head of Washington, and his home and family become the social center.

Practically all of the large cities from the Missouri river east to the Atlantic have at some time entertained one or more of these national gatherings, with the exception of the national capitol, and yet this is the political center of the country. It is almost an indefinable sentiment that keeps the conventions away from Washington, and probably always will do so.

Presidents have been nominated in Washington, however, but it was before the days of conventions. Previous to 1830 national conventions were unknown, and candidates were named by congressional caucuses. This method of naming candidates lost favor after the race made by Jackson, Adams and Clay in 1824, none of whom were named by the caucuses.

Philadelphia entertained the first national convention in 1830, when delegates selected by the anti-Masonic party met in that city to adopt a platform and name candidates. Since that time every candidate for president has been named by one of these national gatherings.

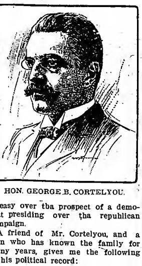
Chicago is preeminently the convention city. Since 1860 more conventions have been held there than in any other city in the country, and as many presidents nominated there as in all other cities put together.

Of the many "first citizens" of the country nominated by these national political conventions, three were assassinated—Lincoln, Garfield and McKinley. William Henry Harrison died 31 days after beginning his term of office.

Five vice presidents have died while holding office—Elbridge Gerry, 1814; William R. King, 1863; Henry Wilson, 1785; Thomas A. Hendricks, 1885, and Garret A. Hobart, 1899.

Always a Republican.

Much of the opposition that manifested itself against Cortelyou as chairman of the national republican committee was in all probability traceable to the general belief that he was at one time a democrat. This belief is widespread throughout the country, and has been believed even by the leaders of the party. It is said here that an authoritative denial from a high official in the government was telegraphed to Chicago during the convention so as to set at rest those of the national committee who were uneasy over the prospect of a democrat presiding over the republican campaign.



HON. GEORGE B. CORTELYOU.

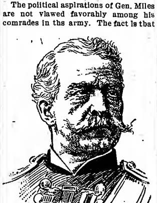
A friend of Mr. Cortelyou, and a man who has known the family for many years, gives me the following as his political record:

"Secretary George B. Cortelyou's father and grandfather were republicans of the stanchest kind. His grandfather, Peter Crolius Cortelyou, Sr., was the intimate friend and associate of Horace Greeley, Thurlow Weed and other great leaders of the party's early history. Both his brothers are republicans, and the members of his family have been known as republicans since the foundation of the party. All the teachings of his early years were in that political faith, and when he took up the study of public questions on his own account he became a firm believer in republican doctrines. His first vote was cast for a republican candidate, and from that day to this he has voted the republican ticket.

"Mr. Cortelyou was one of the founders of the Young Men's Republican club of Hempstead, N. Y. He was an active member of the Plumed Knights, and did hard and effective service in the Blaine campaign. He was secretary of the Harrison managers at the Minneapolis convention. Upon the advent of the democratic administration in 1885 he tendered his resignation and left the federal service. Again, in 1893, upon the advent of Mr. Cleveland's second administration, he tendered his resignation and remained only at the earnest request of his new superior. He has gone regularly each year to his home and voted for republican candidates, and while be loyally served a democratic president, he accepted the position then tendered him only after a frank statement of his political beliefs. He has been secretary of two republican presidents and has been a cabinet officer in a republican administration."

Miles' Political Aspirations.

The political aspirations of Gen. Miles are not viewed favorably among his comrades in the army. The fact is that while Miles has been a popular favorite and hero to the majority of the American people, he has not been particularly so with the army. Some charge his unpopularity to jealousy, and while that may, and undoubtedly does, account for a part of it, a portion of it at least is traceable to the general's opposition to the post canteen, which is favored by 90 per cent. of the army officers.



GEN. NELSON A. MILES.

As a subordinate general officer Miles has a wonderful record for ability and bravery. His campaign against Geronimo was a brilliant one and won for him the plaudits of the country, and especially of the settlers of the southwest.

Miles was at that time popular both in and out of the army, and remained so until after his assignment to Chicago, where he was feted and petted by the public until either he was spoiled or the jealousies of the officers of the service were aroused. In either case, it was while on duty there that his prestige with the officers of the army began to wane.

Miles, as the commanding general, had influential enemies at court, and they did much to discredit his services. He has at times talked more freely than the regulations warrant, and while not more so than many others, his enemies were always ready to make the most of every opportunity thus offered them, and greatly magnified his offenses in this line.

On whatever ticket he might run for the presidency he would poll a considerable number of votes given him by the thousands of admirers throughout the country regardless of their party affiliations. It has been his ambition to be a presidential candidate, and he and his friends believe that his services to the country entitle him to that honor.

Investigations in Alaska.

The rumors of scandals in connection with the Alaskan judiciary are to be investigated, and for this purpose Judge Day, as assistant to the attorney general, will make a long trip through the wilds of that district this summer.

He will sail for Alaska early in July, and will visit Ketchikan, Wrangell, Sitka, Juneau and Skagway, in the southeastern part of the territory. It is in this part of the territory that the charges have been made against the conduct in office of Judge Melville Brown, who was appointed from Wyoming four years ago.

From Skagway Judge Day will go to Dawson by the White pass, and thence 1,800 miles down the Yukon river to St. Michael, stopping at Eagle, Rampart, Fairbanks and other places on the way. From St. Michael, which is near the mouth of the Yukon, Judge Day will go north to Nome, which is the largest mining town in Alaska, and where some of the worst scandals in the history of the territory have occurred. A visit will probably be made later on to Valdez, which is a prosperous town at the head of the gulf of Alaska, and where many of the important mining cases have been tried by Judge Wickersham of the third district.

President Roosevelt is very much interested in this inquiry, and he will fill none of the offices which became vacant on the 6th of this month until the inquiry is completed. Judge Day will probably be in Alaska until late in September.

It may be all right to lick a fellow, but it's poor policy to brag about it, and there is a little to much boasting among R. C. Dunn's supporters at the present time, for the good, of the party.

The democrats will make the old "tariff gag" the battle cry. That has served to work the suckers for a hundred years, but as a new sucker is born every minute, the confidence game is still good.

The great Colorado strike seems to loom up as one of the issues of the coming campaign, and should certainly be taken more notice of by the republican press than it is receiving at present. There is of course two sides to the question, but the strikers seems to have the best of it up to the present time,

Politicians sometimes have an idea that a newspaper editor has no right to an opinion of his own, and if they should read in the paper something that does not just suit them they always make the remark that there must have been some undue influence brought to bear on the editor to cause him to publish what they call rot,

When Simons, of Red Lake Falls comes to you and asks you for your vote for renomination, ask him what he did in the last legislature to entitle him to a re-election, and all he can say, is I tried to get a sugar beet bounty bill passed for the benefit of Hennepin county, and had I succeeded I would have made a good stake.

Gunder Krostue should get busy and hunt up all his friends who were acquainted with some of his relatives in the old country, as he will need them to keep him from going over the dump September 20th. What the people of this district want is drainage for their wet lands, and they are not to be caught napping the second time by false promises and taffy.

That there is ample opportunity for reform in Minnesota politics in certain respects is, or ought to be generally admitted. The Gopher has been, is, and will always be an advocate of decency in politics within the party as well as in the contests between parties. There were many things in conection with the recently ended pre-convention fight for the republican gubernatorial nomination that did not meet with our approval and should similar methods again be employed we shall not hesitate to give expression to our views in an emphatic and straight-from-the-shoulder language as we can master. Party fealty can not be substituted for the individual conscience—not in the Gopher sanctum, at any rate.—Glenwood Gopher.

THE UNIVERSAL EXPOSITION

The Achievements of Individuals and Nations Faithfully Recorded by This Encyclopedia of Society.

By FREDERICK J. V. SKIFF, Director of Exhibits, World's Fair.

"The wisdom of all ages is none too great for the world's work." In this single salient sentence, uttered in his famous address at Buffalo in September, 1901, President McKinley described the object and the result of expositions.

A modern universal exposition is a collection of the wisdom and achievements of the world, for the inspection of the world, for the study of its experts, by which they may make comparisons and deduction and develop plans for future improvements and progress. Such a universal exposition might well be called an encyclopedia of society. It constitutes a classified, compact, indexed compendium of the achievements and ideas of society in all phases of its activity, extending to the most material as well as the most refined. It offers illustrations covering the full field of social performance, from the production of the shoes on our feet and the pavement beneath them to a presentation of the rarest and most delicate creations of the brains and hands of men in what are called the fine arts of civilization,

The Universal Exposition in St. Louis in 1904 will be such a social encyclopedia in the most comprehensive and accurate sense. It will give to the world in revised and complete details "a living picture of the artistic and industrial development at which mankind has arrived" and will actually provide "a new starting point from which all men may direct future exertions." It will present for the inspection of specialists in all lines of industrial and social endeavor and for the public an assembly of the best which the world has done and has to show in industry, art and science, and, what is very important, it will offer these achievements of society, these trophies of civilization, in a highly selected, accurately classified array.

The creators of the St. Louis Exposition have had the experience of all previous great expositions by which to plan and effect its high organization. The continuous and repeated burden of the message of experience handed down by all expositions has been more perfect, more effective classification and arrangement of exhibits.

The classification of the St. Louis Exposition has been prepared to present a sequential synopsis of the developments that have marked man's progress. On its bases will be assembled the most highly organized exposition the world has yet seen.

The St. Louis classification is divided into 16 departments, 144 groups and 807 classes. These grand departments in their order will record what man has accomplished at this time with his faculties, industry and skill and the natural resources at his command in the environment in which he has been placed.

At the head of the Exposition classification has been placed Education, through which man enters social life. Second comes Art, showing the condition of his culture and development. Liberal Arts and Applied Sciences are placed third, to indicate the result of his education and culture, illustrate his tastes and demonstrate his inventive genius, scientific attainment and artistic expression. These three departments equip him for the battle and prepare him for the enjoyments of life. The raw material departments, Agriculture, Horticulture, Mining and Forestry, show how man conserves the forces of nature to his uses. The Department of Manufactures will show what he has done with them; the Department of Machinery the tools he has used. The Department of Transportation will show how he overcomes distances and secures access to all parts of the world. The Department of Electricity will indicate the great forces he has discovered and utilized to convey power and intelligence. And so through the several departments to Anthropology, in which man studies man; and to Social Economy, which will illustrate the development of the human race, how it has overcome the difficulties of civilization and solved problems in which society is involved.

Last is placed physical culture, in which man, his intelligence having reached the supreme point, is able to treat himself as an animal, realizing that his intellectual and moral constitutions require a sound physical body to prompt them to the proper performance of their function.

Education is the keynote of the Universal Exposition of 1904. Each department of the world's labor and development will be represented at St. Louis, classified and installed in such manner that all engaged or interested in such branch of activity may come and see, examine, study and go away advised. Each of the separate sections of the Exposition will be an equivalent of—or, rather, will be in actuality a comprehensive and most effective object lesson in—the line of industrial and social achievement and progress which its presents.

COWS TRAINED FOR THE TEST

Jerseys at the World's Fair Are Expected to Show That They Are Superior to All Other Breeds.

The herd of Jersey cows assembled at the World's Fair at St. Louis to represent the Jersey breed in the universal dairy test has been inspected and has been pronounced in perfect condition and ready to start upon their six months' grind on a day's notice.

W. R. Spann of the Burr Oak Jersey farm, Dallas, Tex., was the inspector, and he was thorough in his work. He passed a week on the Exposition grounds, and much of the time was spent in and around the Jersey cattle barn, and the condition of each individual of the herd of forty cows was definitely ascertained.

Never was more intelligent and careful treatment lavished on animals. No athlete was ever better trained for a contest requiring the development of speed, skill and endurance than has been this herd of Jerseys. When it is known that this herd is to compete with selected herds of Holsteins, Shorthorns, Brown Swiss and Devons, and the herd making the best score for the production of butter, milk and cheese is to establish the standing of the various breeds, the importance of the cows being in perfect condition may be understood.

For a solid year the Jerseys have been in constant training. Twenty-five cows will participate in the contest. Cows were selected from the best herds in the United States.

Dr. J. J. Richardson, president of the American Jersey Cattle Club, under whose auspices this entry is made, toured Europe and visited the famed Isle of Jersey, where the breed originated. He was seeking the best cows, but returned satisfied that Europe could show no cows that were better than those bred in America.

Though only twenty-five cows will participate in the test, forty cows were selected. They were assembled at Jerseyville, Ill., a year ago. This is near St. Louis, and the cattle have become acclimated. Last December they were removed to St. Louis. The cows are the property of individual members of the club and are loaned for the term of the test. C. T. Graves, a breeder at Maitland, Mo., was selected as the superintendent to have charge of the cattle, and he has been highly complimented by Dr. Richardson and Inspector Spann for the wonderfully fine condition in which he has placed the herd.

A series of model dairy barns have been built for the breeds competing in the test. The barns are octagonal in form, and are so arranged that the cows are in the center and a wide promenade permits visitors to pass around and view the cows as they stand in their stalls.

The milking and feeding are to be done in plain view of the public, and representatives of the various herds will at all times have access to all the barns to see that no sharp practices are indulged in.

The test not only consists in showing the amount of butter, milk and cheese produced, but the cost of production is taken into consideration. Every ounce of food given each cow is weighed and carefully recorded. When the cows are milked, the milk is conveyed to a model creamery in the Agricultural building, where it is tested and made into butter and cheese and where all records are carefully kept.

The Jersey cattle participated in a similar test at Chicago during the Columbian Exposition and carried off first honors.

Superintendent Graves is sanguine over the result of the present test. He says that the Jerseys have always demonstrated their superiority over all other breeds when placed in competition, and this time they will show to better advantage than ever. Not only is the Jersey milk richer in butter fat than the milk of any other breed, says Mr. Graves, but it can be produced at a less cost. The Jersey cows are the smallest of the standard breeds, and he asserts that they consume less feed. They assimilate their food, and it is converted into milk and butter and is not used in building up and sustaining a large carcass.

"We are going to make all other breeds take to the woods after this test," said Mr. Graves. "A few days ago I was testing some of our Jersey milk, and my hands were all sticky and greasy from the enormous amount of butter fat the milk contained. Mr. Von Heyne, who is in charge of the Holsteins, sent over a quantity of his milk for me to test. Of course, from a commercial standpoint, there was no comparison between the milk, but it was a pleasure to test his milk, for when I got through there was no grease on my hands. After this I will have a bucket of Holstein milk around handy to wash my hands in after testing our own rich Jersey milk."

The test begins May 16 and continues 120 days.

A farmer had a dream. He dreamed that he had raised a thousand bushels of wheat and was happy over the fact. Then he dreamed that he had sold it for $1 a bushel and his happiness was complete. But he dreamed now that he had sold it to a thousand different people, a bushel to each one, and that no one paid him and he was at sea. When he awoke it was broad daylight, and leaping out of bed he exclaimed to his wife: "Rebecca I have had a solemn warning and I know the meaning of it! I am going right to town and pay the printer the dollar I owe him on the paper."—Ex.

The McIntosh Times shows a slight disposition to jump out of the democratic harness since the nomination of a gold standard democrat. He says: "The latest from St. Louis indicates that Judge Parker will be nominated as the democratic candidate for the presidency with but little opposition, and the sequel may be that a large percentage of the independent element within that party will turn to Roosevelt as the least of two evils."

Louis Gonyea is rapidly gaining ground in his candidacy for the nomination for sheriff in this part of the county, which is proper as he has been in the crook watching business for a good many years, having been chief of police of Crookston for a good many years and deputy sheriff for the past four years, and has made a host of friends and very few enemies.

John Holten, of Fertile, is being urged by his friends to become a candidate for representative. He was defeated two years ago by a few votes at the primaries, which were run in from threshing crews near East Grand Forks, which will be a little more closely watched this time.

Andrew Johnson, of Meadows, is said to be a candidate for County Commissioner of his district.

Died of Superstition.

Princess Likelike, daughter of Kapaakea and mother of Princess Kaiulani, died on Feb. 3, 1887. She had not been seriously ill, but a lava flow from the great volcano Kilauea, in Hawaii, which occurred a few days before her death was to her mind a sure sign that a chieftainess was required by the goddess Pele, that heartless old deity suggested to the children of nature in the ages of volcanic terrors. So firm were Likelike's convictions that the wrath of the furious Pele had to be appeased by her death that she lost heart and never rallied. The night before her death there was a halo around the moon, and when she saw it she abandoned all hope and speedily died. A few years afterward Likiliku heard that he was being prayed to death by an enemy, aided by a sorcerer, a deadly method of warfare, so he simply lay down and died of despair.

He Almost Succeeded.

In a magazine article on Max von Pettenkofer, who has been called the founder of scientific hygiene and next to Humboldt the most popular of all German naturalists, Max Graber tells a story of the professor's absentmindedness. He lost a fortune in umbrellas, seldom bringing back what he had taken away. Once, however, he made a trip as far as England and was very proud of having actually succeeded in bringing back his umbrella to Germany. At Augsburg he stopped on business, but sent a telegram reading, "At 6 o'clock I return with my umbrella." He did return at 6 o'clock, but as he entered his house in Munich he saw to his dismay that he had no umbrella. He had left it at the telegraph station.

Sea Serpents.

Sea serpents date back to the days of Aristotle, who wrote: "The serpents of Libya are of enormous size. Navigators along the coast report having seen a great quantity of bones of oxen, which they believe without doubt to have been devoured by the serpents. These serpents pursued them (the seamen) when they left the shore and upset one of their triremes."

Olaus Magnus wrote in the middle ages of a sea serpent 200 feet long and 20 feet thick which haunted rocks and caves near the seacoast, the old writer adding, "And he puts up his head on high like a pillar and catcheth away men, and he devours them."

Imitative Animals.

Some animals have wonderful powers of imitation. Dogs brought up in the company of cats have been known to acquire the trick of licking the paws and then washing the face. When a cat has been taught to sit up for her food her kittens have been known to imitate her action. Darwin tells of a cat that was in the habit of putting her paw into the mouth of a narrow milk pitcher every time she got the chance and then licking the cream off her paw. Her kittens soon learned the same trick.

His Conscience.

Fierce as he was, the infamous Chief Justice Jeffreys did not always escape the sting of a repartee. He went to a country assize once where an old man with a great beard came to give evidence, but had not the good fortune to please the judge, so he quarreled with his beard and said, "If your conscience is as large as your beard you'll swear anything." The old blade was nettled and briskly returned; "My lord, if you go about measuring consciences by beards your lordship has none."

Why Is It?

"Did you ever notice," said an observant young man, "that men as a rule run down the heels of their shoes on the outside, while women run theirs down on the inside?" He was asked to explain the reason, but said he had no reason, as he only mentioned it as being singular, with no means of explanation.

Heading Them Off.

Mrs. Villadom—Why do you want to call on the Borems tonight? Mr. Villadom—Because if we don't they're certain to come over here. It will be easier to go home when we're tired of them than to ask them to go home.

Too Candid.

Miss Highup—I think Miss Globetrot ought to be ashamed of herself. She says she found the paintings of the old masters dreadfully stupid. Miss Wayup—So do many others. Miss Highup—Yes, but she says so.

A Hint to Headquarters.

Head of the Firm—I don't see how you are going to support a wife on your present salary. Smart Clerk—Neither do I, sir.—London Punch.

SAVED CHILD'S LIFE.

Remarkable Cure of Dropsy by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Sedgwick, Ark., July 11.—The case of W. S. Taylor's little son is looked upon by those interested in medical matters as one of the most wonderful on record. In this connection his father makes the following statement:

"Last September, my little boy had Dropsy; his feet and limbs were swollen to such an extent that he could not walk nor put his shoes on. The treatment that the doctors were giving him seemed to do him no good and two or three people said his days were short, even the doctors, two of the best in the country told me he would not get better. I stopped their medicine and at once sent for Dodd's Kidney Pills. I gave him three Pills a day, one morning, noon and night for eight days; at the end of the eighth day the swelling was all gone, but to give the medicine justice, I gave him eleven more Pills. I used thirty-five Pills in all and he was entirely cured. I consider your medicine saved my child's life. When the thirty-five Pills were given him, he could run, dance and sing, whereas before he was an invalid in his mother's arms from morning until night."

SUSPENDERS AND SUSPENSE

What Uncle Sam Needs the Former For as Stated by a Halting Speaker.

A certain congressman from a mountain district, says the New York Sun, is troubled with a weak, squeaky little voice, which sometimes fails in the midst of what might otherwise be an eloquent peroration.

Recently in addressing the house on a matter connected with tariff, he exclaimed:

"Why, tariffs are like a pair of suspenders, sometimes tight and sometimes loose; but Uncle Sam needs them just the same, to keep up his—"

Here the congressman's voice struck a high treble note, flared and stopped.

The house held its breath while he cleared his throat. The suspense, which seemed to last for fully a minute, was more painful to the auditors than to the orator, for everyone was wondering whether he would say "trousers" or "pants," and some were even hoping that he might say "pantaloons." Even "overalls" would be better than "pants," for "pants" is most unparliamentary.

But all fears were without foundation. He cleared his throat with the greatest care, and in a death-like stillness resumed his oration where he had dropped it: "to keep up his running expenses—"

The words which followed were lost forever in a gale of laughter.

A BACK LICK

Settled the Case with Her.

Many great discoveries have been made by accident and things better than gold mines have been found in this way, for example when even the accidental discovery that coffee is the real cause of one's sickness proves of most tremendous value because it locates the cause and the person has then a chance to get well.

"For over 25 years," says a Missouri woman, "I suffered untold agonies in my stomach and even the best physicians disagreed as to the cause without giving me any permanent help, different ones saying it was gastritis, indigestion, neuralgia, etc., so I dragged along from year to year, always half sick, until finally I gave up all hopes of ever being well again.

"When taking dinner with a friend one day she said she had a new drink which turned out to be Postum and I liked it so well I told her I thought I would stop coffee for awhile and use it, which I did.

"So for three months we had Postum in place of coffee without ever having one of my old spells but was always healthy and vigorous instead.

"Husband kept saying he was convinced it was coffee that caused those spells, but even then I wouldn't believe it until one day we got out of Postum and as we lived two miles from town I thought to use the coffee we had in the house.

"The result of a week's use of coffee again was that I had another terrible spell of agony and distress proving that it was the coffee and nothing else. That settled it and I said good bye to Coffee forever and since then Postum alone has been our hot mealtime drink.

"My friends all say I am looking worlds better and my complexion is much improved: All the other members of our family have been benefited, too, by Postum in place of the old drink, coffee." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Ten days' trial of Postum in place of coffee or tea is the wise thing for every coffee drinker. Such a trial tells the exact truth often where coffee is not suspected.

JUDGE PARKER IS NOMINATED

IS NAMED AS THE DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE FOR THE PRESIDENCY.

CHOICE OF CONVENTION ON THE FIRST BALLOT

Nomination Comes at the End of an All Night Session in Which Enthusiastic Demonstrations Greet Names of Favorites.

St. Louis, July 11.—Chief Justice Alton B. Parker, of the New York court of appeals, was nominated at about 15 minutes to six o'clock Saturday morning for president of the United States by the democratic national convention. But one roll call ensued, and so decisive was the result of that one that contrary states began to call for recognition, and the ballot finally resulted in a unanimous vote for the New York state man. The scene was dramatic in the extreme. Darkness had witnessed the gathering of the democratic hosts, while broad daylight, the sun paling the electric light, witnessed the close.

How the States Voted.

Following is the result of the roll call by states. P. stands for Parker, H. for Hearst, C. for Cockrell, W. for Wall, O. for Olney.

*The total of 658 votes received by Judge Parker did not constitute a nominating majority, but before the result was announced Idaho changed its six votes and West Virginia added three, giving 667, the necessary two-thirds majority.

All Night Session.

The convention was in session from eight o'clock Friday night until nearly six o'clock Saturday morning. In that time eight names were presented to the convention. Nominating and seconding speeches innumerable were made, and as dawn appeared it became necessary to limit the seconding speeches to four minutes each. An extension was made in the case of William Jennings Bryan, who, in one of the most dramatic situations ever witnessed in a political gathering, addressed the convention, and concluded by seconding the nomination of Senator Francis M. Cockrell, "the favorite son" candidate from Missouri. Mr. Bryan received the third great ovation accorded during the convention.

His speech was an impassioned appeal to the delegates to give the party a candidate who had voted for the democratic ticket in 1896 and 1900. He spoke on behalf of the Nebraska delegation, which he said had no candidate to present or favors to ask, but wanted a candidate whose nomination would not prove a triumph for one faction over another. He suggested Hearst, then Former Gov. Pattison, of Pennsylvania, and finally created a surprise in the convention by declaring for Senator Cockrell.

The Nominating Speeches.

Martin W. Littleton of New York placed Judge Parker in nomination. E. M. Delmas of California nominated Hearst. L. Irving Handy of Delaware proposed Judge Gray's name. The name of Gen. Miles was presented by David Overmeyer of Kansas. Permanent Chairman Clark relinquished the presiding officer's chair to Senator Bailey, of Texas, and placed the name of Senator Cockrell of Missouri in nomination.

After all the candidates except Wall had been proposed in eloquent nominating speeches and Nebraska was called on to express its choice, Bryan, speaking for his state delegation, gave way to Wisconsin and announced that Nebraska would take Wisconsin's turn. Mayor Rose of Milwaukee then placed Wall in nomination amid vociferous applause. Bryan, after many calls, mounted a chair and received an ovation. As the roll call of states proceeded second speeches were made.

Parker Named.

The great climax of the convention, the nomination of candidates for president, followed immediately upon the adoption of the platform. Chairman Clark proceeded to that order of business without delay. Alabama was called and yielded to New York. Mr. Littleton's speech nominating Judge Parker immediately pleased his audience and when he concluded pandemonium reigned. Flags waved, banners were held aloft and great as was the crowd delegates carrying the standards of the Parker states paraded through the convention, pushing, trampling, and fighting all who obstructed their progress. The scene was one of tremendous confusion. Then was enacted a scene that recalled an incident of the democratic convention in Chicago which nominated William Jennings Bryan eight years ago. Like Minnie Murray, the "woman in white," who from a gallery over the stage led cheering for Bryan, two girls in white sprang to the front of the platform and waved flowers and flags. The young women were Misses Adelae and Evelyn Heywood, of St. Louis. With renewed outbursts the immense throng cheered them until a picture of Judge Parker, on a 6 by 9-foot canvass detracted the thunderous cheering thousands. The cheering continued fully 25 minutes. Even then ten minutes elapsed before the chairman dared to call the next state. Arkansas yielded to Tennessee and Senator Carmack took the platform and seconded the nomination of Judge Parker. There was great confusion during the speech.

Saturday Afternoon Session.

St. Louis, July 11.—The convention met at two o'clock for afternoon session.

Mr. Hopkins, of Illinois, secured recognition for A. M. Lawrence, of that state, to read a telegram from the platform. The telegram was from William R. Hearst, thanking his friends for their support and indorsing the nominee. The reading was warmly applauded.

At 3:20 a motion to take a recess to 5:20 was agreed to without having taken action on vice presidential nomination.

Fifteen minutes before the opening of the convention for the afternoon session D. J. Campau, of Michigan; Col. Guffey, of Pennsylvania; Senator Hill and W. F. Sheehan, of New York, had practically agreed that Judson Harmon, of Ohio, should be supported for the vice presidential candidate. Mr. Campau denied that Mr. Harmon had declined the honor.

Parker Hears the News.

Esopus, N. Y., July 11.—The news of Judge Parker's nomination was given to him at 6:50 a. m. Saturday by the correspondent of the press, who found him clambering out of the water after his morning swim.

"Well, judge, you've got it," cried the reporter, as the athletic figure of the judge appeared over the bow of the barge from which he had been diving.

"Is that so," replied the judge, his ruddy face breaking into a cheery smile in which satisfaction was undisguised. He asked for details of the final vote, and displayed the liveliest interest in every fact and figure, at the same time refraining from the slightest comment.

When asked if he would say anything on the matter of his nomination, he said:

"No, I shall say nothing whatever upon the subject until I am formally notified of my nomination."

He climbed up the steep bank to his house, and cordially received the greeting of the other newspaper men, who had been waiting there, but again declined to make any comment upon the situation.

Judge Parker devoted the first leisure of the morning to reading the morning papers, devoting close attention to the platform. He refused to make any comment whatever upon the platform. Afterwards he started for a ride on horseback. The American flag was run up on the Rosemont flagstaff Saturday, and flags and bunting appear in increasing profusion on all the buildings in Esopus. A celebration, planned for Saturday night, was postponed until next week. By that time, it is expected, the Ulster county delegation will have returned from St. Louis.

Telegrams of congratulation have begun to arrive.

Cleveland Gratified.

Buzzard's Bay, Mass., July 11.—Former President Grover Cleveland, who is the guest here of Joseph Jefferson, was advised of the nomination of Judge Parker for president as soon as he awoke Saturday morning. Later Mr. Cleveland sent the following statement to the press:

"Mr. Cleveland declines to see any reporter or representative of the press, but sends the following word from his room to the press: I am in absolute ignorance of the action of the St. Louis convention except in so far as it has nominated Mr. Parker as presidential candidate. With this result I am abundantly gratified, and I hope that the remainder of the work of the convention will add to the encouraging prospects of democratic success. This is all I can possibly say at this time. I do not know when I shall have an opportunity to read the platform adopted or to learn of the entire proceedings of the convention. In any event it is absolutely certain that no further expression from me may be expected at present. I hope to be relieved of further importunity on this subject."

Tammany Will Support Ticket.

St. Louis, July 11.—To a correspondent Charles F. Murphy, of Tammany, said Saturday morning:

"No one need have any doubt where Tammany stands in this presidential canvass. It is solidly behind Alton B. Parker for president. There is never any doubt where Tammany Hall stands when a candidate is regularly nominated. Now that Judge Parker has received the nomination from the convention Tammany Hall is lined up solidly behind him."

MINNESOTA NEWS.

Death in a Launch.

Death and destruction was abroad on the waters of Lake Minnetonka when the gasoline launch Eleanor exploded, leaving in its wake Mrs. Geo. Upton, who died at the White House at Excelsior, and seven other occupants, who were seriously injured.

A party of eight, including Lewellyn Christian, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Merriman, their two children, Harry and Prudence, Mr. and Mrs. Upton and Mrs. W. P. Devereaux, were on board the boat, which is owned by Mr. Upton, when the explosion occurred.

The force of the explosion hurled far out into the lake Mrs. Devereaux and the Merriman children, while the other occupants were forced to jump into the lake to escape the flames.

Killed by Live Wire.

Aug. Brandt, a lineman in the employ of the street railway company, Minneapolis, picked up a live wire while working on new construction and received injuries from which he died a few hours later. Brandt, who had been with the company eight years, was working with a crew in 8th street, near Third avenue, SE.

He was stretching a new wire and was just about to draw it tight when he came in contact with the regular wire which was charged with 2,300 volts. The shock threw him to the ground and he was badly burned. He was taken to St. Barnabas hospital in the patrol wagon and died after four hours of intense suffering. He lived with his family at 1513 Fifth street south.

May be Delayed.

The legislature of 1905 may not meet in the new state capitol. It will depend on whether the Italian marble columns of the grand stairway arrive so that they may be put in place before next January.

"The work is progressing satisfactorily," said Chairman Channing Seabury, after the meeting of the capitol commission. "We hope to have the building completed so that it may be occupied when the next legislature meets. There is still a great deal of work to be done, and I am not sure that it can be completed by that time. Some of the contractors feel certain that, without accident, the building will be ready for occupancy in January.

A "Pike" at the Fair.

Right up to date and abreast with the times the Minnesota state fair has discarded the "Midway" and will come out this year with a full-fledged "Pike."

It is to be the genuine article, too, and any man who goes over the "Pike" at the next state fair will have seen everything worth while that might be seen at the Louisiana Purchase exposition in the similar department. In fact, many of the most attractive features of the "Pike" at St. Louis will be reproduced at the big Minnesota show.

The "Pike" will be west of the center of the grounds and will be in a great inclosure, large enough to contain a mile of pike and forty or fifty shows. Some of the shows will be free, while others will charge a 10-cent admission. A few will be 25-cent affairs and will be worth seeing.

Help for Fire Companies.

Cities and villages in Minnesota that have fire departments or fire relief associations will receive $91,197.51 as the 1903 apportionment of the 2 per cent tax paid by insurance companies on premiums on Minnesota business. This amount is reckoned on premiums amounting to $4,559,876.24 and is twice as much as was apportioned last year. The increase is due to a law passed by the last legislature providing that all of the 2 per cent tax, instead of half of it, be paid to cities and villages having fire departments.

State Forestry Board.

The state forestry board has set aside 20,000 acres of government land near Ely and it will probably be used as a game and fish preserve.

The tract is two-thirds covered by a small growth of timber. The rest is to be planted with seedling trees. There are a number of splendid lakes in the tract and they will probably be stocked with fish.

If the tract is used as a preserve it will be turned over to the state game and fish commission.

An Old Settler.

Simon Stevens, the first white man to settle upon the shores of Lake Minnetonka, is dead. He came to Minnesota in 1849 with his brother, the late Col. John H. Stevens, who built the first house in Minneapolis, and in 1855 he founded the town of Clearwater, where he died. He was the youngest of ten children, and he was aged 77 at the time of his death.

The World's Famous Catarrh Remedy Should Be in Every Home.

Pe-ru-na Contains No Narcotics.

One reason why Peruna has found permanent use in so many homes is that it contains no narcotics of any kind. Peruna is perfectly harmless. It can be used any length of time without acquiring the drug habit.

In Which the True Source of Physical Strength Was Well Set Forth.

Speaking of toads, with incidental reference to other salutary animal life, recalls a mot attributed to one of the justices of the supreme court, which has been giving the Washington gossips a good deal of amusement of late, says the New York Evening post. He was dining the other evening with the family of a distinguished ex-senator, who are noted for their extravagant advocacy of the vegetarian diet. Over the delicacies of the table, which included pretty nearly every form of edible plant life suited to the season, conversation turned upon the familiar theme; and the hostess, after trying in vain to convert her beef-reared guest by arguments based on the chemical constituents of various food, pleaded:

"But surely, Mr. Justice, you must admit that vegetarianism means strength and agility, when you remember that the rabbit, which feeds wholly on vegetables, can make such great leaps through the air from hiding place to hiding place."

"True, madam," answered the jurist, gravely, "but we must also remember that the minute creature for which naturalists claim the ability to jump more times its own length than any other, belongs to the class of pure carnivora."

A COUPE COMPLICATION

By BELLE MANIATES

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

IN the tender dusk of an evening in the early spring, Vivian Warne called informally upon her friend, Mrs. Allen. They chatted for a few moments and then Vivian resisted all urging to remain longer, pleading an order of menu cards to be delivered to Mrs. Van Altern, who lived on the other side of the city.

When she came out into the soft darkness she found the unstirred air full of a vapory mist so deadly to plumed millinery. She went back into the house, which was one in a block of stone fronts, to telephone for a carriage. Mrs. Allen regretted the absence of her coachman, but Vivian was accustomed to livery accommodations. Presently young Ned Allen came in and brought the information that the carriage was waiting at the door.

Vivian made a second exit, but when she went out to the curb the driver remained in his seat.

"Awful lot of agony for a cabby," she thought, as she opened the door of the coupe, "I wonder if he thinks I have a footman!"

"Drive to 1215 Fifty-fourth street," she commanded.

He made no response, but held his gaze strictly "front" with the fixedness of a Tommy Atkins on parade.

"Stephens & Co. are getting too swell for me," she reflected, as she seated herself and slammed the door. "What lovely appointments for a livery! I hope they haven't increased their rates along with their style."

She leaned luxuriously back in the corner of the coupe and dreamed of the time when the golden days of fame should waft her from an artist in embryo to a painter of portraits. She was called to reality by the halting of the carriage. Supposing she had reached her destination she opened the door and discovered that she was in an entirely different part of the city and that the coupe had stopped in front of the Atheneum club.

"I didn't suppose Stephens & Co. ever made one coupe answer for two calls," she reflected, as she closed the door, "but I don't mind having a longer ride."

In a moment a man came out of the club and stood where the light fell full upon his handsome face. Vivian uttered a little exclamation of dismay and sank farther into her corner. A year ago she had been engaged to Carton Leigh. They had first met at a house party and afterwards she had visited a friend who lived in his city. There had been some sort of a misunderstanding and he had declared that she alone was entirely to blame and must make the first advances toward reconciliation. Of course no self-respecting woman would do that, and she had therefore returned the ring that had once gleamed upon her third finger and had devoted herself to studio life and many a backward glance tinged with regret, but fortified by a steadfast resolve to never make any overture. She had heard recently from their mutual friend that he was to make this city his home, but she did not know that he had arrived.

She was seized with apprehension. Was he going to get in this coupe? She would not speak until he did. He opened the door and started to get in. She had turned her face away from him, but she felt his start of surprise.

Then she heard him say, in his well-bred, modulated tones:

"I beg your pardon!"

There! He had spoken first, and with a little air of triumph she faced him, the light in front of the club shining full upon her face as it had on his a moment before.

"You! Vivian!" he said, in a voice that thrilled old memories and feelings. In an instant he was seated beside her, the door had slammed shut and they were away.

"This is too good to be true," he said, joyfully.

"I ordered a carriage from the livery," she said, stiffly, "and they evidently thought it would answer for your order, too."

"Oh, that was the way of it," he said. "Well, I am glad of the mistake, but, are you in much of a hurry? If not, I am going to ask a favor of you. It is very important that I see a man on business who leaves the central depot at 7:30, and there is just time to make it."

"Oh, certainly," she answered, coldly. "It makes no difference."

"It makes no difference, you mean, whether you ride one block or a hundred. Are you as indifferent as that, Vivian?"

She made no response. Presently he broke the silence.

"Did you know that I was living here, in this city, now, Vivian?"

"No; why did you move here?"

"Well, you know my father has more to say about the business than I, and when he decided to move here I could not tell him that it would be very distasteful to Vivian Warne. I was afraid it would not be a business-like consideration to him."

She resented his sarcasm, and he interrupted another silence:

"I have been here a week, Vivian, and have walked the thoroughfares for a glimpse of you."

They had reached the depot now and he stepped from the coupe, saying he would be back directly. She was conscious, even while she fought against it, of a little feeling of gladness that he was going to return in her carriage instead of ordering another. She leaned forward and watched him as he walked away, so straight and stalwart. His voice and presence had all their own characteristics, and, yes, she must admit it—she loved him! And he had spoken first and was very conciliatory. He came back in a few moments, said something she did not hear to the driver, and was once more by her side.

"I am afraid I did not accomplish much in a business way," he said, in tones boyishly buoyant. "I was so distracted lest you, the carriage and driver should vanish while I was away."

He chatted on for a few moments. Suddenly looking out of the window Vivian noticed that they were driving neither in the direction of his club nor her destination.

"This driver is so stupid!" she exclaimed. "He must have forgotten the address I gave him."

"Probably he didn't understand it," he suggested. "I find he doesn't understand a word of English. He speaks in German."

"Oh, then won't you tell him that I want to go to 1215 Fifty-fourth street?

"To Mrs. Van Altern's?" he asked.

"How did you know?"

"I am invited there to dinner to-morrow night. She is a friend of our family."

"I am going to take the place cards to her now."

"And are you going to the dinner?" he asked, joyfully.

"Yes, but where is the driver going?"

"Well," he said, laughing, "don't blame him. The fact is I told him to drive anywhere. Vivian," in a change of tone, "I have not been happy this year. Have you?"

"No!" she half whispered.

"See here, dearest, it was a stupid quarrel—quarrels generally are. Let's rub it off the slate and,—Vivian, do you love me?"

It was an hour later when Mrs. Van Altern received her cards and a call from her two friends. At dinner the next night Vivian found herself most excellently assigned at the table—Carton at her right hand and an extremely deaf man at her left. When the conversation generally became quite animated Vivian could not forbear the little arrow:

"After all," she said, looking roguishly at him, "I had my own way, and that is most precious to a woman."

"How did you have your own way?"

"Why, you said you would never make up unless I made the first advances. And I didn't. I never would!"

"Is that so?" he laughed tauntingly. "Well, Miss Vivian Warne, let me tell you that you are certainly mistaken. You certainly did make the first advance, and a most decided one."

"I don't know what you mean," she said, indignantly. "You spoke first!"

"Yes, I spoke first, but not until you had acted in such a way as to justify me in so doing."

"You are mistaken," she said, with rising anger.

"Don't get angry, Vivian—not until I tell you something that I am going to on the way home to-night."

When Vivian left Mrs. Van Altern's with Carton for an escort a coupe was in waiting at the door and she recognized the driver as the same they had had on the previous evening.

"Have you engaged this driver for the season?" she asked, laughingly, when they were seated within.

"Yes," he replied, slipping his arm about her. "I brought him with me from home. He is a faithful fellow and a careful driver."

"What!" she cried. "This is not—"

"My private carriage," he answered. "Yours if you want it!"

"But I don't understand," she said, perplexedly. "I telephoned from Mrs. Allen's for a carriage and this was the one that came."

"No," he explained. "My father and I live next door to Mrs. Allen's, and I sent the man up home from the city to bring father to the club. I am not very proficient in speaking the German language, and I presume the man simply understood that he was to call at the house and then come for me. He was perfectly satisfied when you got in, and I don't blame him, but poor father had to take an electric car. So, you see, after appropriating my carriage and calling for me at the club, I thought—"

"Oh, Carton," she said, "don't! I'll throw up both hands, but I am glad it happened and it was awfully sweet in you not to tell me last night."

Her Point of View.

He—Miss Longleigh's dresses always look so neat; don't you think so?

She—Yes; for one who has so little to dress on.

He—Why, I thought she was quite wealthy?

She—So she is—but she's so awfully thin.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Primary Election Law will be extended to include state officers at the next session of the legislature so as to give the people an opportunity to have a say about the nomination of state officers, as it is getting to be about time to draw a line on the man with the biggest barrel.

This has been a busy summer for the officials of the Crookston Land Office, but notwithstanding they were required to be at Thief River Falls from June 20th to July 14th the business of the land office has been conducted without a hitch, which is certainly a credit to the ability and efficiency of the officials.

If some of our good socialistic friends will explain to us what we are going to do with the drones in the hive in the event of their becoming rulers of this country, it would at least satisfy some of the hard working people, who sometimes envies the man that has nothing to do, but is always waiting for something to turn up.

James A. Martin, of St Cloud, who conducted Judge Collins' campaign is quoted as saying: "'Oh, I am taking my medicine all right,' said Mr. Martin laughing, 'but a fellow will growl sometimes when they try to rub it in. Neither Judge Collins nor myself have any regrets over this campaign. Our friends played square and that counts for much, even if we did lose.'" After the nomination of R. C. Dunn Mr. Martin moved to make it unanimous, notwithstanding that he knew what it meant to himself and the friends of Judge Collins, and by doing so he showed to the people of this state that he was a Republican, and will do much to soften the bitter feelings of those who fought and lost.

The primary election campaign is now on and the candidates for office are good fellows to the editors. That is to say some of them will give you a friendly tap on the shoulder and say "you may send me your paper." In looking over our books the past week we discovered some crossed names that were prominent candidates for office two yeare ago, and on further investigation we found that they were indebted to us for subscription. They took the paper through the campaingn and after receiving it three or four months had the postmaster notify us to stop the d—— thing, and we stopped it, as that is our rule, and marked opposite their names the amount due on subscription, and it is still due, and some of the same fellows are bobbing up in this campaign expecting support from their friends and a good send off in their party papers, but they had better square up some of the old accounts before beginning a new campaign.

DON'T LIKE STEENERSON.

The Crookston Times is busy booming Billy Rowe for congress on the democratic ticket these days, but Billy is wise and has come out in an announcement denying that he will be a cadidate. The Times don't like Steenerson a little bit, hence this booming of Rowe. -Fertile Journal.

The Times is supposed to be a republican paper, but they may want to train up a little this year so as to be prepared for the big avent two years hence.

If you sit down and wait for the office to seek the man you will hatch out a big brood of young politicians, before the office finds you.

Clearwater county politicans are wakeing up and going right after them offices good and hard. There are five candidates in the field for the nomination for sheriff with a good prospect of more to be heard from.

Baptism For the Dead.

One device which holds the people to the Mormon church is the curious doctrine of baptism for the dead. It is believed that the living may by being baptized save their relatives who have gone before. A man goes to the temple and is solemnly immersed for his grandfather, who died out of the faith. The grandfather's name is duly entered in the book of records, the grandson contributes a fee and comes the next day to be baptized for his grandmother and so on. As the result of this faith the Mormons have delved more deeply into their genealogy perhaps than any other class of Americans. I know of several cases in which Mormons have gone to England on purpose to trace out their genealogical tree, bringing back long lists of their ancestors, in some cases going back to the time of William the Conqueror. On their return to Utah they begin the process of baptism—a dip for each ancestor.—Ray Stannard Baker in Century.

"Sightseer's Headache."

"Academy" or "sightseer's" headache is one of the numerous ills of modern civilization. According to observations of Mr. Simeon Snell, described in the Loudon Hospital, there is reason to attribute it in part at least to strain on the muscles that turn the eyeballs upward. A lady who found no inconvenience in visiting the theater when she sat in the dress circle always suffered from severe headache when she sat in the orchestra, where she had to look up. The same effect is produced in picture galleries, especially in looking at pictures hung above the line. Cyclists who lean over the handle bars and turn their eyes up to look ahead have the same trouble, and so do compositors and people in many other occupations requiring continued use of the elevator muscles. The eyeballs move from side to side with less strain and discomfort than up and down.

Our Coast Guards.

There are 9,000 burning lights and signals stretched along the American coasts, forming a perfect link, so that the navigator never need be beyond sight of one of the beacons. One thousand of these are located on the Atlantic coast, 1,500 are scattered along the rivers and inland waterways, 500 on the great lakes and 200 on the Pacific coast. Of the grand total, including lighthouses of different classes, buoys, beacons and danger signals, 3,000 are lighted, giving forth their warnings at nighttime. Of these a score or more throw a beam of 100,000 candle power. To maintain the lighthouse service a corps of over 4,000 men is constantly employed and a fleet of more than fifty vessels. No service in the world exceeds our own in completeness and efficiency.

"Pot Wallopers."

In certain districts of England formerly when an owner parted almost entirely with other rights to a house he would reserve the right of boiling his pot on the fire. This secured to him the right of voting and, what was of more importance, the position of being a freeholder. At Taunton, for example, the voters were called "pot wallopers" because they had the rights to "wallop," or boil, their pots at the fire in their freehold houses. Sometimes when a person parted with a long lease, but not with the freehold of a house, it was expressly stipulated that he should keep the right to boil his pot on the fire.

Where Horsewhips Are Prohibited.

There is a notable law in force in most of the large Russian towns concerning horses that deserves special mention. Among the curious things that arrest the attention on arriving in Moscow is the entire absence of whips among drivers of cabs, carriages and all sorts of vehicles. There is a law prohibiting their use. There is not a single whip in use in Moscow. The excellent condition of the horses attests the benefit of this humane law. Nothing can exceed the beauty of the sleek and well groomed horses used in the carriages of Moscow.

A Symptom.

Tomdix—What reason have you for thinking you have hay fever? Hojnx—Because every time I meet a grass widow I sneeze.—Chicago Journal.

Fortune Spent on Buttons.

Forty thousand pounds was paid by Louis XIV. for one set of buttons for a waistcoat. This monarch had a positive passion for buttons, and in the year 1685 he spent a very large amount on this hobby. Among the items of his expenditure two are worthy of note—August, 1685, two diamond buttons, 67,866 francs; seventy-five diamond buttons, 580,703 francs. It is estimated that during his lifetime he spent £1,000,000 on buttons alone, and that at a time when the empire of France was in a state of bankruptcy.

Didn't Show Them.

"He wears his heart on his sleeve," asserts the fair damsel, who is telling about the shallow youth.

"Yes; I saw that long ago. That isn't what puzzles me about him," replies the more practical maiden.

"What else about him interests you?"

"I can't discover where he keeps his brains."—St. Louis Republic.

Sorry.

Mrs. Colls—And when you told him I was married, did he seem to be sorry? Friend—Oh, yes; he said so quite frankly. Mrs. Colls—Did he really? Friend—Yes; indeed, he said he was extremely sorry, although he didn't know the man personally.

The Mean Thing.

"My dear," remarked Mr. Jones to his wife as he gathered up his mail on the first of the month, "you have missed your vocation. You should have been a member of the state legislature."

"What do you mean by that?" asked his innocent wife.

"You are so indefatigable in introducing bills," replied Jones.—Cincinnati Tribune.

An Easy Conundrum.

Jokey—Here is a conundrum for you: What's the difference between a man and his wife. Henpeck—None, unless the man is so unwise as to have an opinion of his own.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Encouragement.

She—Yes, I just love dogs! He—Then I'd like to be a dog. She—Never mind; you'll grow.—Harvard Lampoon.

Men have a more acute sense of smell than women.

Shifting Eyes.

No matter of what color, beware of the eyes that have no desire to look you full in the face. There is something wrong behind the shifting, uneasy glance, and the owner of such optics will prove to be unworthy of trust. Read well the signs, for if actions speak louder than words eyes speak even louder than actions, and to be forewarned is to be forearmed.

Reversing the Adage.

They found the bride in tears.

"I cook pies and things that are something fierce, but George will not eat them," she sobbed miserably.

"Ah, you must first make him love you. The way to a man's stomach is through his heart." they said, for they were worldly wise.—Puck.

Be Cheerful.

You find yourself refreshed by the presence of cheerful people; why not make earnest efforts to confer that pleasure on others? You will find that half the battle is gained if you will never allow yourself to say anything gloomy.

A Bird Friendship.

The rector of Woolstone, Mr. Gilbert Coventry, told me of a wild rock dove which one of his stable boys had reared from the nest. It slept in the open, however, and had full liberty. Soon the good things on the rector's table attracted it, and it would appear through the open window at mealtimes, take hot soup with much zest and even sip sherry from a wineglass. At night it often slipped in and slept in the rector's bed on its back under the coverlet. One Sunday morning during the reading of the lesson the dove flew swiftly through an open window into the church and settled on the rector's head. Broad smiles spread over the faces of the elders and audible titters came from the youngsters. A gentle touch sent the bird down to the edge of the clerk's desk below, where it sat undisturbed.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Christmas In the West.

Deadshot Dick—Any fun in B'ar Creek on Christmas, Bill?

Grizzly Bill—Waal, we had a party big Christmas tree.

Deadshot Dick—Anything of much account hangin' on it?

Grizzly Bill—Three hoss thieves and two Chinymen.

Suitable Gifts For Women.

Silver or silver and glass toilet articles are always acceptable to women. Some of them are brush, comb, powder box, cold cream jar, buttonhook, curling iron, glove stretcher, atomizer, perfume jar, vaseline holder and hairpin case.

An Anatomical Tale.

Dinwit—Say, our backbones are like serial stories, aren't they?

Thinwit—Prove it?

Dinwit—Continued in our 'neeks.—Harvard Lampoon.

No man ever acknowledges a mistake so quickly as when he puts the lighted end of a cigar in his mouth.

His Plaster.

Brannigan—The doctor told me to get a porous plasther for me stomach.

Druggist—Yes, sir. What sort do you want?

Brannigan—'Tis little I care what sort it is so long as 'tis aisily digested.—Catholic Standard and Times.

Trouble over the possession of realestate in Winsor Township has lead up to an assault and battery case, hetween a man? and woman, in which axes grub hoes and other farming utensils were used. We are of the opinion that an American jury would decide with the lady, especialy when she was attacted at her own home.

The Indian pow-wow, at Winsor on sunday afternoon was not as well attended as the one on June 19th, but there was a fairly good sized crowed present. The Indians danced during the entire afternoon and the white people in the evening on the large platform built for the purpose. Rain stopped the danceing at 12 o'clock and the dancers took flight for shelter and supper. Music was furnished by Olive Nelson string hand and and was of the best quality.

FROM MEADOWS.

Haying has just commcned.

Miss Lowella Shneider, who has been visiting the last two weeks at Mrs. H. D. Camphell's retuned home wednesday.

A fiew from here attended the Indian celebration, at Winsor. report a pleasent time.

Mrs. H. D. Camphell is doing business at Bagley this week.

The drive on the sandy is jnst into Red Lake and the men are going to point's north east of lower Red Lake and build camps for next winters logging.

Wm. Bruekman cleared $1000, on his crop last year, with a prospect of more this year. The meadows is the PLACE to farm.

Greenwood has had a few good road masters, hut none so "shrud" as the present one, who allows each farmer to work along his own land, provding each one does three or four days of extra road work.

John Shulz Hans Larson & Co. are at the present time digging a ditch to drain a lake, into the Clearwater, which no one is allowed to cross (except the Irish), and expects to see golden grain growing, where once was the home of the frogs and toads.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for the nomination of Sheriff of Polk County at the coming primary election. I earnestly solicit the support of my friends, and if nominated and elected will faithfully discharge the duties of the said office.

LOUIS GONYEA.

"Gosh" The Fisher Bulietine is under new managment. "Gosh" ay guess we better elect Gunder to the legislature once more so he can mate it a legal publication. More about this later.

When Simons and Krostue became members of the drainage committee in the last legislature their constituents expected that they were going to hear of something heing done, hut they got it where the chicken got the ax, for it appears that they worked to get on the committee for private gain instead of the interests of the people who was mislead in sending them there.

Royal Ridicule.

Queen Anne of England and her husband George, prince of Denmark, had great similarity of taste. The two subjects that interested them most were horses and dinner. A Jacobite allusion to these pardonable weaknesses runs thus:

There's Mary the doughter, there's Willy the cheater,
There's Geordie the drinker, there's Annie the eater.

That King George II. of England was not popular with his subjects is evident from the following epigram, which was pubilshed in London on the death of Queen Caroline:

O cruel death! Why hast thou been unkind
To take our queen and leave our king behind?

Natural Law.

The reputation of Mr. George Washington Jones for honesty had been slightly tarnished for some years, but his son Erastus was not supposed to know it.

"Cur's how cold contracts t'ings," Mr. Jones remarked thoughtfully one evening. "Now dere's Maximilian Smith's wood pile for a case. 'Pears like dat wood pile is shrinking steady since dis las' col' spell set in."

"Seems as if our pile behind de stove was getting bigger, paw," hazarded Erastus, gazing at his parent for explanation of this phenomenon.

"Course it am, chile," said Mr. Jones calmly, "'cause de room is hot an' heat expands t'ings. 'Pears like yo' gwine to school don' put much wisdom into dat head of yours."

A Chinese Dog Story.

The following dog story is a favorite one in China:

"There was a Chinaman who had three dogs. When he came home one evening he found them asleep on his couch of teakwood and marble, whipped them and drove them forth.

"The next night when he came home the dogs were lying on the floor. But he placed his hand on the couch and found it warm from their bodies; therefore he gave them another whipping.

"The third night, returning earlier than usual, he found the dogs sitting before the couch, blowing on it to cool it."

Almost Impossible.

Jack—Why wouldn't she marry you? She loves you to distraction. I know it, because she told me so. George—She insisted on my proving that I am not already married, because she says there is a great deal of bigamy nowadays. Well, it is easy enough to prove that one is married, but how the dickens am I going to prove that I am not?
